

SPORTS OF THE WEEK

Restoration of the Olympic Games and Other Gossip.

A WILD PIGEON AND A BIG BLACK BASS

The Thanksgiving Foot Ball Game—Omaha Back in the Western Association and a Review of the Fall Shooting.

POWER, BEECHER and his associates, who are looking forward with keen interest to the revival of the ancient Olympic games.

As all readers of ancient annals are aware the Olympic games are recognized as the earliest and most celebrated in enlightened history. They were held in the city of Greece, four years ago, and were presided over by ten judges chosen from the tribes of the Hellenic world.

harpoon his fourth Fatuity next year. His career in the country, he was driven away recently by Walter, one of the speediest sprinters in the east, and his showing was most auspicious.

Speaking of the runners reminds me, by the way, that the handsome 2-year-old Lady Doleful, belonging to Mrs. Charlie Stewart of Council Bluffs, is doing some tall sprinting in the east.

Tom Foley is rapidly completing arrangements for a continuous pool tournament, which will be held in his Douglas street billiard room for a few days.

Steve O'Donnell, Corlett's big sparring partner, didn't last long when he faced Peter Maher, the Irishman, at Maplethorpe Monday night.

En passant there is a story current that Corbett resigned the championship to Maher after a fight in Cleveland.

There will be a field trial near Baker's field, Cal., Thanksgiving day, that will interest all dog men.

ber they were slain by the barrel at Whiting, Waukesha, Missouri Valley and along the Platte and the Loup and their tributary streams, and recently with Walter, one of the speediest sprinters in the east.

The Jack snipe shooting has been spasmodic, and at no time more than "fair to middling." For a few days the Omaha Gun club held Tuesday evening at Parmelee's gun store prizes for general averages of season's shooting.

OMAHA, Nov. 15.—To the Sporting Editor of The Bee: For a number of years the Omaha Gun club has held Tuesday evening at Parmelee's gun store prizes for general averages of season's shooting.

Mr. H. E. Gray, the general photographer and the club's large group photo member of the club, a prize that certainly is appreciated as highly as any given.

Edgar Howard, editor of the Palladium Times and the county clerk, is a resident of the city.

John McDonald, Bob Holmes, Tom Davis, George Sand, George Stricker, Doc Pickard and Joe Hummel are camped on the Platte below Waterloo.

Jeff Bedford was at Langdon one day last week and made a fine catch of ducks.

A. L. Morris of Chicago was in the city yesterday, having run down to Omaha from Lake Washington, where he has been casting for four or five days.

Gunners should bear in mind that both ducks and wild shooting becomes unlawful on December 31.

Geese were reported a week ago along the Platte near Sutherland by the thousand and tens of thousands.

Fred Thornesheim of West Point was in the city Thursday, and he said they were having the best quail shooting in the west.

Amateur Champions of the State. There is little room for disputing the claim of the University club base ball team to the amateur championship of the state.

Table with columns: Name, W, L, T, R, P, etc. listing various athletes and their records.

LADS WITH BLOWING MANES

Great Preparations and Grand Changes at University Park.

THE CHAMPIONSHIP BATTLE THANKSGIVING

Waning Prestige of the Big Colleges—Western Aspirants for Glory—Coach Thomas' Popularity and Breezy Gossip from All Over.

It is confidently expected that Thanksgiving day will witness one of the largest and most enthusiastic crowds that ever assembled upon the University club's famous grounds.

Coach Thomas, who is expected to be the star attraction at the Thanksgiving day game.

The management is making most elaborate preparations for the occasion and should the weather be even as favorable as it is today the game will be a gala day indeed.

These club athletes without first experiencing invasion behind its goal posts.

That good old days when Harvard, Yale and Princeton were the only teams in the bowing the players over as if they were tin snips, to the great amusement of the spectators, are now gone.

This season the athletic club teams have come to the front and Orange and B. A. A. are the most prominent.

The future of football is a hard problem. Triple and four-cornered teams will no longer determine championships.

