TRYING TO RUN THE SCHOOLS

Main Feature of the Contest Over the Election of Teachers.

A. P. A. DICTATES WHO SHALL TEACH

Instructor in Music to Be Dismissed on Account of Her Religion and Teacher of Drawing to Be Sacrificed to Take the Curse Away.

While the election of principals and teachers for the next school year by the Board of Education last Monday night was supposed to cover the entire field, it may be noted that two very important positions were left unsettled. These are the superintendents of music and drawing, which have been filled for several years past by Miss Fannie Arnold and Miss Ethel Evans, respectively. These were left for future consideration and will constitute a red hot subject for discussion at the next meeting of the board.

At the last meeting a vigorous effort was made by five members of the board to have Miss Evans' case decided, as no objection had ever been raised against her ability or methods. But the majority of the members refused to consider the matter, or to give reasons for such refusal. Behind this majority action lurks a state of affairs which is denounced as outrageous by the five members who are not in sympathy with the scheme.

The situation took its present phase when the local council of the American Protective association promulgated an order that Miss Arnold, who was a Catholic, should be dismissed from her position. This order consisted of four distinct demands which were made obligatory on the members of the order who are on the Board of Education. The first demand that Miss Arnold should be dismissed and that if it appeared that her dismissal alone could not be accomplished the supervisor of drawing, who is Protestant, should be dismissed. The second demand named Lee G. Kratz as Miss Arnold's successor and instructed the American Protective association members to cast their votes for him. The third demand provided that in case it should be found impossible to secure the election of Mr. Kratz a compromise might be effected on any Protestant candidate, while the fourth was to the effect that in case it should be found impossible to take the position out of the possession of a Catholic, music should be abolished from the schools.

The proceedings already had in this connection indicate that some of the members of the American Protective association party in the board are not too anxious to enter into the job of decapitating these two teachers. In such cases the teachers are unsalable and it is well understood that the flimsy pretexts which may be alleged as sufficient reason for their retirement will be readily penetrated by the conservative element in the city. At the last meeting of the Board of Education the opponents of the scheme were anxious to force an issue, but the American Protective association party had not their courage screwed up to the necessary point, and as a result they dodged the question by voting a postponement for two weeks.

TOO FAR FOR THEM TO GO.

One reason for this hesitation is found within the ranks of their own colleagues. There are several members of the board who are acknowledged members of the order, but who draw the line at what they boldly characterize as "an infamous outrage." They have flatly refused to take any part in the election of the council and maintain their right to act independently of the preferences of the politicians at whose instance the order of the American Protective association was issued. Their sentiments were expressed by one of them yesterday when he said that he would not be a member of the American Protective association since its inception in Nebraska. He still considered himself a good A. P. A., but he did not propose to swallow the present proposition. "It is a pretty state of affairs," he continued, "when such men as Israel Frank, Jim Winch, Jim Allen, Jim Dwyer, and others dictate to me how I shall vote as a member of the Board of Education and I am a member of the Board of Education and I won't stand it. They intend to refuse to re-elect Miss Evans for exactly the same reason that I refuse to be a member of the American Protective association. There is no objection to Miss McGee, but Miss Crowley was a Catholic and had to go. Some one had to be sacrificed in order to take the cure off, and make it appear that something besides religion was responsible for the dismissal. In the presence of the members whom I have mentioned and their like, I have declared that Miss Arnold must be retired in favor of a Protestant and that Miss Evans must go, too, in order that the declaration be the change was in the interest of retrenchment and reorganization. But there is not a person who knows anything about the situation who will be deceived by such a move. I propose to fight this thing to the last ditch, and there will be music in the air before the battle is over."

With this sort of opposition in their own ranks and the general impression that their action will be thoroughly understood by the public members are not in a hurry to take the cure off. They are not altogether sure that they have the necessary votes and are waiting for wind, while the situation is being brought to bear on one or two hesitating members to whip them into line. On the other hand, the A. P. A. members and friends of Miss Arnold and Miss Evans are up in arms and declare that some plain facts will be stated if the howling derision and contumacious of the A. P. A. element insist upon carrying out the present intentions.

THEIR RECORDS SPLENDID.

Miss Arnold has been connected with the Omaha schools for the past seven years. A portion of the time she has been in the High school and for several years past she has had charge of the musical instruction in all of the schools of the city. During this period the Omaha schools have acquired a wide reputation for the excellence of their musical instruction, and Miss Arnold's work has been most favorably commented on by every educator of note who has visited this city.

