Byran is now forging in Missouri. As if Bland were not big enough to take care of his own state!

"Colonel" Edgar Howard will now reorganize Sarpy county journalism upon a strictly military basis.

We are still in the month of May. But may seem to have stepped down a couple of notches on the calendar.

The decision in the Debs case shows that the justices of the supreme court can still get together on propitious occasions.

Bushnell is the name of the republican candidate for governor of Ohio. Hushnell is also the name of the next governor of Ohio.

The council has done the sensible thing in regard to the water supply question. The only man in position to give the desired relief is Judge Dundy.

Congress ought to accomplish a great deal at its next session inasmuch as the supreme court has relieved it of the tedious task of repealing the income tax law.

Even the railroads concede that Omaha's train service is sadly deficient. If the local merchants and jobbers persist in demanding the remedy an improved service must soon be obtained.

In selecting men for his military family Governor Holcomb seems to have overlooked the several political warriors who pride themselves of the longest military records—on paper only.

Senator Sherman defines free silver coinage to be "the degradation of our dollar to 50 cents." The people have only to appreciate this definition to repudiate the sophistries of the free coinage advocates.

Memorial day has come to be a great day for outdoor athletics of every description. The day will be filled with sporting events in every part of the country. The record will be a most telling witness to the increasing popularity of outdoor sports among the American people.

If the owners of property in the vicinity of the Eleventh street viaduct are to have money damages for the injury suffered by reason of the closing of that thoroughfare it is to be feared that they will prefer to have damages continue to accrue rather than have the viaduct repaired.

It ought not to be necessary for the mayor to remind the city council almost every week of the promises of economy which it made at the time of its organization. Every member of the council ought to appreciate the necessity of keeping city expenses down to the minimum as well as the mayor.

By the announcement of the personnel of the governor's military staff Nebraska becomes suddenly enriched with a new crop of colonels. As the title carries with it nothing more than the privilege of purchasing a gold-braided uniform at the appointee's own expense there will be but few regrets over the moderate dimensions of the crop.

No more appropriate day than Memorial day could be selected for the obsequies of Secretary Gresham. General Gresham was a soldier of the truest type. He was an active participant in every movement to glorify the soldier of the late war of the rebellion. Every surviving veteran will but honor himself in paying honor to the memory of the dead secretary of state.

Of course the city council will not compel the street railway company to remove the unused tracks that are marred and obstructing the streets in every part of the city. To enforce such a task would, we are told, be imposing a most grievous hardship upon the company just at this time. The hardship upon the people using the streets in question does not cut any figure whatever.

And now we have a man among us who can see the gray matter cogitating in your head and read your thoughts as easily as he could a school primer. Instead of wasting energy upon the commanding of prescriptions while blindfolded, that mind-reading phenomenon ought to devote a little attention to give the hoodlums in local office and some of the public the benefit of the discoveries which he would be bound to make.

DECORATION DAY.

The occasion which makes its special appeal to the gratitude, the reverence and the patriotism of the American people is again at hand, with the force of that appeal undiminished, but if possible stronger than ever before. Everywhere preparations for the observance of Decoration day show that there is no decline in the reverence of our people for the dead soldiers of the union, no loss of interest in the beautiful custom by which for more than a quarter of a century a grateful nation has manifested its care and affection for the memory of the men whose valor preserved it. It is most honorable to the American character that such is the fact, for our devotion to the observance of Decoration day goes far to refute the accusation that as a people we are selfish and materialistic, with little regard for anything that does not lead to money getting.

It has been said that the country is blessed whose tombs treasure the ashes of heroes. If that be true no country is so blessed as this republic, the graves of whose dead soldiers are in almost every cemetery throughout the land. From these resting places of American patriots there springs a gospel which tells the saving power of self-sacrifice, the uplifting energy of a noble and unselfish patriotism, and the inspiring influence of heroic death. The graves of our dead heroes tell of a larger liberty, the greater security of free institutions, a stronger union, the instimable compensations of loyalty and valor never surpassed if ever equalled in the world's history. Thus these dead soldiers of the union still live in the great work they achieved, and in this sense they will live forever.

