DES MOINES, Ia., June 2 .- (Special Telegram.) - Des Moines won a hard fought game today from Omaha under some rather disagreeable circumstances. A heavy shower about the time the train started from the city cut down the attendance materially, but on arrival at the grounds it was found no rain had failen there. A beavy cloud hung over the diamond and let down a bucketful occasionally, prolonging the game to about three hours' duration. In the second inning Shaffer, Omaha's left fielder, was sent to the bench for talking to the umpire over a disputed point, and the game was finished under protest from Captain Hutchinson. No scores were made after the third inning, and but little batting was done after that time, the ball being wet and the grounds muddy. Des Moines made three brilliant double plays and Omaha made four. Omaha played a perfect fielding game, but was unfortunate in getting no scores at critical times. Score:

of the banking house of Henry Clews & Co., writes of the situation in Wall street:

On the Stock exchange there has been this week some interruption of the prevailing buoyancy. First in London and then here there was a disposition to realize the large profits on the late advance in prices, all of which was natural and healthy. Next came discouraging reports of serious injury to the crops from the late spurt of cold weather, together with rumors of infury from insect posts, to which the market was naturally sensitive after having counted upon the prospects of a fine harvest. Concurrently with these facts came reports of a renewal of "bearish" attacks upon American investments by certain London journals notorious for their pessimistic attitude toward our securities. And to these interruptions must be added the occurrence of holitays both here and in London. The effect of all this has been to draw out a certain extent of "bear" attack and to produce some yielding in prices. The effect of these influences, however, has been less than might have been expected, in view of such an important advance as has occurred, and toward the close of the week a recovering tendency set in, notwithstanding that both teday and Monday are bank holidays in London.

"Kill him kill the umpire!" shouted some one from the stand—and it's likely they'd have killed him had not Casey raised his hand.

With a smile of Christian charity great He stilled the rising tumuit and bade the game go on;

He signalied to the pitcher and once more the ball it flew, But Cassy still ignored it and the umpire said.

The improved status of our investments in Europe shows signs of further progress. The education of investors seems to be passing from the narrow and pretentious critics of the press to the better informed and more candid bankers and financiers, whose judgments really direct the course of European investments. It is a telbag comment upon the value of editorial opinion in London that while sconomists and statists have been persistently decrying our of European investments. It is a letting comment upon the value of editorial opinion in London that while economists and statists have been persistently decrying our corporate investments, bankers have, within the last three months, placed rome $130,000,000 of our bonds and stocks in the London and the continental markets. This week an issue of $5,000,000 of railroad bonds drew out $10,000,000 of offers from London before the securities were openly offered, and, besides that, $2,000,000 of obligations of an electrical corporation were negotiated in the same market.

Europe seems to no longer attach any serious importance to the position of the silver question in this country. Observers there seem to have reached the conclusion that our agitation about free coinage is totan ephemeral phase of popular ignorance, destined to disappear under the influence of the conservative common sense of the people at large, and their judsment is a safe one. In the south and the west a very marked reaction against national free coinage has set in under the diffusion of information through the various sound money agencies, and the best judges of sentiment and politics in those sections agree that the silver kings can make no further progress in their efforts to create a government market for their product. There is a quasi-conservative element among us who have clung to the hope that a settlement might be reached through establishing international bimetallism, but the hopes of that class are fading before the growing evidences of the improbability of bringing about such an agreement, if not also from growing misgivings whether such an arrangement would prove equal to providing for a present annual world product of $200,000,000 of the metal, and possibly of a yearly increase in addition. recrease in addition. ENGLAND'S ATTITUDE ANNOUNCED.

ENGLAND'S ATTITUDE ANNOUNCED.
England's disposition in the matter has been shown this week by the chancellor of the exchequer's emphatic public declaration that, under no conditions whatever, would the British government sanction any departure from the historic gold standard policy of the nation. From the opposite political party came authoritative warnings to Mr. Balfour and Lord Salisbury that the conservatives would oppose any concessions to Mr. Balfour and Lord Salisbury that the conservatives would oppose any concessions to Mr. Balfour and Lord Salisbury that the conservatives would oppose any concessions the hope of England supporting a goes, so Germany will follow, if not even France also. Clearly, therefore, conference or no conference, international bimetallism is now surrounded with greater doubt than ever as a settlement of this question. A recognition of that fact will tend to greatly clarify the issue in this country, which must later confine the choice of our people between the gold standard on the one side and the single silver standard, with free coinage, on the other side. In reality, this should settle the question, though the fanatical stubbornness of the silverites may help to keep the issue in politics for some time longer. In the meantime, it is certain that no legislation favorable to silver could be enacted so long as the presidency is in its present incumbency.

Stocks on that Market Considerably Disturbed in All Lines. LONDON, June 2.—The issues of American ailroad bonds during the past week have ade no appreciable call upon the bullion narket here. The races at Epsom Downs, ish holidays, and the approach of the Whit-suntide have caused a break in this marsuntide have caused a break in this market. Operators rushing to realize profits resulted in a break in the Kaffir and American markets. The worst appears to be over, and the closing prices were above the worst and indicated a buoyant tendency. Canadians have risen and Newfoundland is recovered on the arrangement of a loan to the colony. Fears of a war in rates arising out of the rupture of the pooling arrangement of the Mexican lines cast a gloom over these stocks. Copper securities were lower on a report that the American producers decline to negotiate for a restriction of the output. St. Louis General Market.
