OMAHA ON THE SECOND GAME

Chicago University Club Beaten in the Postponed Contest at Base Ball.

STAGG TRIED HIS HAND AT PITCHING

After Clarke Had Been Used Up The Great Alonzo Went in the Box and Took Some of the Same Medicine.

The postponed Decoration day game of ball between the Chicago University and the Omaha University club teams, played at University park yesterday afternoon, was a royal battle indeed.

It was a great victory and a well-earned one for the Omaha team, which resembled a smugly satisfied victor at several junctures it looked as if the emerald-hooped host was going to get it where Maud wears her beads, but they didn't.

Good Old Dame Fortune was lavish with her smiles and the Omaha graduates pulled out with one little nearly tally to spare. They got a sort of a hammerlock on the Windy City crew in the opening inning and clung to it until the game was won.

Alonzo knows that after every storm there is more or less sun, and he never forgets the golden splendor that shines behind the leaden pall of sorrow.

Robinson and Clarke were the pitchers, and it must be said that Robbie did much the best of the argument from start to finish. In extension of Clarke's indifferent showing it is but fair to state that he was not helped by any means, and besides it was an odd day for him as well as all of his colleagues.

It was egg-rip for both sides in the second and third innings, but here the Chicagoans got in another. Creigh's error led the warmed-batter to Alonzo's station, and he followed on a wild and untamed pitch.

Stagg's men made four. In their half Alonzo opened up with an out from Creigh to Abbott, and it looked like another exotic from the henney, but Alonzo got his bases on a missed third strike and Henry Clarke sent the glibbed hogskin skimming over to Robinson, who threw wild to Abbott, and the air began to take on a certain hue.

That was all, but it was plenty, and it felt like a manna from heaven on Alonzo's bowed head, and for a few brief moments he looked like a real live man again.

Attorney Doud, for the renegeators, then called the case of Mary Winklevicz, thirty-third and L streets, and moved by one witness, whose name was on the petition, that he did not own any property in the Third ward.

WILL RUN IN ANOTHER WEEK

Union Park Race Meeting is Extended Until Next Saturday.

THREE FAVORITES WON YESTERDAY

Who Got-Bygones a Great Show of Appreciation on Part of Horses.

The successful character of the races and the universal satisfaction that has been felt all around has led the Union park management to continue the meeting all of next week.

Everybody cheered their favorite of course, and the ladies waving their lace handkerchiefs, cried in chorus: "Mister Abbott, you are a bird!"

It will pay every housekeeper to try Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder. BALTIMORE, Md., May 31.—Inks was batted hard today. Luby succeeded him in the fifth and stopped the hitting.