To bury the graves of our heroic dead in flowers and brighten their names with eulogy is to pay in part the great debt of gratitude we owe them, and the benefits are all for ourselves and those who shall come after us. In the uplifting influence of this occasion, in its inspiration to a higher patriotism, in its strengthening effect upon our faith in free institutions, and in its teaching the value of loyal citizenship, there is abundant compensation for all the time and effort that may be expended in its proper observance.

THE POOR MAN THE CHIEF LOSER.

In the current discussions of the money question considerable stress is being laid upon the existence of several large classes of obligations, amounting in the aggregate to millions upon millions of dollars, which under a depreciated currency would entail irreparable loss upon the people in every walk of life. For example, it is readily seen that every depositor in a bank would, if the country were reduced to a silver basis, draw out his savings in dollars worth only half those that he put in. Every pensioner would have the value of his pension cut in two. Fixed salaries would be practically reduced a half. Every man holding a life insurance policy or a fire insurance policy would be able to realize only half of what he expected and had been paying for.

There is, however, one class of similar obligations which affect every person in the country which has not received the attention that it deserves. It is the amount of money in circulation that under a regime of free silver coinage would be reduced to the same basis as the depreciated silver dollar. Ordinarily it is assumed that the only outstanding currency that would suffer would be the stock of standard silver dollars in circulation, amounting to some $54,000,000. Once in a while it is remembered that we have $60,000,000 of subsidiary silver, which will necessarily fall along with the larger coins. But the fact that all of our paper currency, with the exception of the gold certificates, is convertible into current coin and must fluctuate in value with that coin, at once adds to the loss that free coinage would force upon the poor man. September 1 of last year there were in circulation $65,968,969 of silver certificates. Each of these represents silver dollars in the treasury and if the dollar becomes a 50-cent dollar will represent no more. There were also in circulation $25,217,977 in treasury notes and $283,775,103 in United States notes and $58,965,000 in currency certificates, all of which are interchangeable with the silver dollar. Still further there were in circulation over $200,000,000 in national bank notes, which the banks promise to pay merely in lawful money of the United States and which they would as soon pay in 50-cent silver dollars as not. Of the total money in circulation in September, aggregating $1,646,671,181, less than $565,000,000 consisted of gold and gold certificates, and more than $1,080,000,000 consisted of silver and paper convertible into silver.

The great bulk of this money is in the hands of the laborers, the small merchants and the local traders. Cut down its value and we inflict a loss upon every person who happens to have a silver dollar or a paper dollar in his pocket. The people who have their savings in the form of money or bank deposits are the poor people. The rich man takes care of the investment of his capital himself. The poor man could not escape bearing the chief burden of a change to a silver money basis.

THE OHIO REPUBLICANS.

The republicans of Ohio held their state convention earlier than usual this year, which may be interpreted as meaning that they intend to prosecute an aggressive campaign. There has been some factional conflict in the party, but no bitterness, and the proceedings of the convention indicate that in the campaign the party will be found united and harmonious. The selection of Senator Sherman as chairman of the convention was eminently judicious. The veteran statesman has no further political ambition and his counsel could be accepted by the factions without any doubt as to its sincerity. With one or two exceptions the candidates for the gubernatorial nomination are popular men of about equal availability, so that it was hardly possible for the convention to have made a mistake in nominating any one of them. Mr. Bushnell, to whom the choice fell, has long been prominent in the politics of the state and under his leadership the party will undoubtedly make a vigorous fight. What will contribute most, however, to make the contest on the part of the republicans an aggressive one is the fact that Ohio has a candidate for the presidency and that ex-Governor Foraker desires to go to the United States senate. With these two powerful leaders shoulder to shoulder in the fight, as there is not a doubt they will be, Ohio is certain to be the most interesting political battleground of the present year and the result is not the least bit doubtful.

