

OUR YOUTH'S DEPARTMENT. It has lately been said that this is the children's age. Great attention is paid to their physical and mental development.

It has lately been said that this is the children's age. Great attention is paid to their physical and mental development. Societies have been formed for a critical analysis of their periods of growth, and its relation to development of brain power.

am going to marry a man named Dently, and then I'm going to name my little girl Eva, and then her name will be evidently. Since that time "evidently" has been a household word.

It has been said that "poets are born, not made," and the following couplets will prove the truth of that assertion. Little Gertrude Schermerhorn was four years old when she would take any book that she could get and open and compose these little jingles:

The donkey works, He runs and jerks, The steamboat flies away, The children go to play, 'Thou hast taken my sheep away; Bring it back again, I pray!

John and Jay went out to play All upon a summer day, All upon a summer day, John and Jay were very glad 'Cause they wanted to go to heaven so bad.

Seven o'clock we'll go to sleep, Then we'll all wake up to keep, Little children going down street, Going down to get some meat, Little children, do you dare?

I am up stairs, as you can see; Grandpa, you must wait for me, Now they are sleeping in the house, For grandma is afraid of a mouse.

The end of the world is nigh; I shall be glad to go on high, An Acrotic, Those who have traveled in the Rockies may remember the beautiful scenery of the Price River canon, and the huge pillars, forming the "Castle Gate," that guards the entrance to that canon.

The following poem, having heard that once upon a time these mountains lay submerged under the great ocean, conceived the fancy that the "Castle Gate" at that time guarded the sea king's palace.

Every ship that did hear, was forced to draw near, but only to dash on the rocks, Grandpa was a sailor, and he sailed to the sea, to her "Castle Gate," returning.

Waiting there, there, seen a lover so fair, for whom he looked, waiting there, That "Castle Gate" could strange tales relate, if speech to its stones were granted; Even yet it seems as if a great event, as if still by those scenes "twere haunted."
