

WOMAN'S DOMAIN.

HOUSE PARTY ROBES.

Picturesque Costumes Designed for Autumn Functions.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—House parties are now in order, and longer sojournings out of town require suitable (picturesque) costumes. These costumes are being designed to bloom out in beautiful autumn tints, trimmings being in the main fuchsias or frills in soft mulls, or else dainty blue collars, in many fantastic shapes, of crisp muslin and batiste, edged with lace.

This brings about a happy and seasonable result, without looking as if things were rushed too much, and the fact that their garnitures are extremely becoming will doubtless make them very popular.

The dress may be confined solely to house and evening gown, but it will be here, in frilled white mull and in silk muslin, edged with the lace; and the next thing one can reasonably expect will be a sudden dimming in the size of sleeves, and strong evening textures will be exclusively splendid silks and satins. Skirts, also, will be plain, or else decorated with quaint muslin flounces, and the shaping of party bodices will lean toward the pointed corsage, with round neck, and a little ruffle, or a ruffle by Marie Antoinette and the ladies of her court.

FOR TALL AND STOUT WOMEN.

Among the revised fashions for early autumn costume is evinced a strong liking for the long 1820 shawllet skirt. One should be tall, however, to carry it off, as otherwise the effect will be grotesque, and for the same reason short figures are advised to wear the "square" coats that are threatening us with the next influx of Paris modes. These coats, it is said, will be made in cut velvets, satins and broads in gay hues, and, with a black or colored skirt, will be much affected for evening wear.

For short figures bodices will remain the round affairs they have been for some time, though drawn down trimmer in front and, if at all décolleté, less so than formerly.

A becoming evening cut for the revealing of round, pretty ankles at present much in favor, is the little square here pictured in the double column design.

The costume which is most suited to a demimouline, or else very tall, is in pale green, pink or pineapple silk, with sleeves and belt of Trionon pink velvet.

The plain skirt hangs loosely over a green tulle petticoat, whose shimmering surface adds lustre to the almost transparent pineapple silk, and the bodice is charmingly draped with French lace, headed by hands in old pink galon and green paillettes. This toilet has just been designed as a little dance and dinner frock for a house party wardrobe.

ORGANDY OVER SILK.

COSTUME FOR A YOUNG MATRON.

The second toilet in this picture is a modified expression of Marie Antoinette, and is suited to both matron and young girl.

The material is old yellow brocade, that adorable shade of yellow that makes a brilliant contrast with the white silk mull, edged with a very rare and beautiful quality of French blonde lace. The costume is in two pieces, a plain and very voluminous skirt, which is made stiff only by the superb quality of the silk, the lining of white tulle and outside being sewed up together.

The upper portion is a short, plain body with full topped sleeves and surplice front. Artificial flowers may with taste decorate the front of the fichu-draped corsage and the bodice, and they are again in vogue and combine daintily with the fichu; with the yellow brocade red or yellow roses or white gardenias are in best keeping. If an ornament is worn it should be in the nature of an old jeweled brooch or locket, fastened to a black velvet band that fits the bare throat snugly.

A HARELUQUINE FROCK.

An evening toilet, not illustrated, demonstrated the fancy for combining odd colors and textures that has characterized the summer.

It also gave valuable hints for the using up of odd lengths of handsome stuff, as the twisting of several odd evening gowns into one, and yet it was a late and very precious French importation. The skirt, which was flared broadly at the bottom and very narrow at the top, was of pale pink Pompadour brocade, with a delicate blue ribbon design garlanding loosely all over and looping about the stems of the bouquets. The bodice was of killed white mousseline de soie drawn trimly down at the waist and cut square at the neck, back and front; the top of the sleeves, which were balloon shaped and of blue satin, alone kept it on the shoulders.

For the rest, there were brooch knots of red roses mixed with black velvet, and a belt and long streamers of the same, the belt girled low in front to give the waist a long effect.

