Mr. Saunders opined that the comptroller was the legal personage on whom devolved the duty of notifying the council in such a case and it had as yet received no notifieation from him.

City Attorney Connell discussed the situa-City Attorney Connell discussed the stud-tion at some length. He said that nothing was to be gained by evading the issue and the council might just as well face the situa-tion just as it existed. It must be met or later and it devolved on the council to take such steps as would enable the city to protect its interests. No one could feel more kindly toward Mr. Bolln than himself, but at the same time the condition of affairs in the city treasurer's office was a matter of while notoriety. Action had been delayed while the bondsmen were making their inwestigation, but they had declared that it was their purpose to do nothing. The effect of this determination was that hey left the city to hold the sack and to shoulder all of the responsibility. QUESTION OF OFFICIAL DUTY.

Continuing, Mr. Connell declared that if the treasurer were not doing his duty the mayor and council had a duty to perform and it should be fearlessly faced and dis-posed of. It would be extremely embarposed of. It would be extremely enforce ransing for the council to declare the office of eity treasurer vacant unless the vacancy could be filled at once. If Mr. Bolin were to be removed the question of who should be appointed in his place should be given im-mediate consideration. He understood that it was for this purpose that the mayor wished to obtain the sentiment of the council. If it intended to declare the office vacant the mayor would then have time to decide on the appointment of a successor and the new treasurer could then be confirmed at the regular council meeting tonight and enter on the duties of hir office the next morning.

It was a source of embarrassment, in his opinion, that the question of politics entered into the matter to a considerable de gree. The candidate who should obtain the appointment for the remaining six months of the year would have a decided ad-vantage in his canvass for the subsequent term. He urged that it was a time when the mayor and council should lay aside all personal preferences and processes and do personal preferences and interests and d what was best for the welfare of the city In case a new appointment was to be made immediate act on should be taken, so that the new appointee could have his bonds ready for approval and be ready to step into ready for approval and be ready to step into the vacant office at once. In reply to a direct question Mr. Connell stated that in his opinion the present bonds-men of Mr. Bolln would not be liable for any future irregularity or shortage in his conduct of the office. They could go into court with the plea that the council had been derel ct in its duty. Members had re-fused to take action when the condition of affairs in the office was a matter of public notoriety. The council was equally renotoriety. The council was a matter of public aponsible for the sins of omissions as well as commission. If the bondsmen had wished to continue their obligation and had unani-. Bolln in office they might be held responsible, but they had done nothing of the

The cash items, consisting of checks, memoran- da slips, etc., which he found in the drawer amounted to $30,757.52, making a total in cash items of $32,611.75. The county commissioners held their annual meeting last evening and raised the rate of taxation from 15 to 167-10 mills. This was done to raise money to pay for the Douglas addition judgments, as the board was threatened by a mandamus if a levy was not made and with an injunction if one was. The board has compromised by levying e part of the sum required to pay the judgments.

The county attorney rendered an opinion concerning the right of the commissioners to make a levy large enough to pay the Douglas addition judgments. He said his opinion was that the board could exceed the estimate made in January of this year, provided the excess of the levy above the estimate was devoted to the payment of judgments against the coupty, nor could the entire levy exceed $1.50 per $100 valuation unless the people of the county authorized such excess by a vote.

A resolution was adopted fixing the rate of assessment thus for the year beginning July 1, 1895; General fund, 9 mills; road fund, 2 mills; bridge fund, 1 mill; boud sinking fund, 17-10 mills; soldiers' relief fund, 3-10 mill; Douglas addition judgment fund, 27-10 mills; total, 167-10 mills. men had assured him in a personal inteview that he would not consider himself ra sponsible for any further shortage. Mr. Prince contended that the counci could take no action except at the request of the bondsmen. He had understood that they had decided to make the shortage good on condition that the city would allow Me Bolln to serve out his term and apply hi salary to the compensation of his bondsmen

Mr. Kennard said that it was his idee hat immediate action should be taken in order that the mayor might send in the name of Mr. Bolln's successor to the counc at the evening meeting. In accordance with this view he had prepared a resolution which he wished to have read and voted on

A long debate preceded the reading of the resolution. Mr. Holmes said chat he thought there should be more definite informatio submitted in regard to the shortage before the office was declared vacant. The books should be checked up properly and an official report presented to the council. Mr. Marcer suggested that the comptroller be sent for, as he was the official on whom the duty of notifying the council devolved and this was seconded by Prince and Black. who declared that the council had no official knowledge that a shortage existed.

