

SQUEEZED A GRAIN BROKER

Lincoln Commission Firm Caught in the Wheat Flurry.

SPECULATORS LOSE THEIR MARGINS

C. W. Cockrell Compelled by the Unusual Run of the Markets to Close the Doors of His House.

LINCOLN, May 28.—(Special Telegram.)—The stock commission house of C. W. Cockrell in the Capital hotel closed its doors this morning, and a number of Lincoln speculators are mourning the loss of their margins.

These are said to amount to $7,000 or $8,000 in the aggregate. M. Westervelt is in possession, under a chattel mortgage, which is said to be only $500.

Today Thomas Bailey, one of Cockrell's customers, began suit for attachment in district court against him for $2,387.50, alleging that defendant had left the county and concealed himself to avoid service of process, and that he had removed his property to defraud his creditors.

Process was accordingly issued garnishing the American National Exchange bank, where Cockrell had a small deposit, and another issued for Westervelt, who holds the chattel mortgage, but the latter was not found in the city.

An attachment was also issued for Cockrell's race track out at the fair grounds. It was served it was learned that County Commissioner Miller had a chattel mortgage on the stock. Cockrell says his Omaha house did little business during the past Saturday afternoon, and he has settled his obligations dollar for dollar.

Both houses are closed with a good prospect of remaining so, but this he may not know. He says he has claims against customers aggregating something like $17,000, from which he expects to realize very little, as it is almost impossible to collect a debt on an option deal.

Cockrell has gone through several financial crises and come out on top. Three years ago he had a balance of $20,000 in his credit in Lincoln banks. That is all gone.

Judge Hill this morning gave Mrs. Mary D. Manning a divorce from Charles B. Manning, on the ground of desertion and non-support.

In the case of Patrick & Co. wholesale tobacco dealers, against Klein and Jack, the plaintiff secured a verdict for $1,081 in the district court this morning. Patrick & Co. sued Klein on the bond of Jack, given to secure an alleged shortage on the part of Klein, who was a traveling salesman for the firm.

There is being raised a fund for the erection of a building on the State university grounds as a home for the various societies now occupying the main building. Included in the societies are the Young Men's Christian association and Young Women's Christian association, who will there make their future home.

The morning Judge Holmes heard arguments on the motion to quash the summons served upon the bondsmen of the defaulting ex-convict, Frank W. Robinson. The motion was granted, as they were residents of Washington county, where service was improperly had upon them, and that the cause of action did not arise in this county.

The troubles in the Lincoln Light Infantry have finally been completely settled. In court. Members who oppose going into the National guard ask the district court for the appointment of a receiver and an injunction restraining the military from asserting title to company property.

Plaintiffs set up that the company was organized in December, 1891, for the purpose of company not subject to the laws of Nebraska except in times of war or public danger.

By giving entertainments and other amusements, they procured large sums of money, with which uniforms and equipments have been purchased, a drill hall or armory procured and furnished, all of which is the common property of the company.

On March last a resolution was introduced that it be the sense of the company that it go into the state militia, which was carried by a vote of 20 to 12, twenty members being absent.

Plaintiffs aver this resolution is not binding upon them.

WHERE SLEEP THE BRAVE

Memories Awakened by the Twenty-Seventh Anniversary of Decoration Day.

ITS FIRST FORMAL OBSERVANCE

Review of the Various Cemeteries in Charge of the National Government—Numbers of Dead Whose Resting Place the Government Guarantees.

Tomorrow is the twenty-seventh anniversary of the official designation of Memorial or Decoration day. It was General John A. Logan, then commander in chief of the Grand Army, who issued the first order designating May 30, 1868, as a day to be observed by strewing flowers or otherwise decorating the graves of comrades who died in defense of their country during the late rebellion, and whose bodies now lie in almost every city, village, hamlet and churchyard in the land.

In this observance no form of ceremony is prescribed, but poets and orators will, in their own way, arrange such fitting services and testimonials of respect as circumstances will permit. Let us, then, at the time appointed, write General Logan, "gather around their sacred remains and garland the passionless mounds above them with the choicest flowers of springtime."

But Frederickburg cemetery, which ranks next to Nashville in the number of dead, is great and most melancholy of all in the number of its unknown. Of the total 15,274 soldiers buried here, 12,786—an enormous proportion—are nameless.

CHATTANOOGA CEMETERY

In the Chattanooga cemetery sleep 13,958 of the fallen from the gory fields of Chattanooga, Chickamauga and Resaca. Next to it in population is the Calumet cemetery near New Orleans, the site of the battle of General Jackson's old battle ground. There lie the bodies of 12,640 union soldiers and sailors, brought from all parts of the state.

The Jefferson Barracks cemetery, which was once an old pet cemetery, but enlarged, contains the bones of 11,952 soldiers, including 1,100 Confederate prisoners taken in the early battles of the war in Missouri. At the Marietta, Ga., cemetery repose the remains of 10,169 union soldiers, collected from various parts of Georgia, and the Battle of Fort. S. C. rest 9,274 bodies of soldiers and sailors who died on the south Atlantic seaboard. Half are unknown.

Next to the above in point of size are the national cemeteries at Ft. Sumter, Va., with 6,556 interments; Richmond, with 6,545; the Soldiers Home, District of Columbia, with 6,242; Stone River, Tenn., with 5,917; Grove, Va., with 5,917; and City Point, Va., with 5,585; Mount City, Ill., with 5,200; Cypress Hills, Brooklyn, N. Y., 5,100; Antietam, Md., 4,736; Winchester, Va., 4,482; Florence, S. C., 3,013; Woodlawn, near Elmira, N. Y., 3,075; of these 2,968 were Confederate soldiers.

Over 9,000 Confederates in all are buried in the national cemeteries, principally, however, at Woodbury, N. H., and at Jefferson Barracks, Mo., Camp Butler, Ill., City Point, Va., and Loudon Park, Md.

COVER IT OVER. A SOLDIER'S GRAVE. Strew with sweet flowers the home of the dead. A soldier lies there, encoined in that tomb. A soldier lies there enwrapped in its gloom. But his soul is not there, it has taken its flight.

So cover him over with beautiful flowers, let the country's defenders be honored. His bivouac is ended, his camp fire's dead. So cover him up in his long narrow bed. BELLA R. HAVILL.

JOHNSTONE TURNED DRUGGIST

Blindfolded the Mind Reader Finds and Cures His Own Brain Trouble. A test of the powers of Mind Reader Johnstone entertained many down town spectators yesterday afternoon. Incidentally the program furnished a sensation for others who were not aware of what was really going on.

A prescription was written by Dr. E. W. Lee and placed in a sealed envelope, which was given to the clerk at the Merchants hotel. After a committee of local citizens had secured the envelope from the drug store, Mr. Johnstone was to find the envelope and fill the prescription, his eyes being blindfolded during the time.

At last Johnstone drew up at the drug store and soon succeeded in locating the envelope. Then he examined his guide for the drug store and located the envelope. One after another he took down the bottles and in half an hour from the time of the start, the prescription was filled, complete for two bottles.
