DORSEY MUST STAND TRIAL

His Work in Connection with the Ponca Bank is Culpable.

Ex-Cashier Outenit of the Capital National Bank at Lincoln Also Required to Appear in Court Under Indictment.

LINCOLN. Oct. 12.-(Special.)-On the motions to quash the indictments against ex-Congressman G. W. E. Dorsey and others and R. C. Outcait, Judge Shiras in the federal circuit court this morning handed down his decisions. The decisions hold that the accused must stand trial. The case against Outcalt grows out of the Capital National bank fatiure. That against Dorsey and others is for falsifying the books of the Ponca bank. In the Outcalt indictment there were five counts. Two of these were held to be void, on the ground that each of them charges more than one offense. District Attorney Sawyer was ordered to choose upo which count he desired the defendant to proceed to trial. The third count, charging Outcast with embezzling funds of the bank, with C. W. Mosher as his assistant and abettor, was held to be good. The fourt count, charging him with embezziement, misapplication and abstraction of funds from the bank as cashier and director, was held not good. The fifth count, which simply charges wrongful abstraction of funds from the bank, was held good. There were four teen counts in the indictment charging G W. E. Dorsey, Frank Dorsey and Fay Madi troller of the currency as to the financial condition of the Ponca bank. Judge Shiras held twelve of these counts valid. The seventh and twelfth were thrown out because each charged more than one offense. Ex-Congressman Dorsey was, apparently, greatly disappointed at the decision of the court It seems that the report which he sent t the comptroller was in the form of a let ter, which, as he professes to bolieve, did not come under the statutes. Outcalt did not seem greatly surprised at the court's de-GOOD TEMPLARS ELECT OFFICERS.

GRAND ISLAND, Oct 12 .- (Special.)-There has been much contention in the ranks of the grand lodge Knights of Pythias over the shortage of H. M. Shaeffer, ex-keeper of records and scals. A short review of the whole affair will clear the public mind.

On May 13, 1895, W. F. Bechtel at Omaha received and collected money for supplies sold to subordinate lodges, which he failed and neglected to account for to the said grand lodge, and wrongfully and fraudulently appropriated the same to his own use, in iciation of section 23 of the constitution of the grand lodge, Knights of Pythias of Ne-

There are various specifications, all of which are in the same trend as the above. Grand Chancellor Shuman hereupon appointed a committee consisting of W. W. Young of Stanon, Neb., Henry Fox, jr., of Nelson and George, see of Exeter to investigate the charges. This committee appointed an expert agree-ble to both parties to make an examination of Shaeffer's records. After hearing the evidence of the expert and of others, the committee, as stated in its report to the grand chancellor, made the following flind-

Hereupon Grand Chancellor Shuman de posed Shaeffer. The latter appealed from the findings of the committee, claiming that it had done him a gross injustice, FINAL ACTION OF THE GRAND LODGE.

The matter was then taken up in the grand lodge. Here all the evidence was read and the lodge resolved itself into a committee of the whole to take final action in the matof the whole to take final action in the matter. Such action was the unanimous adoption of the following resolutions introduced by Past Grand Chancellor W. S. Hamilton and Past Grand Chancellor Dilworth:

Resolved, further, That it appears the time of investigation was limited to October 1, 1894, beginning October 1, 1890.

Resolved, further, That this grand lodge, sitting as a committee of the whole, find that while there were shortages at the said time, to-wit, October 1, 1894, that the same may have been the result of carelessness and negligence, and may not have been with malicious or wilful intent to defraud this grand lodge.

CAREER OF SENATOR KNUTE NELSON

Hardships of Early Life, Educated Under Difficulties, Fighting for the Flag and Later Triumphs -An Instructive Career.

The career of Knute Nelson, who, while governor of Minnesota, was elected to the senate of the United States, is of much more than ordinary interest, and in several respects unique. As told by himself in a modest straightforward fashion in the Chicago Tribune, the story of his life has many of the salient features of a romance, including the picturesque and unusual. His father was a farmer and owned a small holding in the parish of Voss, near the city of Bergen, in the southwestern part of Norway, and it was here that he was born When he was three years old his father decided to try to better his fortune in America As he could not command sufficient means t tenance. She set out at once for Chicago, where she had a brother, who owned a little home on what was then known as "The Point," which is the locality bounded on the north by Kinzie street, on the south by the river, an Kinzie street, on the south by the river, and on the east by Clark street, and is now occupied by the Northwestern railway depot and tracks. She left her son with this brother's wife while she sought and obtained a position as housekeeper. He was sent to school with his cousins, and in a few months had mastered the first reader. About this time cholera prevailed in Chicago, and he, together with his uncless entire family was together with his uncle's entire family, was prostrated with the disease. He alone sur-vived, and when he recovered he went to live with a Norwegian family in the northwestern part of the city, doing all sorts of odds and ends of household work, including dishwashing, for his board. While living with this family one of the sons, who carried news papers, fell ill and he took his route, and i was in this way he earned his first money. HIS EARLY BOYHOOD.

