The Omaha Guards have broken camp and gone home, after spending two delightful weeks at Manawa. It was with sincere regret that the other campers saw them de part, for the young men have won golden opinions and made lasting friends during their brief stay. Their conduct has been medeled upon Chesterfieldian patterns, and they have become a prominent and delightful feature in the social life at the lake. They proved themselves to be gentlemen at all times. The guards themselves and the hundreds who met them have great expectations for next season, when they will spend months instead of weeks in camp at Manawa under more favorable conditions. Their stay this season would have been much longer were it not for the fact that they were obliged to begin active drilling for the encampment at Hast-

Funeral of Sam Morrison.

Last evening, when the shadows were softly gathering over the city, an immense concourse of people assembled around No. 3 engine house, where the venerable Sam Morrison, the blind veteran fireman, had made his home for so many years. The funeral services were held in Estp's undertaking cooms, Rev. Mr. Hooker of the Trinity Methchurch officiating. The rooms were filled, as was the sidewalk and street. services were brief and impressive. The minister spoke feelingly and eloquently of the long years of faithful service rendered by the dead man, and told again how he was stricken with stricken with blindness while in the discharge of his duty. His gentleness and un-complaining fortitude while bearing his heavy affliction were made subjects some tender remarks. When the services were completed the casket, covered with flowers and flags, was borne When to the hearse by the firemen. The members of the fire department, the Veteran Firemen's association to the number of about fifty, and sion passed. An immense number of carriage joined the cortege as it passed the engin-bouse, and the line reached almost the fell length of Onkland avenue. The interment was made in Fairview. The services at the grave were brief, merely the ritual of the church. With the first sounds of the clods rattling upon the coffin hundreds of heads were bared and bowed, and a stient, but loquent tribute was paid to the brave old

Colonel Reed's Benefit. The Grand Plaza at Lake Manawa was illed with a delighted and enthusiastic rowd last night to participate in the bene it given Colonel Reed by the campers who save enjoyed his hospitality all summer. The tender epistles that the gallant colonel has been writing to the ladies through the columns of The Bee have had a marked effect and made him extremely popular with the ladies and brought them out by hundreds last night. During the after-noon the ladies camping at the lake took possession of the pavilion and transformed it into a veritable bower of flowers, flags and wreathes. An artistic signwriter was pressed ato service, and Colonel Reed's name, beau fully lettered in green and gold, was placed in a frame and suspended over the music tand. The frame was hidden entirely with stand. The frame was hidden entirely with flowers and leaves. A splendid program was rendered, wholly by local talent. The originality of the idea, the novelty of it all, added to the intrinsic merit of those who took part, caught the crowd. The capture was complete, and more enthusiastic encores were never heard in the pavilion. The only incident that seemed to cause a particul of regret was the utter

Congressman Doolittle Sure They Are a

Coming People. TAKING AFTER AMERICA AT RAPID GAIT

Proposes to Coin Money of Such Charneter as to Facilitate Commerce with Oriental and South American States.

Congressman Doolittle of Washington was n the city for a few hours yesterday aftersoon on his way home from the national capital, where he has been to look after some matters connected with congressional legislation. At the present time Mr. Doolittle resides at Tacoma. Years ago he was a resident of Nebraska. In the past summer Mr. Doolittle visited

Japan and was with Congressman Mercer of this city. Mr. Doolittle spent several weeks in Japan and was highly pleased with the trip. He is a firm believer in the prosperous future of the Japanese. He says that the country is developing very rapidly and that cause a partical of regret was the utter failure of the crowd to get Colonel Reed to come out and make a speech. His modesty the people are taking on American ways much more rapidly than the Chinese. They was too great, and when the calls begun to be made for him it took two or three of the strongest men on the grounds to prevent him less they have few if any equals. In speaking ies they have few if any equals. In speaking of this Mr. Doollitle cited an instance. In one of the principal cities a couple of years ago a wealthy Japanese was putting up a large manufacturing plant. Before he had it completed an American happened along with a couple of gas engines, one a small one and the other large, capable of driving the whole of the machinery of the establishment. The American tried to sell his larger engine, but only succeeded, after explaining the working of the machine, in selling the smaller one. The next year the same American visited the Japanese again and was some-what astonished to see the machinery of the plant driven by gas engines. The proprietor had built several gas engines, exact duplicates of the one which he had purchased the year before, only larger and more powerful. The little engine had been imitated, even to the brass plate upon which was the name and location of the maker. SUGGESTION TO SILVER MEN.

In speaking of monetary affairs Mr. Doo ittle said: "The silver using countries of the world are those of the Orient and it so happens that they are the only ones with which the United States can hope to build up commercial relations. The English countries have taken our breadstuffs and meats when they could not purchase as cheaply else-where. There is no promise of the relations the attention of manufacturers and merchants must be directed in establishing and maintaining trade relations with the Orient and the states of South America. This result could be brought about by the removal of the three obstacles which now stand in the way and which may be named as follows: "First, by congressional legislation of the coinage of the Japanese yen, or dollar, a standard dollar that would contain 416% grains of silver, corresponding with the Mex ican dollar. Place on one side, if you like, the American eagle, or any other device, and on the reverse side place some oriental character denoting the amount of silver in the coin. The American trade dollar, so-called was a failure in the east, and for the reason that it carried no declaration of character lish their credit. The United States wouls never be called upon to redeem them. The English have for a long time purchased silver bullion in the United States and Mexico, shipped it to England, where it has been coined into such dollars, and now that coun-E. P. I would have legislation so that when a consul was selected, if he was found suitable to the place and in sympathy with the conditions, he would not be changed with every incoming administration, having it so that consis, when they had learned the language of the country to which they were sent, would be allowed opportunities for promotion. There residence and the grounds. There should also be a commissioner of commerce, who should be familiar with the opportunities for increasing trade relations with the United States and other countries. This man should have a permanent tenure of office, and, above all, foreign representatives should make for eign representation respectable. Third, there should be congressional legislation looking to building up the merchant marine of this country. The people of the orient will eagerly avail themselves of the opportunity of trading with us as soon as such an opportunity is presentel."

Speaking of the political methods of Japan in a conversation yesterday, he said that while modeled largely upon those prevailing in the United States, the franchise was necessarily more limited.

"Wemen can vate in Japan" said he "but

"Women can vote in Japan," said he, "bi as there can only be one vote in a famili and as that vote can be cast by any membe and as that vote can be cast by any member agreed upon by the family, it does not often happen that the male head of the house is magnanimous enough to permit his wife or his daughter to do the voting. Wife, son or daughter can east the bailot. The son must be over 21 years old and the daughter over 18, and must have certain other important qualifications. Property and educational qualifications are required. No house can claim the right to vote until the government is paid annually the sum of $15, never less and frequently more. No one can vote who is unable to read and write the Japanese language. The Japanese love to exercise their franchise, because they are intensely patriotic, and the government has taken advantage of this fact to make it a remarkable deterrent of crime. Any person of either sex who has been convicted of a crime and imprisoned, even half a day, at any time during the previous seven years must clapse of the proposition of the right to vote. Seven years must clapse of the contraction of the contraction of the contraction of the right to vote. during the previous seven years, cannot claim the right to vote. Seven years must clapse after the conviction for any minor offense before the infortunate is purged and the ban lifted. This tends to make the Japanese of all classes very careful about infringing on the laws. The commission of a felony puts an eternal stop to the political franchise."
