visit to the ONLY LIVING SURVIVOR

Now Has a Museum of Indian Relics in the Identical Cabin Which Was Her Home at the Time of the Massacre.

When Sheriff Hazen was at Lake Okoboji last week he made the acquaintance of Miss Abbie Gardner, who has acquired considerable fame in the northern part of the state, and especially among the visitors to the twin lakes, by reason of her romantic experiences in the '50s. At that time she was a mere child and lived with her parents in a little cabin on the shore of Okoboji. The cabin still stands where it used to, and Miss Gardner, instead of eking out an humble livelihood by hoeing corn with her own hands, the way her mother used to do, is growing rich by showing admiring tourists the hut and showing piles and piles of Indian relics.

According to her story, in the year 1856 the Sioux Indians rushed down upon the little colony that had erected cabins on the lake shore, and exterminated it, all but three girls, one of whom was Miss Gardner, being taken away. The reason for her escape lay in the fact that she showed a bravery which was not common in her sex. She was taken away with admiration. They scalped her mother, her father, her brother and two sisters before her eyes and then took her away in a canoe, to ornament the hut, until several years later, when the governor of Minnesota induced some friendly Indians to buy her from her captors and give her back her own name.

All the cabins but her father's had been destroyed by the Indians, but in some way that one had been spared. She obtained possession of it and started within it a museum which draws a great many half dollars from the visitors. She obtained an appropriation from the legislature of $4,000 by means of which a monument, fifty-five feet in height, has been erected, and is to be dedicated with appropriate ceremonies during the latter part of next month.

Sureties on the Anxious Bench.

A rather interesting suit on trial in the district court yesterday was that of Peo Wiese against Morris Bros. and others, or at least it is interesting to half a dozen men of means who are included in the "and others." A note for $1,000 given by the firm of Morris Bros. in September, 1893, was secured by the signatures of John T. Hazen, J. N. Casady, W. H. Knepper, F. H. Guinn and A. H. Good.

It fell due in September, 1894, but Morris Bros. secured an extension of another year by giving Wiese a mortgage on some town property here in Council Bluffs. The firm became insolvent, and then Wiese executed a lively hustle to get his money. Morris told him he would pay him all if he would give him a lien on the property. Wiese refused to wait, and immediately commenced an action in the district court, making all the sureties on the note defendants along with the firm. One of the sureties stated that he was approached with a request for his signature to the note he was told that the firm was solvent, and that William Fitzgerald would also be affixed to it, but none of them were. The sureties claim that they are released anyway from their responsibility for the note by the note by the extension, which was made without their consent, and with the security afforded by a mortgage. The case was not finished at the hour of evening adjournment yesterday.

Yesterday Judge Smith discharged the petit jury for the term.