This gown had a great deal of distinction, in spite of its hareluquine tendencies. Black ribbon velvet, it may be useful to extremely effective when outlining it completely.

BLACK, WHITE AND YELLOW.

One charming little dress gown lately seen had this velvet decoration put on in a unique fashion. The material was dotted, white dots on a pale yellow ground, and the model was a low "baby" body, with a general skirt, with one tiny ruffle, which was edged each side with narrow white lace and gathered through the middle over a cord. The velvet ribbon was gathered into a bunch, and a baby ribbon, and hung in loose lengthwise strips over the body, back and front, with a blouse effect. The short bolton sleeves were covered in the same way, and from under the belt, which was also black velvet in a wider width, the narrow strip of lace in the skirt into a short apron-like V that covered only the front fathers-in-law to be, with their respective son and daughter, go out on an appointed evening and bring home a broom, a carving knife and fork, a salt cellar, a pair of brass doorknocker, a candle stick and a pair of bellows. This is a revival of an old German custom of presenting a young pair with what were considered the "four virtues" of those virtues that go to make up a perfect household. The shopping party is concluded by luncheon to the united families, and nowadays, instead of spreading the wedding gifts for inspection the day of the ceremony, the bride's mother, two days before, sends out for the intended groom, a reception, where the presents are exhibited in the drawing room. As every one of these are received, thanks should be immediately rendered to the bride's mother, and at once, and recently has been issued the edict that good form commands the bride to personally superintend the justifying of the envelope flaps with white wax, showing the impress of her initials alone, wreathed with tiny orange blossoms. The seal is a little souvenir that falls to the share of the mother, just as her white silk wedding stockings are given to her youngest sister and her youngest brother, and the bride sends a few to the cook who bakes her wedding cake.

BRAWNY BEAUTY.

Knotty muscles distinguish the Athletic Girl of the Period.

The dreadful fact that lately overtook a handsome eastern figure engaged to lead a corps of stately ballet girls in a comic opera, now in process of rehearsal, has attracted attention and consternation among women bicyclists who have heard the story.

In the early spring the young person in question procured a bicycle, joined a club and soon learned to use her wheel with delightful proficiency. She made records for the mere fun of breaking them, boasted of always pedaling up the steepest hills, grew as slender and vigorous as a young Diana, but the first morning of rehearsal was relegated from her position as the leader of the dancers to a back row among a crowd of village maidens, who come on only in the last act.

The bicycle had played her a trick, for, where otherwise faultless outlines had made her figure admired and renowned, even under the regulation swaths of close silk flannel, now appeared a series of curious looking humps and bumps, bulging ridges and knots, with billowy risings and sinkings, calculated to outrage any one's sense of statued symmetry. It was easy enough to guess the cause of this unusual development.

SHOULD EXERCISE CAUTION.

On looking into a book on anatomy, the afflicted girl found every hydra-headed monster of a muscle dignified by a resounding Latin name. The sole cure a physician could suggest was more temperate use of the wheel and time, while the only consolation the ex-dancer finds in her trouble is the thought that the same ailment afflicts her sister bicyclists must be similarly supplied with sinewy ornamentation.

As a matter of fact, the suspicions have been confirmed by inquiry, and confessions among the enthusiastic women bicyclists of her acquaintance, to the number of fifty and hips. At the back this narrowed up to a bare two inches; but seen at a little distance with the light skirt, it looked exactly as if a tailed body were being worn.

SIL KTEA GOWN.

House gowns for autumn wear are being much made in striped and figured challoes and in plain and dotted broads. Trimmings of these have also much to do with the velvet, though colored silk and satin are also used for revers and big collars, which are frequently made further dressy with a deep edging of lace.

A stylish and becoming toilet for afternoon tea, and here illustrated, is of white barge, pointed with black. The model is on the tea gown order, which continues to be much in favor, and the big collar and sash are of mauve silk; wide French lace edges the former and the bottoms of the bishop sleeves becoming.