The plank in the Ohio republican platform which will command most attention from the country is the one relating to the currency. It is an unequivocal declaration for honest money—that is, for money every dollar of which will maintain its parity with gold, which is true bimetalism. It demands that the purchasing and debt-paying power of the two metals shall be at all times equal, which is fair and honest. There had been some apprehension that the Ohio republicans would waver on this question and commit themselves to some sort of ambiguous proposition that would admit of almost any interpretation, but the sound currency and true bimetallic sentiment of the country will find no fault with the declaration of their platform. Republicans generally will also agree with the enumeration regarding protection and reciprocity. In view of the utter failure of the democratic tariff law as a revenue measure no unprejudiced person will question that it needs modification and that in changing it the interests of American labor and American industries require that the policy of protection should be more fully recognized. Important as the currency question undoubtedly is, not less so is the question of a wise and just economic policy that will provide ample revenue for the government and secure an adequate protection to domestic industries.

The resolution presenting Governor McKinley as a candidate for the presidential nomination in 1896 and pledging him the support of Ohio in the next republican national convention was expected. If the republicans carry Ohio next November McKinley will have the solid support of the delegation from that state in the next national convention. In committing the party to ex-Governor Foraker for the United States senate the republicans of Ohio have made a departure and it remains to be seen what the effect will be as to the legislature. The conditions, however, foreshadow another sweeping victory for the republicans of the Buckeye state this year.

The decision in the Debs case brings out one minor point prominently, and that is that a person has a much better chance to secure a reversal on appeal from a commitment for contempt of a legislative body than of a lower judicial tribunal. Every time either house of congress, or a committee of one of them, or some lesser legislative authority, tries to impose a penalty upon recalcitrants who defy its authority to enforce its orders or to compel testimony, the party in default is almost sure to get off on a technicality by taking his case before a regular judicial body. The precedents in this line in the United States supreme court and in the various state courts are common. On the other hand, the plain violation of a court order is viewed in a much more serious light in the appellate jurisdiction. In the first instance the question involves the exercise of judicial power by an extra-judicial body. In the second it involves the extent of the judicial power itself. The distinction seems to be one of great force with our judges.

The decision in the Oregon Short Line receivership is by no means regarded as inimical to the present management, and Union Pacific employees in Omaha have no cause yet to feel seriously alarmed. The conditions imposed by Judge Sanborn upon the mortgage bondholders are such as to render doubtful whether they could with any safety comply with them for the more advantage gained of having a separate receiver. The contest over the Short Line is, however, not yet over. It will take them ten days to two weeks to get a definite settlement of the controversy. Until then all conclusions as to the final outcome must be held in abeyance.

The democrats of Omaha are capable of minding their own affairs without the aid or consent of any other party on earth—World-Beaters.

Of course they are. They are capable of pulling themselves over the fence by their bootstraps without aid or consent of anybody. They have a natural capacity for brag and bluster that is not excelled by any other party, but when it comes to a showdown they have not been able to elect even a member of the school board on their own hook. The only offices they captured would not have come within a thousand miles if they had depended upon democratic support alone.

The bondsmen of ex-Off Inspector Hiltton are very much like the bondsmen of every other state officer. They will insist on taking advantage of every possible technicality to evade the payment of the sum for which they are intended to stand good. An official bond which binds the sureties is a rarity in these days.

If the Central American republics are really planning for a union it must be because the momentary lack of internal revolutions has left them with nothing else to do. They are generally so busy fighting one another that they have not time to consider the advantages of peaceful combination.

Senator Sherman was unquestionably correct when he said that the declaration of principles made by the Ohio republicans in their state convention will have an important influence beyond the limits of the state in leading up to the platform to be enunciated at the next republican national convention. It will have more than ordinary influence because it has been formulated to accord with the best republican sentiment throughout the entire country. If it contained doctrines contradictory of republican policy it would not receive more than passing consideration outside of Ohio.