SAUNDERS OPPOSED TO ACTION. At this point Saunders defended Mr. Bolly

and protested against any action on the par of the council. He said that there was more than one question to be considered. The city council was presumed to look after the in terests of the taxpayers, but members shoul injury to Mr. Holln or to his bondsmen. It might be true that there was a slight shortage in the cash account in the treasurer's office, but he had been informed books had been examined and that they had balanced to a penny ... He based his plea for Mr. Bolln on his previous service had handled millions of dollars for the city and county and this was the first in of the sort which had been brought to the notice of the public. The newspaper and certain individuals had criticised Ma Bolln severely for a practice which had al ways been general in this and other cities It might be contrary to law, but it was char acterized by no evil intent. The bondame: of Mr. Bolln, by nearly a unanimous vote, had requested him to remain in office as his two vote was concerned. Mr Saunders said that he would not be a party to any action that tended to blacken a man's character unnecessarily. So long as there was nothing to show that there was a shortage as far as the council was concerned, or that a fraud had been attempted, there was no reason to by hasty. He referred to the no reason to be hasty. He referred to the sympathy which Mr. Bollu received from his friends and neighbors as a good reason why his shortcomings should be condoned. He did not want the city to lose a penny, but he understood that it was the intention of the bondsmen to make up all deficiencies, so there was no reason why immediate action should be taken. Is conclusion he advanced the theory that Mr. Bolln's irregularities had been committed while he was temporarily inanno and declared that he had never heard of his dissipations until since the fact of his delinquency had been made public.

Mr. Kment wanted to know whether Mr. clin's bondsmen were higher in authority than the city government, or the people of Omaha? What right had the council to act one their recommendations in a matter in which they had a purely personal and finan-cial interest? Mr. Bolin had clearly violated the law. His bondsmen were evidently trying to conceal the true state of affairs and the were domanding that the city council should take some action to protect their in-

Mr. Olsen could not explain these inconsistencies, simply relieving himself by saying that he had given the figures as he found them. Mr. Kennard called for a vote on his rescluion, but Saunders and Edwards urged that the resolution was unnecessary. Mr. Bolin has intimated to them that he was willing to resign if the council wished him to do so and they asked that he should be given that opportunity. Kennard finally stated that he had been assured on reliable authority that Mr. Bolln would present his resignation to the council that evening and with that understanding he was willing to withdraw his reso-

That was finally agreed to. A call was then saued for a special meeting of the council at 2 o'clock and Mr. Edwards was made a committee of one to see Mr. Bolla in the meantime and obtain a positive assurance as to his intentions.

WANT THE LIST.

Another resolution was introduced which bore the signatures of Mercer, Kment and Kennard. It provided that since erroneous statements had been made by a public prin oncerning irregularities and overdrofts of sat ary on the part of city officials the comptroller should be instructed to furnish a com-plete list of the officials who had profited in this way, including those who had paid up heir obligations.

This resolution raised a general scramble in which it was immediate's apparent that sev-oral of the councilmen did not relish such a procedure. Saunders moved as a substitute that the three councilmen who had demanded the publication of the names should be relieved from the imposition of which they complained and characterized the resolution the purest piece of political buncombe that he had yet seen.

Edwards put in a plea for the beneficiaries of the city treasurer by saying that they had a perfect right to borrow money from Mr. Bolln if they pleased and he was willing to give it to them. No one would suppose that they had any idea that these favors came the municipal treasury, but they had indulged in the undisturbed belief that Mr. Bolln was advancing the money out of own pocket. This statement elicited a burst of derision and Kennard made a few vigorous remarks. He said that it was not right for the members of the council who had profited by Mr. Bolln's good nature to endeavor to throw the entire odium of the transaction on him. Morcover, it had been stated by the publication in question that he had hypothecated his salary. This was emphatically false. He did not know as there was any particular odium attached to it, but he did not want the impression to go out that his business was in such a predicament that he had to borrow money out of the city treasury. For these reasons he demanded that he and his colleagues should be set right by the publica-tion of the entire list without favor.

men. Among other things the writer says: "Do not pay any attention to the rot you see in the newspapers. Ever since our ar-rival Courtney has been making monkeys of the English newspaper men. The crew has been changed every day and every stroke known has been rowed. The second day we were here we made the course in seven seconds less than the time in the race rowed last year and nineteen seconds less than the year before. The boys and their friends are all confident of winning. The Americans all feel sure Cornell will win. Courtney is very strict and will not allow the crew to be introduced to anybody; otherwise all are enjoying themselves. Con-siderable money will be placed on the race." LON DON, June 25.—The Pall Mall Ga-zette, commenting on the Cornell crew, says they have not increased their reputation while on the Thames and that they are not thought to be winners.