Another very sensible change is in the time. The Thanksgiving day game will open promptly at 2 o'clock.

The result of the recent big foot ball games furnishes a most interesting problem for contemplation for those concerned in the development of the game.

There is mourning in the camp of the Tigers. The Princeton defeated Harvard, but at the cost of the loss of their devoted captain.

There will be a lot of disgruntled people at University park Thanksgiving afternoon if Charlie Thomas has no tricks in store for the visitors.

The Carlisle Indians play great ball on the gridiron and give Yale one of the hardest fights of the year.

MAHA is to have another season of Western association football, and while many of the cranks would have preferred a franchise in the Western league, there is much general rejoicing that we are to have a team here at all.

George & Co. Furniture Company. Dining Room Furniture. At actual cost this week we offer every thing in the line of Sideboards, Extension Tables, Dining Chairs or China Closets for our week.

Special Sale Dining Room Furniture. Sideboards. $12 Oak, this week $7.50. $22 Oak, this week 13.50. $30 Oak, this week 19.75. $42 Oak, this week 26.50. $60 Mahogany " 39.00. $75 Oak, this week 43.50. $100 Oak, this week 62.00. $120 Oak, this week 73.50. $150 Oak, this week 98.00.

This Polished Oak Sideboard, 5 feet long, 6 feet high, swell front 44x20 glass, this week $26.50.

China Closets. From $7.75 in Oak to $150.00. We show 114 patterns and offer the entire stock at cost this week.

Solid Oak Dining Chair. $2.00. Store Open Monday and Saturday nights this week.

Every chair in our immense stock will be sold at factory cost this week.

These club athletes without first experiencing invasion behind its goal posts. Those good old days when Harvard, Yale and Princeton were the only teams in the bowing the players over as if they were tin snips, to the great amusement of the spectators, are now gone.

This season the athletic club teams have come to the front and Orange and B. A. A. are the most prominent. Lafayette has beaten Cornell by the same score Princeton made and Princeton has barely won from Lehigh.

The future of football is a hard problem. Triple and four-cornered teams will no longer determine championships. Another very sensible change is in the time.

The result of the recent big foot ball games furnishes a most interesting problem for contemplation for those concerned in the development of the game. There is mourning in the camp of the Tigers.

There will be a lot of disgruntled people at University park Thanksgiving afternoon if Charlie Thomas has no tricks in store for the visitors. The Carlisle Indians play great ball on the gridiron and give Yale one of the hardest fights of the year.

MAHA is to have another season of Western association football, and while many of the cranks would have preferred a franchise in the Western league, there is much general rejoicing that we are to have a team here at all.

These club athletes without first experiencing invasion behind its goal posts. Those good old days when Harvard, Yale and Princeton were the only teams in the bowing the players over as if they were tin snips, to the great amusement of the spectators, are now gone.

This season the athletic club teams have come to the front and Orange and B. A. A. are the most prominent. Lafayette has beaten Cornell by the same score Princeton made and Princeton has barely won from Lehigh.

The future of football is a hard problem. Triple and four-cornered teams will no longer determine championships. Another very sensible change is in the time.

The result of the recent big foot ball games furnishes a most interesting problem for contemplation for those concerned in the development of the game. There is mourning in the camp of the Tigers.

There will be a lot of disgruntled people at University park Thanksgiving afternoon if Charlie Thomas has no tricks in store for the visitors. The Carlisle Indians play great ball on the gridiron and give Yale one of the hardest fights of the year.

As all readers of ancient annals are aware the Olympic games are recognized as the earliest and most celebrated in enlightened history. They were held in the city of Greece, four years ago, and were presided over by ten judges chosen from the tribes of the Hellenic world.

Speaking of the runners reminds me, by the way, that the handsome 2-year-old Lady Doleful, belonging to Mrs. Charlie Stewart of Council Bluffs, is doing some tall sprinting in the east.

