OMAHA, June 7 .- To the Editor of The Bee: Absence from the city prevented me from replying to your article in last Monday's paper, which was called out by the presence of my friend, Charles M. Jesup of New York. I will go over a few of the main points, and will be so plain and definite that he who runs may read.

MR. IRVINE'S REJOINDER.

First-Concerning the woman who until lately bore my name, I will say that absolutely nothing that she would say or The Bee print would induce me to belittle her name in public print.

Second—As to L. J. Bird, whose letters you print, and whom you quote in your edi-torial. I have something very definite to say. Alias Bird was dismissed from the City Mission society for saying, without the slightest foundation for it, just about what she says in her latters which you published. In substantiation of this statement I refer to Mrs. Bainbridge, who superintends the work of forty lady missionaries, and to the records of the City Mission society.

Third—As to the ministers whose names are mentioned by Miss Bird. Rev. Tyndall was forced to resign from the City Mission, one of the reasons being his persistent persecution of myself. The executive board of the society wrote me recently disclaiming any responsibility whatever of his utterances. He is now without a pastorate. The second name she mentions is that of Rev. Sproull. Mr. Sproull was forced to resign from the Church of the Sea and Land for utter incompetency, and his antagonism to me arises from the fact that I was called to the pastorate of the Sea and Land church, and in a few months the change was so apparent that more converts came into church in one day than had come dur-many years. It is utterly false that r Mr. Tyndall or his elders requested my emoval from the Broome Street tabernacic, t is true that Mr. Sproull did, but he was emoved, instead. For information on this oint I refer to the entire board of trustees nd elders. Fred Bruckbauer is chairman and elders. Fred Bruckbauer is chairman of board of trustees, 61 Henry street, is his Fourth-Miss Bird and these two men have en forced from their positions, and are out New York entirely. None of them could turn if they so desired. On the other been forced from their positions, and are out of New York entirely. None of them could return if they so desired. On the other hand, my record is such behind me in this, the oldest and largest City Mission society on the American continent, that they would make a position for me tomorrow if I desired to return. Its president, directors and lady missionaries are all my warm personal friends. I leave an unbiased public to judge friends. Assailed by slander and the tongue of strife, His only answer was a blameless life. ALEXANDER F. IRVINE. NOTE BY THE EDITOR: The Bee has no controversy with Mr. Irvine and we trust his explanation is satisfactory to his friends t may be true that his lawyer has an office in the city hall of Stamford, but the mayer of Stamford says the town hall is closed all the year except when there are town meetings and such a hearing as proposed would be preposterous. It is true also that the divorce trial was before a reputable judge and in the presence of some very able lawyers, but insamuch as there was no defense and no one appeared as witnesses except Mr. Irvine and his two hired spotters, the decree againt Mrs. Irvine does not necessarily vindicate the conduct of her husband. Mr. Irvine's intimation that The Bee is dealing unjustly by him is contradicted by the wide publicity it has given to everything it has been asked

Murat had changed his hussar's cap for a crown, and another light cavalry man might have done as much. However, all those dreams were driven away by Waterloo, and, although I was not able to write my name upon history, it is suffi-ciently well known by all who served with me in the great wars of the empire.

What I want to tell you tonight is about the very singular affair which first started me upon my rapid upward course, and which had the effect of establishing a secret bond between the emperor and myself. There is you are listening to one who has seen history from the inside. I am talking about what my ears have heard and my eyes have seen so you must not try to confute me by quoting the opinions of some student or man of the pen who has written a book of history or memoirs. There is much which is unknown by such people, and much which never will be known by the world. For my own part, I could tell you some very say prising things were it discreet to do so. The facts which I am about to relate to you tonight were kept secret by me during the emperor's lifetime because I gave him my promise that they should be, but I do not think that there can be any harm now in my telling the remarkable part which I played.

You must know, then, that at the time of

You must know, then, that at the time of the treaty of Tilsit I was a simple lieutenant in the Tenth Hussars, without money or interest. It is true that my appearance and my gallantry were in my favor, and that I had already won a reputation as being one of the best swordsmen in the army, but among the host of brave men who surrounded the emperor it needed more than this to insure a rapid career. I was confident, however, hat my chance would come, though I never hen he was at the very pinnacle of his ca-eer. He had in three successive campaigns numbled Austria, crushed Prussia, and hurled the Russian armies across the Niemen. The old buildog over the channel was still growling, but he could not get very far from his kennel. If we could have made a perpetual peace at that moment France would have taken a higher place than any nation since the days of the Romans. So I have heard the wise folks say, though, for my own part, I had other things to think of. All the girls were glad to see the army back after its long absence, and you may be sure that I had my share of any favors which were

It is, as you know, but a little place buried in the heart of the forest and it was wonderful at this time to see I princes who thronged round Napoleon like puppies round their master, each hoping that some bone might be thrown to him. There was more German than French to be heard in the street, for those who had helped us in the late war had come to beg for a reward, and those who had opposed us had come to try and escape their punishment. And all the time our little man, with his pale face and cold gray eyes, was riding to the hunt every morning, silent and broading, all of them following in his train in the hope that some word would escape him. And then when the humor seized him he would throw a 100 square miles to that man, or snip as much off the other, round off one kingdom by a river, or curtail another by a chain of mountains. That was how he used to do business, this little artilleryman whom we had raised so high with our sabers and our bayonets. He was very civil to us always, for he knew where his power came from. We knew, also, and showed it by the way in which we carried ourselves. We were agreed, you understand, that he was the finest leader in the world, but we did not forget that he had the finest men to lead.

> now many conjectures did I make as to what t was which the emperor could want of me! I paced up and down my little room, in a fever of anticipation. Sometimes I thought that perhaps be had heard of the guns which we had taken at Austerlitz, but then there were so many who had taken guns at Austerlitz, and two years had passed since the battle. Or it might be that he wished to reward me for my affair with the alde-de-camp of the Russian emperor. But then, again, a cold fit would seize me, and I would fancy that he had sent for me to reprimand me. There were a few duels which he might have taken in ill part, and there were one or two little jokes in Paris since the peace. But no! I considered the words of Lasalle. "If he had need of a brave man," said La-salle. It was obvious that my colonel had some idea of what was in the wind. If he had not known that it was to my advantage he would not have been so cruel as to con-gratulate me. My heart glowed with joy as this conviction grew upon me, and I sat down to write to my mother and to tell
