The currency question was found to be the most common subject of discussion among the people, and it was easy to see that that would be the great issue in the next campaign. Silver clubs were being formed all over the country, mass conven-tions of silver democrats were being called in the counties and the crannization of the national silver party at Washington threat-ened to take from the United States the last forlern remnant of our demoralized party.

last forforn remnant of our demoralized party. The situation was a grave one. The presi-dent and other democrats in high places seemed determined on a line of policy to which the rank and file of the party were opposed. The administration could not or would not believe that it was not in ac-cord with the people in its financial policy. The committee in planning a campaign of education found that one side or the other of this great financial question must be taken. It had no right to make a platform or to outline a policy, so in its trouble it determined upon the democratic plan of asking the people for instructions, and so this convention was called.
