In spite of the fact that Nichols was a puzzler to them, the Clineinnatis managed to keep ahead of the Bostons in the afternoon game until the seventh inning. In that inning four singles, a base on balls, a bad miss of an easy grounder by Smith and a home run by Nash gave the home team the game. Score:

LOCAL LABOR QUESTION. Mr. E. M. Hiff of Typographical union No. 199 was the next speaker, and he delivered a series of pointed remarks on labor ques-tions with a readiness and force which aroused considerable enthusiasm among the listeners. By way of introduction Mr. Iliff referred to the scheme recently incubated by which interested parties expect to be able to displace the present system of street sweeping by day labor in favor of the con-tract system. He said that this rumor had been brought to the Central Labor union, but insisted that he could not believe that such an idea could be seriously contemplated. He called attention to the fact that in July, 1894, it cost the city $2,800 to clean its streets by contract and $100 extra for an inepector. In the corresponding month of this year the work had been done by day labor year the work had been done by day labor for $1,900, thus making a saving for the tax-payers of nearly $1,000. In August a still better record had been made and the expense by day labor had been $1,600 as compared to $2,800 in August of last year under the contract system. The day labor idea had been pushed by the Central Labor union, which was responsible for the saving of $1,000 a month. Omaha men were also employed at living wages, and they did a better job all around than the centractors who had done the work before If it did develop that any councilmen favored the plan of a return to the contract system he urged the laboring men to camp on their trail in the future. Coming to the general phases of the labor Mr. Iliff said that he was in sympathy with labor organizations and every weapon they used. While it was always the policy of organized labor to avoid strikes, a strike was sometimes necessary to labor, policy of organized labor to avoid strikes, a strike was sometimes necessary to labor, just as a war was to the life of a nation, and when a strike was necessary he believed in making it just as expensive for the other fellow as possible.

The condition of the laborer had been improving right along, and is today, but the improvement would not be completed way to Whiting, who did no better. SENATOR THURSTON'S HINTS.

The last speaker was Senator John M. Thurston, who was received with marked evidence of welcome. After some general remarks on labor questions Senator Thursion said that American labor was affected by many local conditions, but there was one which was more powerful than all others combined. When labor was out on the street looking for work the employer was the master and labor was the slave. When one-third of the muscle and brawn of the contralists and he doubted the statement of the statement of the statement of the statement of the contralists and he doubted the statement of the statem country was walking the streets trying to solve the problem of how the wives and children at home were to be fed, a strike was eless and labor might as well hang up

The speaker invited attention to the con stantly growing power of Japan, whose importance as a manufacturing nation was assuming tremendous proportions. There men could be hired for 18 cents a day and women for 10 cents, and as this was paid in Mexican silver dollars, these amounts would be cut in two when expressed in American money. ## AT SYNDICATE PARK.

Addresses by Messrs. Rush, Rosewater and Mahoney.

St. Bridget's church gave a very enjoyable Labor day picnic at Syndicate park yesterday afternoon and evening. The heavy mist which fell all the forenoon only tended to freshen the grass and flowers in the park and when the sun came out shortly after the noon hour the women who went shead to prepare the tables and booths found the grounds in perfect condition. During the earlier part of the afternoon there were music, dancing and various amusements.

At 5 o'clock Ben S. Adams mounted the speakers' platform and in a few words introduced as the first speaker John Rush of Omaha. Mr. Rush said that philanthropic people all over the world had for years and years made sacrifices for the building of churches, and in no part of the world were the people more liberal than in America. Thirty years ago there was one little Catholic church at the corner of Eighth and Howard streets in Omaha. To the east of the church was brush and rubbish clear to the river. That little church represented the Catholi society in Omaha and Douglas county. I had been built by men who had came to Omaha in its earliest days, and whose skill and energy laid the foundation of one of the greatest city of the west.

As the city grew other churches were built, and then the parochial schools came into existence. In the percental sensors came into existence. In the year 1867 St. Philo-mena was completed and to Rev. Father Kelly was due a great deal of the credit, for he collected nearly one-third of the money necessary to erect the structure. To Edward Creighton and his wife great credit was due, for at this time they watened carefully the development of the Catholic church and were never blind to the wants of others, and they helped greatly to spread the gospel in this county and state. After giving a list of the Catholic edifices in Omaha and South Omaha the speaker said that he doubted much if there was a city in the country where the churches were better cared for and religion and morals more carefully taught than in Omaha and the Magic City. He hoped one day to see both cities combined under one civil government, such a government as Edward Rosewater had tried to establish.

PAROCHIAL AND PUBLIC SCHOOLS. Mr. Rush then spoke of the high standard of the parochial schools and testified to the sincerity of the sisters, of their learning and high moral character. He said that the flag of the country, which was too frequently trailed in the dust, was more highly respected in these schools than in any other. No fault was to be found with parents who sent their children to public schools but for himself, by was to be found with parents who sent their children to public schools, but for himself he preferred the parochial schools on account of the religious and moral training. The Catholics of Omaha, said Mr. Rush, paid about one-tenth of all taxes that go toward the support of the public schools. On this account if no other a Catholic who applies for count, if no other, a Catholic who applies for a certificate as a teacher in a public school ought to be entitled to as much consideration any other person. Should the parcch'al hools be abandoned it would throw out about 1,500 pupils for the Board of Education to take care of. This would necessitate the building of at least five school houses at a cost of $100,000 and the employment of about cost of $100,000 and the employment of about thirty teachers at an annual expense of at least $22,000. The Catholies had helped to build Omaha and South Omaha and asked for nothing but their rights. In closing Mr. Rush mentioned the presence of Mr. Rosewater, and said that he was the best respected and the most intensely hated man in the state.

Mr. Rosewater said that the labor problem was not as yet solved, that within the last half century millions of toilers had been thrown from one pursuit to another, and that the industrial revolution was ushered in other. DETECTIVE BEHIND THE BARS He Was Gathered in by the Police and Booked as a Suspect.

Morris Kirby, a well dressed and intelligent young man, was arrested by Officer Heelan Sunday night at Fourteenth and Farnam streets on suspicion. When searched at the police station a good sized pistol and a star and commission from a fake detective agency were found on his person. Yesterday morning a young girl called at police head-quarters and after showing the desk sergeant a photograp' of Kirby said the original of the picture was her husband and she feared something had happened to him.
"My husband, Morris," she said, "has an awfully dangerous calling. His business?

Why he is a detective, and a good one, and he is feared by the criminals, too. And the only way that I can account for his absence is that some fugitive from justice has waylaid and murdered him."

When told of the charges preferred against ter spouse the woman was very indignant. Kirby was arranged before Judge Berka. "Your honor, I have a respect criminal when I was arrested, and I don't think it was right. I came here from my home in Sioux City two months ago, and have been hunting for law breakers ever