A piece of silver stamped with the insignia of the United States mint is now worth just about twice as much as without that impression. Give us free coinage at 16 to 1 by the United States alone and that difference will disappear. But it will disappear by bringing the value of the silver dollar down to the bullion value, not by raising the bullion up to the coinage level. Free silver means a depreciated currency.

Now, All Together. St. Louis Republic. Not for Illinois, but for New York, we repeat it: "A western man or bust."

Where Are the Headdresses? Chicago Times-Herald. The son of an English earl is being detained at Ellis Island under the act which prohibits the landing of paupers in this country. Here is a chance for some American headdress.

When Theories Go to Smash. Philadelphia Record. Theories are all very well until they butt their heads against implacable, impassive facts. Observe how the cheap money theory breaks itself into pieces in collision with rising prices and larger wages!

The Good Output. Philadelphia Ledger. The director of the mint reports a considerable increase in the production of gold in Germany, they believe that the restoration of silver to the money of the world, by agreement of nations, is in the line of practical achievement, and can be attained if its success is ever put to the test.

International Bimetalism. Philadelphia Inquirer. The English advocates of true bimetalism—the use of both gold and silver—realize that the financial question is a world question. Like their zealous and persistent co-workers in Germany, they believe that the restoration of silver to the money of the world, by agreement of nations, is in the line of practical achievement, and can be attained if its success is ever put to the test.

The Sound Money Platform. New York World. The sound money men do not propose to diminish by a dollar the silver now in circulation or to take from it any of its legal tender power. They propose instead to increase the coinage as fast as the demand for it shall appear and to stimulate that demand by the withdrawal of all circulating notes of less than one dollar.

That Alleged Reply. Philadelphia Inquirer. Ex-Congressman Bryan of Nebraska has made an alleged reply to Secretary Carlisle's Memphis speech. He is one of the most sincere men in public life today, but that does not necessarily mean that he cannot be very silly when he tries. What, for instance, could be more absurd than his intimation that a man of 85 or 90 must be kept in the hospital for the rest of his life?

The Dead Cuban Leader. New York Sun. We learn with poignant sorrow of the death in battle of the great republican hero, General Marti. We know him long and well and esteem him profoundly. For a protracted period, beginning twenty odd years ago, he has been the center of our attention, and his name has been a household word in the United States.

PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE. The price of asphalt pavement tumbled to $2 a square yard in St. Paul last week. A Horizontal Bill Morrison is believed to be Crisp's ideal western man with a war record.

Carlisle resembles Cleveland in one respect. He declines to descend to the Bryan level of ore-wrought imagination. It is all the same whether wheat is high or low, the average housekeeper rarely neglects shortening the staff of life.

It is reported that ex-Congressman Life Pence of Colorado is disgusted with railroads. He is the greatest snarl in the nation. Mr. Whitelaw Reid of the New York Tribune is cultivating a full beard, but it is not likely he will attempt to break the Kansasian.

Chicago aldermen wisely concluded that voting franchises is more conducive to health and happiness than sitting down on the bicycle bloomer. Senator Peffer is said to be disgusted with politics and will not attempt to be a candidate for re-election. The senator undoubtedly feels the cyclone in his whiskers.

The moral atmosphere of Kentucky is undergoing a radical renovation in all sections of the state. Two natives stood before a church door in Versailles last Sunday and preached till both fell dying. There was a woman in it.

The monument erected recently in General J. T. Torrence's burial lot in Rosehill cemetery, Chicago, is the greatest snarl in the United States over a private grave. It is of Vermont granite, fifty-five tons in weight and sixty-five feet high.

Norman M. Cameron, the son of a Chelsea, Mass., physician, who has been expelled from the medical department of the University of Michigan, has the sympathy of all Chicagoans. He is a Detroit newspaper, of which he was a correspondent, a story that a senior had eaten a sandwich made of human flesh. It was true, but the reporter had taken the name of the senior, and he only ate one bite.

