When Paul Whittier said that he had phoographs of the man who had been injuring he Ramapo Steel and Iron works, showing him in the act of opening the safe, Mr. Whittier and Mr. Wheateroft looked at each other in amazement. Major Van Zandt stared at the young man with fear and shame struggling together in his face.

Without waiting to enjoy his triumph Paul out his hand in his pocket and took out two quares of bluish paper. "There," he said, as he handed one to his father, "there is a blue print of the man taken in this office at ten minutes past 3 yesterday afternoon, just as he was about to open the safe in the corner. You see he is enceling with his hand on the lock, but apparently, just then, something alarmed him and he cast a hasty glance over his shoulder. At that second the protograph was taken, and M. O. MAUL. UNDERTAKER AND EMBALM-er, 1417 Farnam st., telephone 225. o we have a full-face portrait of the man." Mr. Whittier had looked at the photograph ind he now passed it to the impatient hand of the junior partner.

"You see, Mr. Wheateroft," Paul continued. that although the face in the photograph bears a certain family likeness to Major Van Zandt's, all the same that is not a portrai of the major. The man who was in here yesterday afternoon was a young man, a man roung enough to be the major's son!"

The old bookkeeper looked at the speaker.
"Mr. Paul," he began, "you won't be hard on the—" Then he paused abruptly.

"I confess I don't understand this at all," tectared Mr. Wheateroft trascibly. "I am afraid that I do understand it," Mr.

"I'm afrald I do understand it," Mr. Whittler

Whittler said, with a glance of compassion at the major.
"There." Paul continued, handing his father a second azure square, "there is a photograph taken here ten minutes after the first—at 3:20 yesterday afternoon. That shows the safe open and the same young voice, "you won't tell me that it was you who sold our secrets to our rivals? And you might confess it again and again, I should never believe it. I know you better. I have known you too long to believe any charge against your honesty, even if you bring it yourself.

The real culprit, the man who is photographed here, is your son, isn't he? There is no use of trying to conceal the truth now, and there is no need to attempt it, because we shall be lenient with him for your sake, major."

Mr. Wheateroft's suddenly saying:
"The major's son? Why, he is dead, isn' he? He was shot in a brawl after a spresomewhere out west two or three years ago At least that's what I understood at the

"It is what I wanted everybody to under-stand at the time," said the old bookkeeper, breaking silence at last. "But it wasn't so. The boy was shot, but he wasn't killed. I The boy was shot, but he wasn't killed. I hoped that it would be a warning to him and hoped that it would be a warning to him and that he would make a fresh start. Friends of mine got him a place in Mexico—but luck was against him, so he wrote me, and he lost that. Then an old comrade of mine gave him another chance out in Denver, and for a while he kept straight and did his work well. Then he broke down once more and he was discharged. For six months I did not know what had become of him. I've found out since that he was a tramp for weeks and out since that he was a tramp for weeks and that he walked most of the way from Colo-rado to New York. This fall he turned up here in the city, ragged, worn out, sick. I wanted to order him away, but I couldn't. I took him back and got him decent clothes and told him to look for a place, for I knew that hard work was the only thing that would keep him out of mischief. He did not find a place, prophage he did not look for one. But place-perhaps he did not look for one. But all at once I discovered that he had money. He would not tell me how he got it. I knew he could not have come by it honestly, and so I watched him. I spied after him, and at last found that he was selling you to the Tuxedo company."

Tuxedo company."
"But how could be open the safe?" cried
Mr. Wheatcroft. "You didn't know the combination."

"I did not tell him the combination I did know," said the old bookkeeper, with pathetic dignity, "And I didn't have to tell him. He can open almost any safe without knowing the combination. How he does it I don't know, It is his gift. He listens to the wheels as they turn, and he sets first one and then the other, and in ten minutes the safe is

"How could be get into the store?" Mr. Whittier inquired.
"He knew I had a key," responded the old bookkeeper, "and he stole it from me. He used to watch on Sunday afternoon till Mike went for a walk, and then he unlocked the store and slipped in and opened the safe. Two weeks ago Mike came back unexpectedly, and he had just time to get out of one of the rear windows of this office."
"Yes," Paul remarked, as the major paused,

"Mike told me that he had found a window unfastened." "I heard you asking about it," Major Van Zandt explained, "and I knew that if you were suspicious he was sure to be caught sooner or later. So I begged him not to try Omaha. The management consists of three members that are souther as executive committee, with Anton Kinent as president and Joseph Percival as chief instructor.

