letion Taken Last Night on Protests Against Granting of Liquor Licenses. The city council met in special session last evening to hear testimony in eight protested liquor license cases.

E. Behler's case was called first. Attorney Doud, for the remonstrators, Dennett & Tanner, produced the petition for license and showed that the applicant's assistant had signed the names to the petition. Mr. and showed that had signed the names to the petition. Mr. had signed the names to the petition. Mr. Simeral for defendant asked as a matter of right to allow Bihler to procure a new petition, as the error no doubt was made through this to be your tomb?"

"It is not really my tomb," said the ghost of the young girl. "It is the tomb of Sir of the young girl. "It is the tomb of Sir of the young girl."

H. Lemberg's case was then called. The remonstrators tried to prove that all of the dents of the Second ward, though testimony showed that they owned property there.

Daniel Clery's case came next. The protestors tried to prove that all of the signers were not freeholders. Action was deferred.

In the case of W. F. Bauer the petition was produced and showed that it had been was produced and showed that it had been was produced and showed that it had been altered, and some names erased and others inserted. This fact, however, was passed and Doud called J. L. Olson to the stand. Witness admitted signing the petition of Bauer. Protests against F. J. Eggers, B. Krebs and

V. Pivonka were overruled and licenses ordered granted. Notice of appeal on the part of The Bee was given. Dan Clery will get a license when he com-plies with the law. Clery has not paid in his license money yet.

Remonstrances against Jim Lowry, William Krug and Frank Thompson were sustained because the applicants' petitions were not signed by thirty freeholders. A motion to compel all saloon keepers who desire to do busine's and have not advertised at all to advertise at once was passed and the chief of police was instructed to close the places unless the dealers complied with the resolution. Adjourned until next Tuesday evening.