Hon. Henri Waterson will remain abroad during the presidential campaign, as well as during that of the vice-presidential. For thirty years I have been leading forlorn hopes and filling impossible breaches," he says, "and both my domestic and business interests require that I should take the 'split.'" This is more than Kentucky paths. It is advance policy for the party corps which his forefathers will strew the political highways of '96 and '96.

WALTER Q. GRESHAM.

Chicago Times Herald: Decoration day will have one more gallant beach to cover with garlands. North and south, east and west, will mourn a fellow countryman, who in war and in peace wore worthily the name American.

St. Paul Globe: If Walter Q. Gresham died with the great satisfaction of his countrymen, he at least leaves behind him the record of an earnest, patriotic American citizen. And what better epitaph than that need any one of us desire?

Kansas City Times: Walter Q. Gresham was a grand man; a greater personality, a self-sacrificing patriot. The honor of his country was his life. His devotion to his country was his devotion to his life, and his life was his devotion to his country.

Indianapolis Journal: Summed up, it may be said that he was a brilliant man with many winning and agreeable social qualities, a good friend and a good-hater, ambitious, but lacking in the firmness and determination that make ambitions triumph. Although he received high honors from three presidents, it is doubtful if he was ever content with any—the last least of all.

St. Paul Pioneer Press: He was a brave and capable soldier, and he served the country well in the office of postmaster general during Arthur's term, and for a short time in the Treasury department; but it was chiefly as a judge that he made his name. He was a good judge, and he was, perhaps, too much of a judge to be a first-rate American secretary of state; too judicial in his mental equipment for that patriotic bias of which was a notable characteristic of his diplomacy.

Chicago Inter Ocean: His public services were three-fold—soldier, jurist, and cabinet officer. In private life stainless and genial, he was always personally popular. In the army he popularized the idea of the great commander himself. On the bench he was absolutely impartial in the administration of justice, and in the cabinet he was the confidential confidant of both presidents with whom he was associated. He may be said to have had a talent for friendship, and that amounting to genius.

Globe-Cleveland: Gresham's entrance into the Cleveland cabinet was a serious mistake in judgment. On the bench, where he was engaged in the restrictions and preparations of official superiors, he was making a reputation which was giving him a conspicuous and honorable place in his profession. His talents and bent of mind, too, were judicial and not executive or administrative. As a recent accession, moreover, to the party in which he served, he probably found some of his energy in accomplishing his new environment, and this detracted from his confidence and his usefulness.

AMERICA BEATS THE WORLD. Such is the Opinion of England's Greatest Statistician. NEW YORK, May 29.—The English statistician, Michael G. Mulhall, publishes in the June number of the North American Review, just issued, an article on "The Power and Wealth of the United States." Mr. Mulhall's conclusion is that "if we take the survey of mankind in ancient or modern times as regards the physical, mechanical and intellectual force of nations, we find nothing to compare with the United States in this present year of 1895 and that the United States possesses by far the greatest productive power in the world. He asserts that the absolute effective force of the American people is now more than three times what it was in 1850 and that the United States possesses almost as much energy as Great Britain, Germany and France collectively, and that the ratio of the United States to the rest of the world is as 100 to 25, whereas in Europe one man feeds only thirty persons. Mr. Mulhall calls special attention to the fact that the intellectual power of the great republic is in harmony with the industrial and mechanical 70 per cent of the total population over 10 years of age being able to read and write.

"It may be regarded as feasible," says he, "to trace the history of the human race no longer than ever possessed 4,000,000 instructed citizens."

The writer sets forth in regard to the growth of the wealth of the United States that the average annual increment from 1821 to 1890 was 901 millions of dollars, which sum is only a trifle over the total wealth of Great Britain.