"My poor old friend," said Mr. Whittier, sympathetically, holding out his hand, which the major clasped gratefully for a moment.

"Now we know who was selling us to the Tuxedo people, we can protect ourselves hereafter," declared Mr. Wheatcroft. "And in aplte of your trying to humbug me into believing you guity, major, I'm willing to let your son off easy."

"I think I can get him a place where he will be sent out to temptation, because he will be kept hard at work always," said Paul.

The old bookkeeper tooked up as though about to thank the young man, but there seemed to be a lump in his throat which prevented him from speaking.

Suddenly Mr. Wheatcroft began, explosively: "That's all very well! but what I still don't understand is how Paul got those hotographs."

Mr. Whittier looked at his son and smiled. "That is a little mysterious, Paul," he said, "and I confess I'd like to know how you

"Were you concealed here yourself?" asked
Mr. Wheatcroft.
"No." Paul answered. "If you will look around this room you will see that there isn't a dark corner in which anybody could tuck himself." Then where was the photographer hidden?"

Wheatcroft inquired with increasing

"In the clock?" echoed Mr. Wheatcroft, greatly amazed. "Why, there isn't room in the case of that clock for a thin midget, let alone a man." Paul enjoyed puzzling his father's partner.
'I didn't say I had a man there or a midget, either," he explained. "I said that the pho-tographer was in the clock—and I might have said that the clock itself was the photographer."

Mr. Wheateroft threw up his hands in disgust. "Well," he cried, "if you want to go on mystifying us in this absurd way, go on as long as you like! But your father and I are entitled to some consideration, I think."
"I'm not mystifying you at all. The clock took the pictures automatically. I'll show you how," Paul returned, getting up from his chair and going to the corner of the office. Taking a key from his pocket he opened the case of the clock and revealed a small photographic apparatus inside with the tube of the objective opposite the round glass panel in the door of the case. At the bottom of the case was a small electrical battery and on a small shelf over this was an electro-

"I begin to see how you did it," Mr. Whittler remarked, "but I'm not an expert in photography, Paul, and I'd like a full explanation. And make it as simple as you

"It's a very simple thing, indeed," said "It's a very simple thing, indeed," said his son. "One day while I was wondering how we could best catch the man who was the slate makers on the ground that he had getting at the books that clock happened to strike, and somehow it reminded me that in our photographic society at college we had all this has been allowed to pass until rein our photographic society at college we had once suggested that it would be amusing to attach a detective camera to a timepiece and take snap shots every few minutes all through the day. I saw that this clock of ours faced the safe and that it couldn't be better placed for the purpose. So when I had thought out my plan I came over here and pretended that the clock was wrong, and in setting it right I broke off the minute hand. Then I had a man I know send for it to repair it; he is both an electrician and a photographic expert. Together we worked out this device. Here is a small snap-shot a photographic expert. "The confounded little rascal!" interrupted
Mr. Wheatcroft.
Paul smiled as he continued: "I found also that Mr. Wheatcroft was captivated by a pretty book agent and bought two bulky volumes he didn't want." Mr. Wheatcroft looked sheepish for a mo-

"Oh, that's how you knew, is it?" he growled, running his hands impatiently through his shock of hair. "That's how I knew." Paul replied. "I told you I had an eye on you. It was the ione eye of the camera. And on Sunday it kept watch for us here, winking every ten minutes. From 6 o'clock in the morning And on Sunday to 3 in the afternoon it winked ninety times and all it saw was the same scene, the empty corner of the room here, with the safe in the shadow at first and at last in the full light that poured down from the glass roof over us. But a little after 3 a man came into the office and made ready to open the safe. At ten minutes past 3 the clock and the camera took his photograph—in the twinkling of an eye. At twenty minutes past 3 a second record was made. Before half past 3 the man was gone and the camera winked every ten minutes until 7 o'clock, quite in vain. I came down early this morning and got the negatives. One after an

Mr. Whittier gave his son a look of pride "That was very ingeniously worked out, Paul, very ingeniously, indeed," he said. "If it had not been for your clock here I might have found it difficult to prove that the major was innocent—especially since he declared himself guilty."

Mr. Wheateroft rose to his feet to close the conversation. "I am glad we know the truth, anyhow," he asserted, emphatically. And then as though to relieve the strain on the old bookthough to relieve the strain on the old bookfree keeper, he sadded, with a loud laugh at his own joke: "That clock had its hands before its face all the time—but it kept its eyes open for all that!"

