and Stephens' stepson, Charles Henry Chapman, aged 15 years. Stephens is well known in Council Bluffs and Omaha, having been employed for several years as toll collector at the Omaha and Council Bluffs motor bridge. He had but one enemy, drink. About a month ago his indulgence in drink cost him his place, and ever since then he has been on an extended spree, coming home late at night, raising a disturbance among the members of his family, or sleeping off his drunken stupor on the grass in front of his home at 110 Fifth avenue.

at the windows and aroused his wife, who refused to let him in. With an oath, Ste-phens declared that he would get in and kill his family, and then burn down the house. He had been keeping three loaded revolvers in the house for some time past, and mem-bers of his family were considerably alarmed, fearing that he would carry his threat into execution. From the windows they watched his movements, and saw him go into the woodshed at the rear of the house. He lighted a number of matches, and seemed to be trying to set the shed on fire.

BOY FIRED DELIBERATELY. His stepson, young Chapman, seized one of the revolvers, and with his sister, Rose Stephen, aged 17 years, went out to the shed. Seeing them coming, Stephens jumped to his feet and started toward them. The young man aimed his revolver and fired two shots in rapid succession, both of them at close range. One of them took effect in Stephens' right side, near the front part of he abdomen, the other in the shoulder.

After the two shots had been fired, according to the boy's statement, he and his sister ran into the house, while Stephens ran around to the front door. He fired at Stephens, but failed to hit his target. Stephens went a few feet further, and then lay down on the ground, where he was found a few minutes ground, where he was found a few minutes ground, where he was picked up and the makes a mistake, and the drill will go on among the rest. Stephens said that it was his wife who had fired the shot, and the woman was placed under arrest and lodged in the city jail. About an hour later the boy was also arrested and put in jail. When Justice Walker held police court in the morning he ordered Mrs. Stephens released on her own recognizance, as it was evident that she had had no part in the shooting.

The boy was called upon for a statement. He admitted firing three shots at his stepfather, and said he did it to protect his mother and prevent him from murdering the family and hurning the house. The boy is very bright, and told his story in a straight forward way. He lived with John T. Council Bluffs, Ia. War Between Base Ballists.

A game of base ball was played yesterday afternoon between the Council Bluffs High School Juniors and the second team of the Iowa School for the Deaf which for kicking the umpire and each other has not een surpassed this year. In the first place he High school fellows claimed that four of the positions on the mute team were filled by members of the first team. Then they kicked because the mutes had chosen the umpire, and they claimed that the um was plugging against them, as usual The umpire, among other things, overruled Spaulding's twenty-ninth rule and that caused another howl. At the end of the eighth inning the Council Bluffs boys, after three times threatening to withdraw on acrefused to play any more. As they left the field the captain and umpire of the mutes ran up and said they had heard one of the players called them _____ liars. There was nearly a pitched battle, but the High school men got away without bloodshed. The score was 16 to 6 at the end of the eighth inning. Iowa Laws Are Tavorable. Messrs. Powell and Daniels of the telegraphers' committee are visiting friends in Omaha and will not leave for their home until this evening. It is stated that of the from Cottee Van four members of the committee who have been here all but Mr. Daniels are enthusiastically in favor of Council Bluffs as head-quarters for the order, and even he is considerably more friendly to it than when he came here. There are only six members bly encouraged to believe that Council Bluffs will come out winner in the race.

One thing which, it is thought, will have a great deal of weight in determining the question finally is the friendliness of the lowa laws to institutions of this sort. Different controls in the control of the con nois and Indiana are much more rigid in their supervision of insurance orders, and there are very few states whose laws are more liberal than those of Iowa. The Order of Railway Telegraphers expects to adopt an insurance feature in the near future, and the Order of Trainmen has already made this a part of their work.

By this time Orton had made up his mind to carry out the fraud. He sailed for London and stopped at a hotel which he learned from Bogle Sir Roger and his father ordi-narily frequented. He was accepted at once by the landlord as Sir Roger. Then he went to Paris to see Lady Tichborne. "On the morning following my arrival Lady Tichborne sent her Irish male serv-ant, Cohen, round to the hotel to inquire if I had arrived. About an hour afterward Lady Tichborne came round to the hotel to see me. It was about 10 in the morning I got up to breakfast that morning, but after arising I became ill. The real cause of my illness I cannot thoroughly explain, but it must have been due to the fact that I was overexcited at the prospect of being confronted with Lady Tichborne, whom I did not know. Feeling ill, I laid down on the bed in my clothes. Leete came in and told me that Lady Tichborne had arrived. "'All right, I am ready to receive her.'

"When Lady Tichborne entered the room I was lying on the bed with my face to the wall. In that position my back would be to Lady Tichborne. She was in the room some minutes before I knew she was there, I heard Holmes call: 'Sir Roger, you mother is here.' Of course I turned over and slid my legs down, resting on the side of the bed. She looked at me and then came forward and kissed me and said: Oh, Roger, I am so glad to see you. "She was full of emotion and seemed much affected. Holmes got her a chair and she sat down alongside of me and we conversed together. She could see that I really ill, and she asked me what was the matter. I said I did not know what i

In the course of the day she conversed with me freely and asked other parts of the world. She asked me how I had been getting on and what I had been doing. She inquired whether I had gotten the $3,000 she sent me to Sydney, and I told her I had not, as I had left before it arrived. She told me she allowed Alfred (Sir Roger's brother, who was a baby then), $100 a week, next, I gave her a short story of my life in Australia, telling her how I had been living. She gave me $100 before I left Paris, and she paid all the hotel expenses of Holmes, Leete and myself. This was in January, 1867, when I was in Paris."

Deputies Accuse the Government of Protecting Bribetakers.

Copyrighted, 1895, by Press Publishing Company. PARIS, June 1 .- The discussion of Figaro's evelations respecting the corruption of deputies and senators by the South France railroad occasioned a stormy sitting of the Chamber today, during which the government narrowly escaped defeat. Rouanet, the so cialist deputy, accused the government of protecting the inquiry into the scandals in order to avoid prosecuting ex-ministers guilty of accepting bribes amounting to $220,000 from the railroad nearly three years ago. Since the French law takes no account of bribery older than three years Rouanet in-vited the government to prosecute immedi-Trarieux, minister of justice, said the charges were unproven, except with regard to a senator. Magnier objected to the report of the commission, as the inquiry into the scandals is not yet completed. Jaures denied the minister's statement, producing a copy of the report, which produced a great sensa-tion. Goblet's motion blaming the action of the government was only lost by twenty-five votes. A resolution blaming the deputies for meddling with financial affairs afterward carried by 421 votes against fifteen, a m defeat of the government.

Their many years' experience in treating all forms of catarrhal and kindred chronic diseases entitles them to speak authoritatively on the subject, and it is particularly pleasing to feel that the public appreciates and acknowledges this fact.

Therefore, following the usual custom, Drs. Copeland and Shepard desire to announce that now is undoubtedly the time to treat catarrh. Now we have nature to assist us in the treatment instead of retarding it. A month's treatment now is worth more than two months' during the winter. In fact, in some aggravated cases, it is simply impossible to effect a cure during the winter months, and in these instances patients have been advised to delay treatment until summer.

The deafness became serious enough to interfere with my business until I placed myself under treatment. The results were all that I could desire, being in fact a substantial cure of my whole case. After a lapse of nearly three years since undergoing treatment my condition warrants the statement that I am cured to stay cured.