Classifying the whole wealth of the union under the two heads of urban and rural, he finds that rural or agricultural wealth has multiplied in forty years, while urban wealth has multiplied sixteen-fold. In an important series of figures it is shown that the "rise in wealth and increase in the most unwholesome having occurred, along with the development of farm values Mr. Mulhall makes the following statement: "If the United States had no urban population, such excess that he became incapacitated for duty. So the grand jury of the judge's own court found an indictment against him for drunkenness."

DEPOSED THE DEBS DECISION. Amalgamated Association Passes Resolutions on the Subject. CLEVELAND, O., May 29.—Yesterday's session of the Amalgamated association was devoted to the consideration of committee reports.

The following resolutions were adopted by the convention in the afternoon: Whereas, During recent years the courts have been issuing injunctions against men engaged in peaceful strikes and restraining them from being present in the vicinity of the places in which the controversy exists; and that these injunctions have been issued without even the allegations of such unlawfulness having occurred, those seeking these injunctions having secured them by expressing fears that violations of the law might occur, and Whereas, The ease with which injunctions have been secured has brought about agency into common use by employers of labor whose employees may be taken out of better than any other condition, and Whereas, The courts in each succeeding injunction issued by them have increased in scope and severity of the restrictions therein contained until it would seem that the desires of the courts are the extent of our liberties, and Whereas, The supreme court of the United States has just handed down its opinion in the case of Eugene V. Debs, the language of which only states in terms the approval of the use of this weapon against organized labor, and that it is the issue of injunctions further encouraged and the common people's rights further endangered, therefore, Resolved, That we, in convention assembled, do hereby express our protest against and unjustifiable curtailment of our liberties that is being done by injunctions, we demand it as the means through which we steadily take away from the people by piecemeal rights that are the basis of our interference with, thus making it the more repugnant because of its pretended necessity.

Resolved, That we regret this latest and far-reaching decision on injunctions and that we believe that the time has come when the union force for labor should send their forces to the correction of this evil—an evil that if permitted to go on will eventually increase to such a degree that it will inevitably bring about the enslavement of the masses.

Resolved, That our sympathy goes out to Eugene V. Debs and that we regard the denial of his petition by the supreme court as a denial of simple justice.

FOR BETTER CROP REPORTS.

Agricultural Department Will Next Year Adopt a New System. WASHINGTON, May 29.—A scheme to make an important change in the system of crop reporting is about to be put into operation by the Agricultural department. It will provide for detailed reports from a vast corps of correspondents covering every township in the country, and it is expected to be as thorough and complete a plan as will be possible to carry into effect. A correspondent will be located in every township and he will be required to report promptly to the department. The plan will first embrace only twenty states, ranging from New York to the innermost of the central states; but these comprise 90 per cent of the wheat area. They include 1,280 counties, and the greatest of the schemes is apparent when it is taken into consideration that the number of townships in a county average about fifteen. This will be used in conjunction with the system now in vogue, each of these reports acting as a check on the other. The present system provides for one chief reporter in every county, who is expected to properly receive and weigh the reports of three others in the county. There are now about 1,800 chief correspondents and about 8,000 correspondents in all.

Looking to the organization of the personnel of the new correspondents of reports have been taken by the department but the new plan cannot be put in operation before next year. The department is sending the following circular to county officials throughout the twenty states:

A large increase in the sources of information available to this division in the preparation of its crop reports is being effected by the national board of trade in a recent conference on the subject of crop reporting. The present system of crop reporting, and the undersigned, it is proposed to secure if possible a capable correspondent in each township, election district, or other subdivision of every county, instead of depending upon the report of a single correspondent in each. You are invited to assist the department in carrying out this object by the submission of the names of two or more residents in each township or other subdivision of the county, who are capable of acting as correspondents, and the undersigned, it is proposed to secure if possible a capable correspondent in each township, election district, or other subdivision of every county, instead of depending upon the report of a single correspondent in each.