"Don't forget that it had only one eye," ent said Mr. Whittier, joining in the laugh.
"It had an eye to its duty."

added Paul: "In the realm of the blind

MACLEOD FORGETFUL SAM

Collected Cash to Carry Polish Church

Fight to Supreme Court.

TAKING NO STEP IN THAT DIRECTION

Candidates Beginning to Fear that He Was Not Actuated by Pure American Patriotism.

Every one is familiar with the history of the recent troubles of St. Paul's Polish church at Sheeley, and those who attended the trials in the various courts will remember that Sam Macleod was greatly interested in the proceedings. But it is only recently that the full measure of Sam's interest in the case has developed. The difficulty between the two factions in the church culminated in a bitter strife for the possession of the church property. Suits went into the courts on voluminous petitions and were fought until the faction that supported Bishop Scannell came out victorious. In the meantime there had been several conflicts between the factions, in one of which a little target practice was indulged in, and the numerous arrests that followed kept Judge Berka busy for several weeks. It was in the trial of the cases growing out of the shooting that Macleod was in evidence, and after that was settled he continued to keep up his acquaintance with the members of the faction that was opposed to Scannell, After the decision had been rendered in avor of the Scannell faction Macleod began to stir himself in the interests of his new friends. He circulated among his compatriots in Colonel Redfield's brigade and rehearsed the story of the wrongs of the beaten church people. He represented that they were the victims of papal persecution and that they were too poor to raise the necessary funds to appeal the case to the necessary funds to appeal the case to the supreme court. This proved a powerful plea to conjure with and by dint of holding up several candidates for office and all of the dark lantern contingent who could be induced to contribute Macleod raised a very respectable sum for the alleged purpose of getting a transcript and paying other expenses incident to carrying the case other expenses incident to carrying the case to the supreme court. Some of the contributors, notably the incumbent of an important state office, were so affected by Samuel's plea for his friends that they put their names down for $5 each.

Ever since that time Macleod has been making hay. He has commanded the allegical and the state of the s legiance of his Polish friends by represent-ing that he had been hard at work raising charging him with misusing a prisoner named Henry Frahm, on the afternoon of Septem ber 3, is emphatically denied by a number of competent witnesses. Marnell, is corroborated by three officers and two uninterested witnesses:

"In the absence of the patrol conductors I take charge of the police patrol. On September 3, while the conductor was at dinner there was a call for the wagon at Ninth and Jones streets. When we arrived Officers Baldwin and Cusick were holding a man who seemed to be crazy from drink. He was trying to make a fight and causing a disturbance. He refused to get in the wagon, and it was necessary for me to take him by the coat collar. All the way to the station he fought, and it was with the greatest difficulty that he could be kept in the wagon. When we arrived at the jail he gave his name, and said he had escaped from the itsane ward of the county poor farm, he said the authorities refused to give him medicine, and struck and beat him. As an evidence of his abuse at the county poor farm he stripped and showed several bruises on his side. Shortly after he was locked up a stranger came down and demanded that Frahm be turned loose. I referred him to the sergeant, who refused to allow the man to be brought up on account of his cond:tion and ravings. This man made threats and said he would show the officers a thing or two and have them all discharged.

"The officials at the county poor farm were notified of Frahm's arrest and telephoned that he had disappeared from that institution that morning and that the ambulance would be sent to convey the demented man back. Robert Baugh came for Frahm and took him back to the poor farm.

"Frahm made a great deal of resistance and at first refused to accompany his keeper and it was with a great deal of persuasive ar-gument that he at last consented to go with him." At noon yesterday Henry Frahm was again arrested by the same officers. Baldwin and Cusick. He made a violent fight and attracted the same large crowd again. The county hospital authorities were again notified of the insane man's detention and called for him in the afternoon. Subject to Attacks of Cholera Morbus, While staying in the Delta (Mississippi Bottoms) last summer, E. T. Letter Gave Him Away.

The ten young men who have been he'd at the city jail on charges of being pickpockets were all but one given a thirty-day suspended sentence and given until 12 o'clock to get out of town. Harvey Sherman ,who comes from Leavenworth, Kan., was even thirty days on the chain gang, to be employed in cutting weeds and lending a helping hand to beautify the city. The reason for the imposing of the sentence was a letter from his sweetheart in Leavenworth. This missive was an answer money for his release. He had suggested that she "go through" a certain newspaper man there, who wears valuable jewelry and carries considerable surrency. The letter went on to say that the writer, "Neille," would make the attempt, but was fearful that she might be arrested. It wound up by saying: "Hun, I'll do anything for you, because I love you so."