The blouse pictured, and which is suited to either morning or afternoon wear, will be found to harmonize with the sash and sash in a small way among her friends, the guest of honor at many entertainments, and to the envious spinster her days seem a round of tender little attentions and cosy tea-tetes, congratulatory smiles, costly gifts and charming clothes.

But to the conscientious girl herself, who wishes to start out fair and square in her married life, leaving no enemies or ill-feeling behind her, there is a course of detailed and exacting etiquette to follow that would puzzle a court diplomat. In England a young lady is expected to know the etiquette of the most trying duties, decide upon the length of the engagement, order its published and privately to her friends, and to her mother, and wedding day, and however sure, or the contrary, a girl may feel of her lover's respect for her parents, she must insist on her own having a right to enter into their consideration the day after she has signed her approval of his suit. He should promptly answer, and now in her book of social tactics Mrs. Grundy has written it that a chapman is a necessary adjunct to every engagement.

An engaged girl may receive her future husband alone in her mother's drawing room, though it is requisite at some time during this daily visit after a consulting hour outside the portiers or preliminary rattling of a door knob, for the maternal dignity to be maintained, and the young man, in consideration of her lover's feeling do not receive her young men friends save on her mother's days at home, she accepts no invitations to dine or to go to the theater, where he is not included and devotes every attention to his family with peculiar courtesy to his mother.

It is considered most important that together they attend church at least once every Sunday, they may drive, walk and bicycle alone, but must take an obliging younger member of the family along to the theater, opera and concerts. It is permitted them to go to a dinner party with only her maid's company, yet to a ball an older woman relative is the proper companion and any demonstrations of affection in public are utterly discontinued.

WHEN IN SOCIETY.

Discussion has raged high at times on the question of just what part an engaged pair should take in the frivolities of society and of late it has been satisfactorily decided that when attending a dancing party the happy couple should take a few turns together, but should not be seen in any more social dances, with partners of their own choosing, and then take their leave.

The engagement rings are given in the presence of a few friends, and the young people a new and very satisfactory decision has been reached respecting their proper bestowal and value.

The engagement may be as splendid or simple an affair as the man's taste and pocket can afford, while in exchange may be given a dinner party with only her maid's company, yet to a ball an older woman relative is the proper companion and any demonstrations of affection in public are utterly discontinued.

THE PSYCHE TYPE A BACK NUMBER.

The girl today is not the girl of yesterday, sloping shoulders, neat small wrists, and ankles with arms and nether limbs, moulded on the flowing curves of a Greek goddess, and for the last year the records of measurements in the women's gymnastics show it as easy and as universal to add three inches to a girl's waist measure in one season of work as it was to lose three to reduce the girth by the aid of the bed post and stout silk corset laces.

But just in proportion as our women have gained in bone and brawn and good health, too, it must be admitted the loss in grace and interesting functions of the "spider" days, in long lines down the skirt, the ends perhaps fastened down with great square already talked of, the velvet is say the artists, to find proper models, and for ballet masters to draw suitable recruits to their service. Unless the standards of feminine beauty are readjusted, to meet the ideal of the modern woman, the feminine element bids fair to disappear wholly from the painter's canvas and vanish in an ornamental capacity from the stage for it is with her strong right arm the demand of the future evidently means to rule.

Glad She Lives In America.

"I'm glad I live in America," said a pretty young man, talking to a Philadelphia Inquirer reporter, "because I am never afraid to travel by myself. Last year I was in London and went around with a friend who is married, and we were spoken to in an insulting manner every time we went out. Paris was still worse. People speak of the French politeness but it is only a veneer. The men would get in front of us on every occasion, and make fun of our hats and our monkey. I'm glad I don't understand anything they said. There are no men like the American men, and I never so fully able to appreciate it as I am, now I have seen the difference of the men in London. Besides, the girls are treated better here than anywhere else on earth, and I don't want to cross the ocean any more."

Fashion Notes.

