Murat was undoubtedly an excellent cavalry officer, but he had too much swagger, which spoils many a good soldier. Lacalle, oo, was a very dashing leader, but he ruined himself with wine and folly. Now f. It is true that I never rose to be more than partner in it, for what could I possibly do a chief of brigade, but then, as every one without his observing me? I hinted at it, knows, no one had a chance of rising to the therefore, and then by degrees I spoke more top unless he had the good fortune to be with the emperor in his early campaigns. Except Lasaile and Lobau and Drouet, I can hardly remember any one of the generals who had not already made his name before who had not already made his name before the Egyptian business. Even I, with all my brilliant qualities, could only attain the head of my brigade, and also the special small grating, but though I tapped and probed, they all appeared to be very thick and solid. The door was of iron, shutting with a spring lock, and provided with a small grating, through which a warder looked medal of honor, which I received from the emperor himself, and which I keep at home in a leather pouch. But though I never enough for my wants, for when had I as rose higher than this, my qualities were much during those twelve years spent in very well known by those who had served with me, and also by the English. After they had captured me in the way which I had dreadful nightmares, in which I fancied lescribed to you the other night, they kept a very good guard over me at Oporto, and I promise you that they did not give such a formidable opponent a chance of slipping through their fingers. It was on the 10th of August that I was escorted on board the transport which was to take us to England, and behold me before the end of the month in the great prison which had been built for us at Dartmoor! In the first place, I had so much confidence in myself that I was quite convinced that I could escape. On the other hand, it would never the form that the second in the small income of my mother. do for a man like me to be outshone by the bourgeois society of an English country town, or to be without the means of showing courresies and attentions to those ladies whom I should attract. It was for there reasons that I oreferred to be buried in the dreadful prison of Dartmoor. I wish now to tell you of my adventures in England, and of how far Milor Wellington's words were true when he said that his king would hold me.

And first of all I may say that if it were not that I have set off to tell you about what

And then we would have our little mutinies, too, and up would come the infantry and the guns from Plymouth and that would set us yelling "Vive l'Em-pereur" once more, as though we wished them to hear us in Paris. We had lively

It was not a very promising point of escape Meunier, from Rheims, who had given information of some plot to escape. Well, that night, owing to some form or other which had to be gone through, they did not take him out from among the other prisoners, and though he wept and screamed and groveled upon the ground they left him there among the comrades whom he had betrayed. That night there was a trial with a whispered accusation and a whispered defense, a gagged prisoner and a judge whom none could see. In the morning when they came for their man with papers for his re-lease there was not as much of him left as you could put upon your thumb nail. They were ingenious people, these prisoners, and they had their own way of managing.

We officers, however, lived in a separate wing and a very singular group of people we were. They had left us our uniforms, so that there was hardly a corps which had served under Victor or Massena or Ney which was not represented there, and some had been there from the time when Junot was beaten at Vimeria. We had chasseurs their green tunics, and hussars, like myself, and blue coated dragoons and white fronted iancers and voltigeurs and grenadiers and men of the artillery and engineers. But the greater part were naval officers, for the English had had the better of us upon the seas. I could never understand this until I journeyed myself from Oporto to Plymouth, when I lay for seven days upon my back, and could not have stirred had I seen the eagle of the regiment carried before my eyes. It was in pedfidlous weather like this that Nelson took advantage of us.

I had no soner got into Dartmoor than I began to plan to get out again, and you can readily believe that with wits sharpened by twelve years of warfare, it was not very long before I saw my way. You must know, in the first place, that I had a very great advantage in having some knowledge of the English language.

knowledge of the English language. I learned it during the months that I spent before Danzig, from Adjutant Obriant of the regiment Irlandais, who was sprung from the ancient kings of the country. I was quickly able to speak it with some facility, for I do not take long to master any-thing to which I set my mind. In three months I could not only express my mean-ing, but I could use the idioms of the peo-ple. It was Obriant who taught me to say "Be jabers," just as we might say "Ma fol," and also "The curse of Crummle!" which means "ventre blue!" Many a time I have seen the English smile with pleasure when they have heard me speak so much like one

I pictured to myself my Third of Hussars valting fast outside that window with kettledrums and standards and leopard skin shabraques all complete. Then I would work like a madman, until my iron was crusted with my blood, as if with rust. So now I turned my attention to that stone, and I picked and picked with the sharpened end of my bar until I had worked out the mortar all round. You understand, of course, that during the day I replaced everything in its position, and that the warder was never permitted to see a speck upon the floor. At the end of three weeks I had separated the stone and had the rapture of drawing it through and seeing a hole left with ten stars shining through it, where there had been but four before. All was ready for us now, and I replaced the stone, smearing the edges of it round with a little fat and sout, so as to hide the cracks where the mortar should have been. In three nights the moon would be gone, and that stemed the best time for our attempt.

