Stout and Hearty.

Our little baby, almost 21 years old, was taken with some form of Exerma when sho was about three mouths old. Her little body was one solid red from the scles of her feet to the crown of her head, and she seemed to be liverally aftre, screaming and clawing all the time. When she was about five mouths old, there was added to her affiliction, abscesses and supparation. We tried the local M. D.'s, and some other remedles without any relief. That read considerable about the Cuticuna Remedies, and one of our neighbors had used them, claiming that they were as good as claimed. I concluded to try them, and after the use of three or four boxes of Cuticuna, and about one and one half bottles of the Cuticuna Resouvery, with the

The rostrum was tastefully decorated with flowers, evergreens and colored electric lights. Prayer by Rev. C. V. Rocho opened the exercises. The prayer was translated into the sign language by Prof. G. L. Wyckoff. After this Prof. Wyckoff gave a short explanatory address upon the work and the system of teaching, Illustrating it by calling to the platform a class of little pupils who had been platform a class of little pupils who had been in the school for two years. The quickness with which the little people would seize upon Thomas Carroll, who was hurt by a fall from a telephone pole, states that his patient is work done by the teachers.

Commencing the exercises of the afternoowith little children under 10 years of age and concluding it with the orations and essays of the adult graduates, there was one thing that impressed all beholders, and that was the perfect grace of every gesture, a grace that was so winning and natural that It gave a charm to the presence of the pupils that compensated for their silent lips.

The graduating class numbered seven. The majority of them were able to articulate, and delivered their orations and read their essays in a loud monotone difficult to follow, and much of the thought would have been irrevocably lost had not the audience been generously supplied with printed copies of the speeches. Susan Hall of Centerville, Appanoose county, was the first of the graduates. She read in the sign language with sweet and winning grace an essay 'The Condition of Woman." Prof. Marshall sllowed her and articulated the words for the benefit of the audience. Miss Hall is a beautiful young lady, with not a touch of masculinity in her make up, yet she pro-claimed herself as being away along in advance of the new woman.

George Owen Carrell of Sigourney, Keokuk county, had two places on the program, the first an oration entitled "Municipal Reform," and the second the place of honor, the valedictorian of his class. He was able to articulate and deliver both speeches in a full, round voice, with odd inflections upon the words that made it frequently necessary stock of fine gents' furnishing goods at for the audience to turn to the printed slips prices from which all profit is cut. VISITED RUSSIA FOR HIS PEOPLE Land Where the Hand of Tyranny is Hardest on Them-Their Suffering Under the May Laws - To See Tolston Worth Crossing the Sea.

An audience that in extent and composi-tion was a decided compliment to the fame that year the liberally inclined Alexander II. was assassinated, and his second son. Alexander III. mounted the throne, and with him of the speaker assembled in Temple Israel as the power behind the throne, Pobyelencetlast evening to listen to a lecture by Dr. Joseph Krauskopf of Philadelphia on "An Evening with Count Tolstoi." The subject shattered remains of his cruelly murdered opened the way for an interesting portrayal of the true condition of the Jews in Russia by one who had but recently visited that country in their interest, and Dr. Krauskopf's observations were listened to with the greatest interest. In appearance the speaker suggests the scholar more than the traveler or divine. He is of medium height and his full, black beard frames a countenance in which the enthusiasm which he felt in his subject was constantly reflected. Dr. Krauskopf dated his narration from the beginning of his voyage to the old country. His mission was to do something to better the condition of his race in the dominions of the czar. The circumstances of his passage were not such as to him with a hopeful spirit. It occurred that among his fellow passengers was Baron von Rosen, minister of Russia to Mexico, and to this representative of the Russian government he applied for advice in regard to his future course. The baron doubted whether he would even be admitted to Russian tion. Thousands chose the easiest path. Over 1,000,000 emigrated during the first year of the coveration of the May laws, and how many ten permit from the minister of the interior. The Russian, moreover, declared that it was not his government, but the Jews who to blame for the existing conditions. One-third of the passport laws referred to the Jews, alhough they did not comprise one-twentieth part of the population, and the most insulting discriminations were made against them. Only 10 per cent of the number of applicants for admission to the lower schools were permitted to be Jews, only 3 per cent were considered for admission into the judicial department of the university and only to SIOUX CITY, June 7 .- (Special Telegram.) ments. OPERATION OF MAY LAWS. At this point Dr. Krauskopf explained in detail the history and effect of the famous May laws of Ignatioff. The Jews were not originally permitted to live in Russia proper, but by Russian conquest of Poland and Turkey large numbers of them were brought | tite and promote a healthy action of the dinto the country, and by 1881 Russia had a lewish population of several millions. many scores were Jewe, or rather ex-Jews, since they had renounced their church, of the lines pursued by the government to drive the Jews back to the district known area (ar too small to maintain them, force th one-third of them to conversion, the best one-third to emigration, and the worst one-third to starvation. The man to carry out this hellish plot was Ignatioff, and the horrors which accompanied the execution of the infamous law were depicted by the speaker most vividly. Thousands of homes were broken up and tens of thousands of bright careers blasted. Family ties were cruelly rent asander. Possessions painfully acquired were lost over night. Indescribat violences and outrages were perpetrate Nothing Jewish was sacred. For the Je thousands froze or starved or 21 ke 16d or were knowled to death no man would ever know. The speaker allowed that the blame for these cruelties was not to be laid at the door. of all the Russians. No people were more hospitable or kind hearted than the average Russians as long as they were in civillar clothes. But the moment they donned the uniform of the state or church the change of feeling was manifest. Each uniformed officer or robed priest seemed to think himself a miniature czar, whose watchword was unquestioning obedience to those above and unpitying tyranny over those below. LIKE AN OLD PROPHET.

It was in Moscow that the speaker met Count Tolstoi. He was invited to call in the evening when the peasants were just return-ing from the fields. The great man, whose name was feared in palaces and anothematized in cathedrals, but uttered with rev-erence by thousands of Russians, was as simple in manners as in his attire. There was an expression of sternness in every awed Russia into respecting the Jew in the mien, and of firmness in every lineament, with the fires of humanity beaming from his eyes.