Redingote effects will prevail during the autumn and winter.

Alpaca and mohair fabrics are being made into very smart toilets both for house and street wear.

Some of the newest capes are finished with a sailor collar ending in pointed revers down the front.

Tweeds in varied qualities and new stylish schemes are occupying a prominent place among autumn dress goods.

Evening silks for next season have exquisitely tinted Dresden patterns on cream, mauve, blue, ecru and other light colored grounds.

Jewelry is very much worn in Paris at the moment. Dog collars of rhinestone are, with fanny pins, again the whim of the moment.

Medium and lightweight crepons, plain and with colored stripes and dots, will remain in fashionable favor, but they will not reach the universal popularity they enjoyed this summer.

Many of the pale hued tulle silks for the autumn have the backgrains covered with pompadour designs in chine effects. These make lovely "Colonial" dresses for debutantes, lace-trimmed, and buttoned up the back.

A novelty in Parisian millinery is the use of pressed main-deifer hair. It is very natural looking, for it is the actual hair, and is so well pressed that it lasts for some time. Wings on sailor hats are now arranged standing up, surrounded by finely plaited chiffon.

It is rumored that Parisians are likely to make considerable change in the style of sleeves by the time that heavy wraps become necessary. For the autumn season, however, sleeves will retain their very full appearance, most of the fulness showing about the elbows, and more or less flat in effect on the top of the arm.

There will be a great vogue the coming fall for the "serpentine velvet," a novel Latin name for the velvet, corded silk and wool, and all wool materials. The silks have ordinary, medium and extra heavy repeats, these appearing in black and also a wide range of colors. These will be used for entire gowns, and also in combination with other rich fabrics.

As a matter of fact, the serpentine velvet, which its patentee claims is the very best yet, this new binding is called "serpentine velvet," and consists of a very narrow coil of wire run through the lower edge of the binding, this slightly distends the lower edge of the fabric, and by the addition of any other stiffening whatsoever, or at least this is what the inventor claims.

Marie Antoinette fuchsia will rival the small bouquet of the "serpentine velvet" in popularity with autumn costumes. Some of the fuchsia are made of plain black or green velvet, others of chamois velvet lined with a bright color, and others are made of corded silk trimmed at all the edges with knife pleated frills of the silk. The fuchsia has a rounded cape effect in the back, with very long ends that enclose the bust.

The 1830 redingotes are very much up-to-date garments, made of tulle silk, either plain or changeable, with a long fluted skirt, as long or nearly as the dress skirt. They are made mostly in colors, the most fashionable color at present being red, vermillion, a brownish green and violet blue. They are unlined and finished with broad collar, revers, tailor stitched, or else lined with a brownish green and violet blue. They are for morning wear of travel.

Feminine Notes.

Marburg university has admitted two women, one an Austrian and one a Scotchwoman, to its courses.

Harriet Hays, daughter of Colonel John Hay, the famous author of "The Boy-Brother," has a humorous poem in the August St. Nicholas, which she calls "The Boy-Brother's Showing Finger" for morning wear of travel.

Mrs. Katharine Lente Stevenson, corresponding secretary of the Women's Christian Temperance union, has made a trip of 3,000 miles in the southern states, addressing forty-seven meetings, giving thirty addresses and organizing six Women's Christian Temperance unions. All this in thirty-eight days.

Swedish authorities are prophesying an epidemic of blindness in Sweden. Klara Wallentin, who came to this country three or four years ago from Halmstad, Sweden, has been studying diligently ever since, and her admirers are declaring that she is worthy to wear the cloak of Jenny Lind or Christine Nilsson.

An English woman, Mrs. Plumtree, has for some time past been engaged in compiling a dictionary for the blind in Braille type. Her husband has just completed. It has nearly two hundred and half years of working at it, four, five and even six hours a day. It fills 3,200 pages, contains about 10,000 words and will make fifteen or sixteen large volumes.

