FHE QUESTION
With the young unmarried man of today (and all other days) is: What can I do to give me a successful start in life? How can I get into business and begin to make money for myself and support a wife? That's the problem; for the solution, which is easy, and is no way interferes with present occupation, address, Chauncey M. Depew and David B. Hill. For years these two experts have vainly tried for first honors, only to meet defeat when victory was but a single step further. Since 1890 they have ranked among the first five experts of each year, alternating ranking over one another. In doubtes the combination of these two players has proved invincible since 1892. The long, deliberate strokes of Hobart are offset by the sharp, snappy net play of Hovey, and constant practice has brought their team play to a high standard of excellence. This superiority was clearly demonstrated at the recent tournament at West Newton, where the two Americans won Copyrighted, 1895, by S. S. McClure, Limited.) NEW YORK, July 24 .- The tennis season of 1895 will be a red letter one in the history of the game in this country. For the first time since the game was started here two British experts of the highest rank have crossed the Atlantic to try conclusions with us on our own grounds. Never has an at the double game, and stated that they could American competition, except the Newport tourney of last year, attracted as mush attention as did the West Newton meeting some weeks ago. Here it was that ing some weeks ago. Here it was that one weeks ago. Here it was that cups will be theirs. Their victory would Dr. Joshua Pim, champion of all England. And in considering Pim's victory it must be remembered that R. D. Wrenn, the American champion, was not in the competition. Wrenn is undoubtedly the foremost of our experts. He it was who successfully stopped from, and his cool, steady play has often brought him to victory over a more bril-M. F. In a short while the eyes of all tennis ex-perts will be fastened upon Newport, and the beginning of the national championships on August 2 will see such a gathering of the cians as has seldom been witnessed there. The tournament of 1895 will be noticeable for the probable absence of many of the "old-timers," the veterans, the men who have made tennis what it is, but who are now content to look on and see the younger generation do the work and win the prizes. Old-time players like H. W. Slocum, jr. Howard A. Taylor, R. Percy Knapp, Oliver S.Campbell and Joseph S. Clark have ceased practice, but usually turn up during the course of the meeting to talk over the good old times and tell the youngsters what fierce contests they used to have. Percy Knapp will again talk over his famous five-hour match with Wrenn, when the spectators who had gone to lunch returned to find the contestants still fighting out the same set. But there will once more appear upon the

From the far-away Pacific slope come re-ports of the excellent playing of Samuel Hardy, the California champion, but as he has never competed in the east no compara-tive idea of his merits can be obtained.

THE SCENE OF THE CONTESTS. As a national spectacle the annual tennia championships held at Newport in August of for some time to keep themselves in full each year take rank with such American practice, but usually turn up during the events as the great university foot ball games or intercollegiate meetings, or such English spectacles as the annual cricket match at Lord's grounds, in London, or the Derby. The place of the tournament, which is also the "place aux dames," is the at-tractive grounds of the Newport Casino, reached from the street by a covered way, from which one emerges into a horseshoe turf two veterans of many contests, who will once more strive for honors, Richard Stevens of Hoboken and Valentine G. > AMERICAN AND ENGLISH TENNIS. The visit of J. Pim and H. S. Mahoney to this country recently and the prolonged stay of M. F. Goodbody with us last year has given an impetus to expert American tennis that nothing but international competitions could do. We Americans contest among ourselves, and after the national tourney of each year we know who the best man is. But, as compared with the Englishmen, we have not had any sure means of testing our comparative merits. The several visits of ex-Champion Richard D. Sears and Dr. James Dwight to the other side taught us something. On these trips the American representatives tried con-clusions with the English cracks and proved themselves no mean antagonists. In singles Sears did tairly well and was said to rank within the first dozen or so of the Britishers, while in the doubles he and Dr. Dwight did considerably better and were ranked about sixth. When Oliver S. Campbell went abroad in 1892 he tried conclusions with most of the British players, and although not in his best form obtained a ranking within the first ten of their foremost experts. It has always been claimed by those of our players who have crossed the river that the English conditions were more or less of the English conditions were more or less of a handicap to players brought up on our courts. In the first place the English turt being so much more luxurient the bound of the ball was entirely different, and second, the will succeed in holding the singles championship. If he can retain the championship this year the cup will belong to him and his heirs forever, and the association will have reached the semi-final round, where he was honors, came over last year, and after play-ing in various preliminary tourneys with fair success, he competed at Newport, where his victories for a time caused Americans to hold their breath in the fear that the na-tional supremacy would go to the visitor. But after beating successfully F. H. Hovey, Clarence Hobart and W. A. Larned, Goodbody at last met his match in R. D. Wrenn,