CATHOLIC KNIGHTS AT WORK

National Council of the Order Begins Its Session in Earnest,

ATTENDED MASS AT THE CATHEDRAL

After Divine Service the Delegates Listened to Addresses from President Shrine and Delegate Harrington-Committees for the Year Appointed.

The national council of the Catholic Knights of America was formally called to order at Chambers' academy yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Preceding the opening of the convention yesterday the delegates and visitors attended a pentificial high mass at St. Philomena's cathedral. Archbishop Gross of Oreand visiting clergy. The delegates and visitors moved in procession to the cathedral from the Delione botel at 9 o'clock. John B. Furay was the marshal, assisted by M. C. Harrington. The First Infantry band led the lines, followed in order by the uniform rank, supreme officers, delegates, visiting Knights and local Knights. The line of march was south from the Delione on Fourteenth to Farnam, east to Eleventh, south to Harney, east to the cathedral. Return-West on Harney to Eleventh, north to Douglas, west to hall at Seventeenth and Douglas. At noon they returned to the hotel and after partaking of dinner assembled for busi-

President Shrine made a brief address, reviewing the work of the past year and expressing hopes for still greater achievements. He was glad to see such a large at-tendance and believed the Omaha conference would be prolific of great results.

WELCOMED TO NEBRASKA. M. C. Harrington of North Platte delivered the following address of welcome:
"As I am not a minister of the gospel, whose sublimest of all vocations is to elowhose sublimest of all vocations is to elo-quently teach the erring man how to live well and die well, nor an attorney at the bar of justice, who through his art of or-atory often saves a guilty client; as I belong not to these honorable professions, but being a peaceful pursuer of mercantile life, you are deceived if you expect any flights of the magic art from me. Nevertheless, as the wise man tells us, 'out of the fullness of the heart the mouth speaketh,' out of the fullness of my emotional heart I assure you, gentlemen, that I rejoice in the oppor-tunity afforded me of tendering to you in the name of the Catholic Knights of Ne-braska a heartfelt welcome to this metropolitan city of this central state of the American union. It was one of the very strangest places in the whole world, for there, in the middle of that great desolate waste, were hered together 7,000 or 8,000 men—warriors, you understand, men of experience and courage. Around there were a double wall, and a ditch, and warders and so'dlers, but, my faith! you could not coop men like that up like rabbits in a hutch! They would escape by twos and tens and twenties, and then the cannon would boom, and the search parties run, and we, who were left behind, would laugh and dance and shout "Vive l'Empereur," until the Leaves C., ST. "Gentlemen, I shall not trespass on your valuable time, which might be better occupied than spent in listening to me in recall-ing to your minds the chivalric, historical deeds of our ancestors. But when we are accused by 'would-be' patriots of disloyalty to our beloved country we are cut to the quick with their keen-edged calumny in the face of unbiased history, in which is in-delibly recorded the heroic deeds of men of our creed, men who never played coward in the rear, but rushed to action in the until the hour came when the iron shook front in the day of jeopardy and gave their and then, with one good wrench, it came off blood and treasure in behalf of their native or adopted country. We, Catholic Knights, ward freedom.
You will ask me what better off I was proud of the fact that we are the sons of since, as I have said, a child could not have patriotic sires. We are also proud of the fitted through the opening. I will tell you. I had gained two things—a tool and a exteem by the church and the civilian wrapon. With the one I might loosen the world, a society that requires each stone which flanked the window. With the and all of its members to put the

You behold the evidence of that enterprise stamped upon this beautiful young city, a city just now thirty-eight years old or six years my own senior, though I am yet a young man. The citizens of this city and state join with us Catholic Knights in making the stay of the members of this order pleasant and agree-able, that they may bear with them to their nomes many pleasant memories of their so-journ with us in the Gate City of the west." In response the supreme president in substance voiced his gratitude at the sentiment expressed by Mr. Harrington and thanked him in behalf of the delegates.

The committee on credentials reported favorably on the list of delegates published. yesterday in The Bee.

The convention, after instructing the suppreme officers to appoint standing committees for the ensuing year, adjourned until tomor-row morning at 9:30 o'clock.