Mary Anderson, "Our Mary," who will always be to Americans as a woman of the future, and not the least a woman of the present, she makes in the opening chapter in "The day upon which I voluntarily turned my back upon the world" the page was the happiest that I had until then seen.

The Home for the Blind at Maspeth has been opened under most favorable circumstances. This institution for blind women is the result of the energy of Miss C. McDonald of Brooklyn, who was educated at the Perkins Institute for the Blind at South Boston. A monthly magazine called Our August Record has been started, edited by Augusta Lewis.

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, that graceful and woman of work as Miss Howe is famous wherever she goes, is no longer approved by her sisters she presides at meetings. She is presiding at the present over the Town and Country club in New York, and is doing it with the same skill and interest as she has shown in her former career, and not the least a woman of the present, she makes in the opening chapter in "The day upon which I voluntarily turned my back upon the world" the page was the happiest that I had until then seen.

The Home for the Blind at Maspeth has been opened under most favorable circumstances. This institution for blind women is the result of the energy of Miss C. McDonald of Brooklyn, who was educated at the Perkins Institute for the Blind at South Boston. A monthly magazine called Our August Record has been started, edited by Augusta Lewis.

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, that graceful and woman of work as Miss Howe is famous wherever she goes, is no longer approved by her sisters she presides at meetings. She is presiding at the present over the Town and Country club in New York, and is doing it with the same skill and interest as she has shown in her former career, and not the least a woman of the present, she makes in the opening chapter in "The day upon which I voluntarily turned my back upon the world" the page was the happiest that I had until then seen.

The Home for the Blind at Maspeth has been opened under most favorable circumstances. This institution for blind women is the result of the energy of Miss C. McDonald of Brooklyn, who was educated at the Perkins Institute for the Blind at South Boston. A monthly magazine called Our August Record has been started, edited by Augusta Lewis.

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, that graceful and woman of work as Miss Howe is famous wherever she goes, is no longer approved by her sisters she presides at meetings. She is presiding at the present over the Town and Country club in New York, and is doing it with the same skill and interest as she has shown in her former career, and not the least a woman of the present, she makes in the opening chapter in "The day upon which I voluntarily turned my back upon the world" the page was the happiest that I had until then seen.

The Home for the Blind at Maspeth has been opened under most favorable circumstances. This institution for blind women is the result of the energy of Miss C. McDonald of Brooklyn, who was educated at the Perkins Institute for the Blind at South Boston. A monthly magazine called Our August Record has been started, edited by Augusta Lewis.

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, that graceful and woman of work as Miss Howe is famous wherever she goes, is no longer approved by her sisters she presides at meetings. She is presiding at the present over the Town and Country club in New York, and is doing it with the same skill and interest as she has shown in her former career, and not the least a woman of the present, she makes in the opening chapter in "The day upon which I voluntarily turned my back upon the world" the page was the happiest that I had until then seen.

The Home for the Blind at Maspeth has been opened under most favorable circumstances. This institution for blind women is the result of the energy of Miss C. McDonald of Brooklyn, who was educated at the Perkins Institute for the Blind at South Boston. A monthly magazine called Our August Record has been started, edited by Augusta Lewis.

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, that graceful and woman of work as Miss Howe is famous wherever she goes, is no longer approved by her sisters she presides at meetings. She is presiding at the present over the Town and Country club in New York, and is doing it with the same skill and interest as she has shown in her former career, and not the least a woman of the present, she makes in the opening chapter in "The day upon which I voluntarily turned my back upon the world" the page was the happiest that I had until then seen.

The Home for the Blind at Maspeth has been opened under most favorable circumstances. This institution for blind women is the result of the energy of Miss C. McDonald of Brooklyn, who was educated at the Perkins Institute for the Blind at South Boston. A monthly magazine called Our August Record has been started, edited by Augusta Lewis.