Miss Evans has been instructor in drawing since September, 1894, and her work has received nothing but the most flattering comment. She was about to start for France to further her studies, but her next year's work when the refusal of the other teachers were elected caused a postponement of her plans.

Lee G. Kratz, who has been selected by A. P. A. council No. 125 as Miss Arnold's successor, is a local instructor in music and a member of the "T. K." quartet. Miss Evans' successor has not yet been mentioned.

In connection with the retirement of a dozen teachers who failed of re-election Monday night it has leaked out that in one place, at least, the A. P. A. have been most successful. Harriet H. Heller has been a most successful teacher in the Omaha schools for the past eight years. Her markings were 1-2, which indicated that she was perfect in discipline and only one mark short of perfect in instruction. She was not recommended for re-election, but a story is told by way of explanation.

It seems that some weeks ago Mrs. Heller was talking with several other women when the matter of politics was taken up. Heller is alleged to have said that there were two kinds of bigotry in this city. One was Protestant bigotry and the other was Catholic bigotry. Of the two she thought she preferred Protestant bigotry, but nevertheless she thought that the A. P. A. were carrying things altogether too far. This remark was faithfully reported to council No. 125 and the mandate of the howling derision protectorate went forth that she must be retired.

Tucker and Abbie C. Lighton, Omaha; Anna J. Rigger, Savannah, Ill.; and Mary J. Beadle. Of these Miss Greenlee, Mrs. Tucker and Mrs. Rigger were formerly connected with the Omaha schools.

One or two of the members of the board who voted for the retirement of Mrs. Heller stated that their action was on account of the fact that she was a married woman. If this were the case they must have experienced a remarkable change of heart, for thirty seconds thereafter they voted for the election of Mrs. Tucker, the wife of the superintendent of the Omaha Street Railway company who was elected without a dissenting vote.

HAYDEN BROS.

Men's Spring Suits for a Song.
We are overladen with spring and summer clothing. To close them out quickly we have placed them in two separate lots. Friday and Saturday we offer you:
Your choice of all $5.50, $9.50 and $10.00 men's all wool suits for $4.50.
Your choice of all $11.50, $12.50 and $15.00 men's fine suits, sack or frock styles, for $7.50. These suits represent some of the best garments in the house; they are rightly trimmed, cut and tailored, and the prices, in many instances, do not represent the bare cost of the material. The figures may seem ridiculously low, but we mean every word we say. There are no traps here for you. Will you look at 'em?

THE WASH GOODS SALE.
In the main floor annex still continues to draw the crowds, and prices are even lower than before on reasonable goods; we can't guarantee these reductions much longer.
LADIES $5.00, $6.00 AND $7.00 HATS, $2.95. The sale of elegantly trimmed hats at $2.95 fills the bill exactly. Many new creations are added for the sale tomorrow to keep this lot of $2.95 hats up to the standard of $5.00, $6.00 and $7.00 values.

HER IDENTITY IS DISCLOSED.

Facts Learned Concerning the Young Woman Who Suicided.
Coroner Maul has not yet decided when he will hold the inquest over the remains of Miss Middleton, the woman who committed suicide Wednesday at the Presbyterian hospital. The woman's value and trunk were taken to the morgue yesterday, but she had carefully provided that no trace of her real name should appear. One handkerchief was marked in the corner, but the letters had been partially effaced and were unrecognizable. The trunk was not marked, but a tag attached to the handle bore the address: "N. W. Cook, Omaha Medical Institute." No person of that name is known and the Omaha Medical Institute has long since ceased to exist. It has been learned that the name is Maul Vest, and her home was in Sundance, Wyo. Her relatives there have been notified and ask that the body be returned to them.

The clothing was all neat and well made, bearing the same evidence of refinement that characterized the actions of the young woman during her stay in the hospital. A number of her photographs, which bore the stamp of a Cheyenne photographer, was found among her effects. It is the portrait of a very pretty and attractive looking woman. In effort to be being made to locate "John Sharp," who signed the letters which were found on her person yesterday, but so far nothing has been heard of him.

That the woman was not financially embarrassed is indicated by the examination of her clothing, in which a roll of bills amounting to $75 was found sewed in the lining of her corset. The names of Mrs. M. E. Marston and Robert E. Harper were written on the inside of the bills. It is not believed that either of them is the name of the so-called Miss Middleton.

