Payne with his counsel appeared in court with his accustomed firmness. At the same time came Miss Geiger, dressed in rich black silk of the latest style and pat-tern, and wearing a bonnet of elegant de-sign, accompanied by her sister and sister-in-law from Hebron, O., and her counsel, with whom she chatted quite freely. Twelve men from the regular panel of jurymen were called into the jury box, and in about two hours a jury was obtained to try the case. As the keeper of the public morals Editor Hyde was at his best, although there are numerous indications that he found it no small task to keep his friends pegging away at the Ten Commandments and remember-ing to love their own wives better than those of their neighbors. A Mr. Thompson, who kept a grocery, grog shop and gambling house, was an especial thorn in the side of

After the statements of the case court ad-journed till 9 o'clock this morning, when Miss Geiger took the witness stand and identified some thirty letters received from the defendant, after which the letters were put in evidence and the reading of the same begun, which consumed the entire forenoon. They were full of endearing terms and created much mirth. One day when business was a little dull. Mr. Thompson closed up his place and went

Mr. Thompson closed up his place and went to attend a revival meeting that was in pro-gress up near Pigeon creek. When he came back he found that some one had gained an entrance and had cleaned out the place. All traces of his stock of groceries, both wet and dry, and his apparatus for keeping the money in circulation, had disappeared. The proprietor of the place evidently had a large suspicion that Editor Hyde was in some way responsible for this master stroke at purifying the public morals, and he made numerous threats about what he would do if reparation were not forthcoming at once. S. Adler, late criminal judge of Baltimore, but now of Council Bluffs, is to be married this evening at the Neumayer hotel to Miss Eliza Seibert of Crete, Neb. The ceremouy will be performed at 7 p. m. by Rev. Muhlenbrock of the German Lutheran church. The story of their courtship is a short but rather interesting one. Judge Adler is a hale and hearty gentleman of 72 summers, while his bride is only 33. He has long wished for the delights of married life, and in Miss Seibert he found a lady whose tastes coincided with his own. They have been acquainted only four days, having met last week while she was visiting with her married this evening at the Neumayer hotel

The sheriff late this evening took John-to allow to work on and have slight hop-s of recovering the property. An order was issued by the district court today for the arrest of Alderman H. H. Johnson. Johnson was administrator of the estate of Abel Moe. Several months ago Moe's widow secured an order requiring Johnson to make a report to the court. Johnson has neglected to comply with the order, and today the sheriff was directed to attach his body and bring it into couff to show cause why he should not be pun-ished for contempt. The sheriff late this evening took John-son into custody. had kept a place where drunkenness and gambling on the Sabbath day were notorious. They have confessed their sin and DES MOINES, April 27.-(Special Tele-gram.)-It is very probable that the action offered to get down on their knees if we will gram.)-It is very probable that the action of the democratic conference this week in declaring against the free coinage of silver does not end the matter so far as the demo-ratic party in Iowa is concerned. The silver people are dissatisfied and are mak-ing arrangements to call a conference of silver democratic alone to meet here early in May. The object will be to make ar-rangements for carrying the county con-ventions so as to sweep the state conven-tion in favor of silver; also to place the state organization of the party in the hands of "new men"-sound silver democratis-as one of them said to a reporter. There is likely to be some fun during the summer in the democratic ranks. Thompson's threat to bring in the Sloux Indians did not alarm him, for at the close of a philippic that must have wrung Thompson's soul, if it was subject to being wrung, he suggested that he follow the rest of his friends and go out to the gold diggings, where he might get killed and do his fellow men a good turn. History does not relate whether the advice was taken, but Thompson's name The paper contains many illusions to the gold fever which was setting the tide of imnigration westward, and one item conveys he information that some real estate man

He did not have any trouble so serious as having to put gumless stamps on his letters, but the postmasters along the route would persist in an unpleas-ant habit of theirs, stealing the money that the letters contained. One Saturday he re-ceived three letters saying: "Enclosed find $1.50 for a year's subscription to your great and good paper," but there was no money enclosed. He suggested that wherever possi-ble money should be sent from friends abroad by private convergence and breathed a force