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, that graceful and woman of work as Miss Howe is famous wherever she goes, is no longer approved by her sisters she presides at meetings. She is presiding at the present over the Town and Country club in New York, and is doing it with the same skill and interest as she has shown in her former career, and not the least a woman of the present, she makes in the opening chapter in "The day upon which I voluntarily turned my back upon the world" the page was the happiest that I had until then seen.

The Home for the Blind at Maspeth has been opened under most favorable circumstances. This institution for blind women is the result of the energy of Miss C. McDonald of Brooklyn, who was educated at the Perkins Institute for the Blind at South Boston. A monthly magazine called Our August Record has been started, edited by Augusta Lewis.

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, that graceful and woman of work as Miss Howe is famous wherever she goes, is no longer approved by her sisters she presides at meetings. She is presiding at the present over the Town and Country club in New York, and is doing it with the same skill and interest as she has shown in her former career, and not the least a woman of the present, she makes in the opening chapter in "The day upon which I voluntarily turned my back upon the world" the page was the happiest that I had until then seen.

The Home for the Blind at Maspeth has been opened under most favorable circumstances. This institution for blind women is the result of the energy of Miss C. McDonald of Brooklyn, who was educated at the Perkins Institute for the Blind at South Boston. A monthly magazine called Our August Record has been started, edited by Augusta Lewis.

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, that graceful and woman of work as Miss Howe is famous wherever she goes, is no longer approved by her sisters she presides at meetings. She is presiding at the present over the Town and Country club in New York, and is doing it with the same skill and interest as she has shown in her former career, and not the least a woman of the present, she makes in the opening chapter in "The day upon which I voluntarily turned my back upon the world" the page was the happiest that I had until then seen.

The Home for the Blind at Maspeth has been opened under most favorable circumstances. This institution for blind women is the result of the energy of Miss C. McDonald of Brooklyn, who was educated at the Perkins Institute for the Blind at South Boston. A monthly magazine called Our August Record has been started, edited by Augusta Lewis.

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, that graceful and woman of work as Miss Howe is famous wherever she goes, is no longer approved by her sisters she presides at meetings. She is presiding at the present over the Town and Country club in New York, and is doing it with the same skill and interest as she has shown in her former career, and not the least a woman of the present, she makes in the opening chapter in "The day upon which I voluntarily turned my back upon the world" the page was the happiest that I had until then seen.

The Home for the Blind at Maspeth has been opened under most favorable circumstances. This institution for blind women is the result of the energy of Miss C. McDonald of Brooklyn, who was educated at the Perkins Institute for the Blind at South Boston. A monthly magazine called Our August Record has been started, edited by Augusta Lewis.

without assistance, no matter how big and strong he was.

Presently he heard something strike the under side of the cellar door.

"Here, you young rebel, let me out!" cried a half-smothered voice.

"I'll see that it gets pretty warm for you, and I'll see that you get a good hot prison like this."

"There, no, sir!" answered the boy, as he went toward the door and leaned over it. "Don't you know that you have no right to plunder a defenseless farm house. We are rebels, but we have rights, and I intend to show you, Big Gideon, that a king's regular can't have his own way all the time."

With this the boy turned and went toward the dragon's horse at the post. The animal, seeing that it was not his master, was shy at first, but Alan being agile and quick vaulted upon his back and was off.

The boy knew there was to be found a little camp of the "Skinners," who would do nothing better than to take care of Big Gideon, and he called the spur like a jockey.

IN THE HANDS OF THE PATRIOTS.

Twenty minutes later there was a cloud of dust on the country road, and out of it near the Shepley farm house came a dozen riders on horseback, who were headed by the boy.

All these drew rein in front of the house, and Alan pointed with triumph to the cellar. "He's there yet," he exclaimed. "See, the lock is not broken and the door has not been forced."

The American riders sprang to the ground and surrounded the cellar door, while Alan called to the man he had let inside. "Of course, it's here yet," growled Big Gideon. "How can you break through a stone wall or force a door of oak? I'm no soldier, but I can't see a prisoner of war what it is to shut up the king's regulars in this manner."