CHICAGO, Wyo., June 6.—(Special Telegram.)—The girl known as May Middleton, who committed suicide at Omaha yesterday, had been employed as a servant until two weeks ago in the family of E. W. Fowler, attorney general of Wyoming in this city. Her name is Maul Vest, and she came here from Sundance, Wyo., where her family is well known and highly respected. She has borne an excellent reputation and no suspicion of her having been connected with the case. She left here two weeks ago, saying she was going to Sundance by way of Grand Island and Newcastle. There is no one in this city by the name of John Sharp.

BABBERT IS PUT ON THE STAND

Testimony in the Criminal Libel Case Against Editor Raker.

The trial of the criminal libel suit, in which Joseph Babbitt, the foreman of the last grand jury, appears as prosecuting witness, was resumed in the district court yesterday. Babbitt showed considerable animus. It was developed that he had had a conversation with Editor Raker, giving him considerable information concerning women of the town, claiming that he knew that more of them lived outside than in the proscribed district.

Joe Babbitt was placed in the witness box. After the various issues of the Gretna Reporter had been allowed by the judge of the criminal section to be placed in evidence questions were put to ascertain why Editor Raker did not consider it necessary to publish a retraction. Babbitt was insisting that it should be done, because the school children of the neighborhood of Gretna played his children, telling them that "their pa had been in a saloon and drank beer" or talk of that nature.

Raker replied, so Babbitt testified, that even if the unsophisticated youth of the country would not comprehend such matters it was a legitimate matter of news, besides being true, that Babbitt had been to Fritz Wirth's, where there was guzzling of beer and playing of music. Raker further said that he had satisfactory evidence of the visits and he could not afford to take back what was the truth, nor did he consider it his duty to suppress such facts, although the party implicated was a pillar in one of the churches.

Babbitt averred that he was subject to all the passions of humanity. This interesting point came out in answer to a question relating to his visit the first week in March to Raker's office in Gretna, when Babbitt demanded a retraction of the statement that he had been visiting the dives of the burnt district.

"Do I understand you to say that you have no ill-feeling?" asked the attorney for the defense.

"I have the passions of humanity, but no ill-feeling," responded Babbitt. After a moment's reflection upon the details of what he had said and done to Raker he concluded to hedge and asked permission to qualify his statement. The state objected and no qualification was made.

Babbitt's knowledge of the burnt district became an interesting subject of inquiry. Testifying for himself he stated that he told Raker, at a public time, that he intended to chastise him for having published a story with reference to the life of a grand juror in Omaha, that he (Babbitt) knew the limits of the burnt district thoroughly and that he had not been there, as the article written by Raker stated was the case. Cross-examined as to the limits of the burnt district the witness suddenly forgot his testimony on this point and could not recall the locality.

"Did you not state that your children came rushing home after school and complained that they were being teased because their father had visited a disreputable place, and did you not visit such a place?" Babbitt was asked.

"I did," answered the witness, wringing in his chair.

Several offers of testimony were made by the defense, but the court ruled them out. The defense offered to show that Babbitt told a cabman on the night when he is alleged to have visited the burnt district, that he was in that quarter of town. This the court ruled out. An offer was made to prove that Babbitt took an oath as a grand juror to investigate the affairs of the burnt district. It was proposed to follow this up by showing that he visited the places in question and that later the grand jury failed to return indictments in these cases. This also the court ruled out.

The testimony in the Raker-Babbitt libel suit was continued at the session of the criminal court in the afternoon, the state concluding its testimony by calling several postmasters from Gretna, Elkhorn and Waterloo to show that the Reporter has a circulation. The court allowed leading questions to be asked on the theory that the witnesses were not biased. Before the defense began its testimony a motion was filed asking for instructions to have a verdict returned for Raker. The defense cited cases showing that not only must the state show there was malice, but it must show that the publication was false, whereas no such testimony had been offered. Charles Tuttle, one of Raker's attorneys, also presented authorities to the effect that Babbitt was a public servant, and so open to free criticism. The court said he had made up his mind on the question of malice and intended sending the case to the jury. The motion was overruled.

John Peters was the first witness called by the defense. He is a hackman with Stephenson; knew Babbitt and saw him drinking at a public place, and so open to free criticism. The court said he had made up his mind on the question of malice and intended sending the case to the jury. The motion was overruled.
