And with that the matter passed from my mind; the more completely as I heard at that moment the sound of the king's approach, and went into the court yard to receive him. He brought with him Roquelaure, de Vic. Erard the engineer, and some others, but none whom he did not know that I should be glad to receive. He dined well, and after dinner amused himself with seeing the young, ing a deep breath raised the cup to his lips. Mississippi.

be glad to receive. He dined well, and after dinner amused himself with seeing the young men ride at the ring, and even rode a course himself with his usual skill; that being, if I remember rightly, the last occasion of which I ever saw him take a lance. Before supper he walked for a time in the hall with Billery, for whom he had sent; and after supper, pronouncing himself tired, he dis-missed all and rettred with me to his chamber. Here we had some talk on a sub-ject that I greatly dreaded—I mean his in-fatuation for Mme. de Conde; but about 11 o'clock he yawned, and, after thanking me for a reception which he said was quite to his mind, he bade me go ro bed. I was half way to the door when he called me back. "Why, Grandmaster," he said, pointing to the little table by the head of this bed on which his night drinks stood, "you might be going to drown me. Ching dynasty." Li Hung Chang's enormous wealth, Ho Tung says, has much to do with the great viceroy's declining popularity. Besides, thera is a stain on the honor of the family, as the viceroy's brother was compelled to resign from office on account of a general belief that he was corrupt. The Chinese believe Li Hung Chang is the richest man in the world and that his wealth has much to do