Alan opened the cellar and the flushed face of the prisoner came in sight, and he was looked upon the amused faces of the free lances of the neutral ground.

"What's the matter?" cried Alan, turning his face upon Alan Shepley. "What have you done, little rebel?"

"I've only gone and fetched some of my friends to see you. You will have to talk with them, Master Gideon."

The big fellow fumed and growled over the situation, but he had to submit. He knew that the king's regulars were a prisoner of war in the American camp, and in a twinkling he was disarmed and mounted on his own horse, but as a captive.

"Just to tell you I come back," he exclaimed, turning and shaking his fists at Alan Shepley, who stood on the porch with a smile of keen triumph on his ruddy face. "One of these days I'll lead you to the cellar to entrap one of the king's regulars."

The boy's smile broadened.

"Goodby, Master Gideon," he said. "The next time you come well try and have plum pie."

The big dragon muttered something about the future vengeance, then the Skinner captain gave the command to march, and away they went with their unexpected prisoner.

The king's regular never was able to carry out his threat, for before he was exchanged the fortunes of war turned in favor of the colonists, and the neutral ground was safe from the plundering hands of the enemy.

Alan Shepley became the hero of the district, for his exploit, which clung to him as long as he lived, and he never grew tired of telling to his grandchildren how he caught Big Gideon of King George's army, and turned him over to the Americans.

And Big Gideon I suppose never forgot how he failed to get a plum pie feast at the patriot farm house.

GEORGE BANCROFT.

The Debt of Gratitude American Boys Owe the Great Historian.

(Copyright, 1895, by T. C. Houghton.)

Seventy years ago the Round Hill school at Northampton, Mass., was perhaps the most famous school in New England. The founder, George Bancroft, had modeled it upon a celebrated school in Switzerland in the hope that it would prove a starting point for a broader system of elementary training than had yet existed in America, and everything was done to develop the physical and moral, as well as the mental, traits of the pupils.

The school was beautifully situated, commanding a superb view, and had besides the physical and moral, as well as the mental, traits of the pupils.

The school was beautifully situated, commanding a superb view, and had besides the physical and moral, as well as the mental, traits of the pupils.

The school was beautifully situated, commanding a superb view, and had besides the physical and moral, as well as the mental, traits of the pupils.

The school was beautifully situated, commanding a superb view, and had besides the physical and moral, as well as the mental, traits of the pupils.

The school was beautifully situated, commanding a superb view, and had besides the physical and moral, as well as the mental, traits of the pupils.

The school was beautifully situated, commanding a superb view, and had besides the physical and moral, as well as the mental, traits of the pupils.

The school was beautifully situated, commanding a superb view, and had besides the physical and moral, as well as the mental, traits of the pupils.

The school was beautifully situated, commanding a superb view, and had besides the physical and moral, as well as the mental, traits of the pupils.

The school was beautifully situated, commanding a superb view, and had besides the physical and moral, as well as the mental, traits of the pupils.

The school was beautifully situated, commanding a superb view, and had besides the physical and moral, as well as the mental, traits of the pupils.

The school was beautifully situated, commanding a superb view, and had besides the physical and moral, as well as the mental, traits of the pupils.

The school was beautifully situated, commanding a superb view, and had besides the physical and moral, as well as the mental, traits of the pupils.

The school was beautifully situated, commanding a superb view, and had besides the physical and moral, as well as the mental, traits of the pupils.

The school was beautifully situated, commanding a superb view, and had besides the physical and moral, as well as the mental, traits of the pupils.

The school was beautifully situated, commanding a superb view, and had besides the physical and moral, as well as the mental, traits of the pupils.

The school was beautifully situated, commanding a superb view, and had besides the physical and moral, as well as the mental, traits of the pupils.

The school was beautifully situated, commanding a superb view, and had besides the physical and moral, as well as the mental, traits