INTERESTING EXERCISES AT THE ANNUAL COMMENCEMENT OF ST. FRANCIS ACADEMY.

SIX IN THE GRADUATING CLASS.

After the Exercises Were Concluded Several Medals Were Awarded for Excellence in Scholarship, Deportment, Etc.

A large crowd gathered in the assembly rooms of St. Francis' academy last evening to witness the graduation of its annual class of young women, members of the class of 1895.

The rooms were handsomely decorated for the occasion, and the platform made a handsome frame and background for the pleasing pictures that followed one another in rapid succession. The program was opened by a piano selection by six young ladies and a chorus. Miss Eleanor Callahan followed with the salutatory. After another piano selection by six young ladies, Miss Katherine Lerch read a pleasing essay on "Life's Optimal State." Mrs. Nettie Flint, who is accounted one of the best speakers in the academy, followed with a rendition of "The Heart of Old Hickory," and a chorus by the vocal class which followed brought forth a hearty encore.

An essay by Miss Mary Rouse, entitled "Fidelity Laws Imposed in a Dowry," was read by Miss Myrtle Keefe. One of the finest numbers on the program was a pantomime sketch, "Give Me Thy Heart," which was given by Miss Katherine Lerch and Miss Nettie Flint.

Prizes were awarded to the various young ladies going through movements typifying the words. After one of Hadyn's symphonies had been played by four young ladies, Miss Margaret Morris, a soloist, sang "The Nineteenth Century Contant." Then came another song and pantomime entitled "America." The national hymn was sung by a quartet of young ladies.

Prizes were awarded to the various young ladies. A symphony of Beethoven's was followed by "The Promises of Years," an essay by Miss Margaret Morris. A closing chorus followed and then came the awarding of honors and graduating medals. The valedictory was delivered by Miss Anna McGargill, who read the medals and prizes awarded to the various young ladies.

Graduating gold medals: Misses Katherine Lerch, Anna Kilmarit, Eleanor Callahan and Mary Rouse.

Gold medal for Christian doctrine, donated by Mother M. Collins, Miss Anna Clark.

Gold medal for deportment and scholarship, senior department, day school: Miss Anna McGargill.

Gold medal for attendance and scholarship, senior department, day school: Miss Margaret Morris.

Gold medal for ladylike deportment and observance of rules, boarding school: Miss Emma Towle.