In 1850 he went with his mother to Wal worth county, Wisconsin, and located on an unproductive little sand farm between Pal-myra and Coldwater. Crude, poor, and unpromising as was everything connected with his surroundings at this time, it was here that he received the inspiration of his life. During three months of each year Miss Mary B. Dillon, a cultivated, refined and highly educated Irish woman, taught the district school. It was an eccentric fate that brought the little, poor, ignorant Norwegian boy and this woman, who had all her life had access to the best the world affords in the way of educational advantages, together. She was the daughter of a wealthy Irish queens-ware manufacturer, who failed in the financial crisis of 1847. The family came to Americand went out into the wilds of Wisconsin t make their living on a farm. They would have failed utterly but for the efforts of Miss Dillon, who, withal, had great force of character and executive ability. As all her pupils were little Norwegian boys and girls, many of whom could not speak English, it was necessary for her to learn Norwegian, but not one word of any other language than English would she permit spoken in the school room In speaking of her Senator Nelson said: 'She was the most remarkable woman ever knew. Fitted as she was to fill any po-sition, however exalted or exacting, she yet devoted herself with the utmost singleness of purpose to the poor, little, ignorant Nor-wegian children who gathered in that old log schoolhouse. She made our ink and quili pens and taught us the amenities of life and a thousand other things which were not in

"Outside of the schoolroom I was anything but a model. I was born a turbulent fellow and was always ready to fight at the drop of the hat. Mary Dillon was often obliged to whip me three times a day, but that did not alter my liking for her, for she was always just and generous. I was, notwithstanding the acerbity of my temper, her favorite pupil for I was orderly and industrious in the school it transpired that when the short school term closed it was arranged that I should go every Saturday to Miss Dillon's home and recite certain lessons. These were among the hap-plest days of my life. She was a woman of taste and an admirable cook and there were flowers and such a dinner as I never dreamed of until I went there. Then, when the lessons were over, she used to tell me stories made up of the leading historical events of the world. In this way at the end of two years I had quite a knowledge of history, was reading in the fifth reader, was well advanced in other studies and had acquired a taste learning and was determined to gain an edu-sponded with Mary Dillon, and when he was elected to congress she was for some time his guest. She predicted when he was a boy that he would not only be a congresman, but a senator, and it was with feeling that Senator Nelson said that, although she was an aged woman when she died, and he had reason to be grateful that she lived to see part of her prediction fulfilled, it still would have given him the keenest satisfaction if she could have lived until her prophecy was wholly verified. After her death Miss Dillon's trother sent Senator Nelson a big parcel, which, when opened, proved to newspaper clippings concerning him which she had been years collecting.

TRAINING AS A YOUNG MAN. When he was 16 he heard that at Albior seminary, which was conducted by Seventh Day Baptists, a boy could get an education without money. He at once set out on a tramp of sixteen miles to see about it. Prof. A. R. Cornwall, who was assistant principal him work enough to pay for his room rent tuition and books if he could manage the rest. Senator Nelson says he often laughs when he thinks of the picture he must have presented when he appeared before Prof. Cornwall as one of the new students. Every garment he had on was homespun, as wel as homemade. The wagon, drawn by a pair of old oxen, on which was a chest containing his belongings, wood to keep his room warm. and enough cooked food to last him a week was also home made, having sections of big logs, with holes in the center for wheels. In the two years that he attended Alb lnary he says he did not have, all told, $10

When the war broke out Senator Nelson with twenty of his fellow students, enlisted. He served three years, was wounded, taken prisoner at Port Hudson, and came out a corporal. He then finished his seminary course, read law in Senator Vilas' office at Madison, was admitted to the bar, and eleto the state assembly of Wisconsin before he was 24 years old.

Senator Nelson's first nomination, which as often happens, was equivalent to an elec-tion, was peculiar. He knew nothing of politics, and when the secretary of state. who was a warm personal friend, proposed that he should try for the nomination as an assemblyman he told him he did no! know how to go about it. The secretary assured him by promising that if he would get the delegates of his own town of Deer-field he would do the rest. This he under-took to do, and accomplished. There were forty-five votes in all, and on the third bal-lot he received nineteen and his opponent twenty-two, while the rest were scattering made up his mind he would cover his defeat by absence, but, as it was with Frederick the Great, he was recalled just as he was getting away to find his forces victorious. While he was a member of the Wisconsin assembly, to which he was returned a second term, he assisted in electing Matt Carpen-ter to the United States senate.

Minnesota in 1892 and re-elected in 1894. The only sport which Senator Nelson enjoys is fishing, which is one reason he is so fond of what is known as the "Minnesota park region," where the beautiful lakes abound with the young black bass and where he has his country home. This home, which is on a farm a little more than a mile from Alex-andria, a charming little town of about 3,000 inhabitants, is simple and unpretentious, as is Senator Nelson himself in all he does and says. In speaking of his fondness for fishing "I am an old-fashioned fisherman Just

A great believer in the genius of hard work, Senator Nelson is indefatigably industrious. He is just now devoting himself to the history of finance. He has a prodigious nemory, a way of putting things into a very brief space, a clear idea of the different finan ial systems that have obtained and are now a operation throughout the world. Unlike he large majority of people at the present ime, Senator Nelson is not so much intersted in the gold and silver question as in changing the paper currency of the country, which he believes to be one of the most important of present issues.

"I was at the island the last time twelve years ago, and I could hardly realize that the places were the same," said Prof. Stejneer. "The war upon the seals has had a breadful effect. The herds are noticeably deoleted. The men interested in the industry are alarmed, for they see in this a dark future. I think that the men who have the leases of the islands will be in favor of any node of protecting the seal which to afford any real protection, but they are certainly of the opinion that the present arrangement is very unsatisfactory. There are representatives of the Russian governnent on the islands I last visited and the sealing is done under their supervision. The emale seals and the young are not touched. "I will make a report to the fish commis-sion at once and in it I will show what a change has come in the sealing industry in ten years. It is really an alarming situation when it is considered that this most valuable of fur bearing animals is being so rapidly killed off by the seal hunters who follow the nerd wherever it goes in the southern waters It is to be hoped that an international agree-ment will be reached which will make it posible to guard the seal, not only on the is-