Tom Foley is rapidly completing arrangements for a continuous pool tournament, which will be held in his Douglas street billiard room for a few days.

Steve O'Donnell, Corlett's big sparring partner, didn't last long when he faced Peter Maher, the Irishman, at Maplethorpe Monday night.

En passant there is a story current that Corbett resigned the championship to Maher after a fight in Cleveland.

There will be a field trial near Baker's field, Cal., Thanksgiving day, that will interest all dog men.

John McDonald, Bob Holmes, Tom Davis, George Sand, George Stricker, Doc Pickard and Joe Hummel are camped on the Platte below Waterloo.

Jeff Bedford was at Langdon one day last week and made a fine catch of ducks.

A. L. Morris of Chicago was in the city yesterday, having run down to Omaha from Lake Washington, where he has been casting for four or five days.

Gunners should bear in mind that both ducks and wild shooting becomes unlawful on December 31.

Geese were reported a week ago along the Platte near Sutherland by the thousand and tens of thousands.

Fred Thornesheim of West Point was in the city Thursday, and he said they were having the best quail shooting in the west.

Amateur Champions of the State. There is little room for disputing the claim of the University club base ball team to the amateur championship of the state.

MAHA is to have another season of Western association football, and while many of the cranks would have preferred a franchise in the Western league, there is much general rejoicing that we are to have a team here at all.

These club athletes without first experiencing invasion behind its goal posts. Those good old days when Harvard, Yale and Princeton were the only teams in the bowing the players over as if they were tin snips, to the great amusement of the spectators, are now gone.

This season the athletic club teams have come to the front and Orange and B. A. A. are the most prominent. Lafayette has beaten Cornell by the same score Princeton made and Princeton has barely won from Lehigh.

The future of football is a hard problem. Triple and four-cornered teams will no longer determine championships. Another very sensible change is in the time.

The result of the recent big foot ball games furnishes a most interesting problem for contemplation for those concerned in the development of the game. There is mourning in the camp of the Tigers.

There will be a lot of disgruntled people at University park Thanksgiving afternoon if Charlie Thomas has no tricks in store for the visitors. The Carlisle Indians play great ball on the gridiron and give Yale one of the hardest fights of the year.

MAHA is to have another season of Western association football, and while many of the cranks would have preferred a franchise in the Western league, there is much general rejoicing that we are to have a team here at all.

These club athletes without first experiencing invasion behind its goal posts. Those good old days when Harvard, Yale and Princeton were the only teams in the bowing the players over as if they were tin snips, to the great amusement of the spectators, are now gone.

This season the athletic club teams have come to the front and Orange and B. A. A. are the most prominent. Lafayette has beaten Cornell by the same score Princeton made and Princeton has barely won from Lehigh.

The future of football is a hard problem. Triple and four-cornered teams will no longer determine championships. Another very sensible change is in the time.

The result of the recent big foot ball games furnishes a most interesting problem for contemplation for those concerned in the development of the game. There is mourning in the camp of the Tigers.

There will be a lot of disgruntled people at University park Thanksgiving afternoon if Charlie Thomas has no tricks in store for the visitors. The Carlisle Indians play great ball on the gridiron and give Yale one of the hardest fights of the year.

MAHA is to have another season of Western association football, and while many of the cranks would have preferred a franchise in the Western league, there is much general rejoicing that we are to have a team here at all.

These club athletes without first experiencing invasion behind its goal posts. Those good old days when Harvard, Yale and Princeton were the only teams in the bowing the players over as if they were tin snips, to the great amusement of the spectators, are now gone.

This season the athletic club teams have come to the front and Orange and B. A. A. are the most prominent. Lafayette has beaten Cornell by the same score Princeton made and Princeton has barely won from Lehigh.

The future of football is a hard problem. Triple and four-cornered teams will no longer determine championships. Another very sensible change is in the time.

The result of the recent big foot ball games furnishes a most interesting problem for contemplation for those concerned in the development of the game. There is mourning in the camp of the Tigers.

There will be a lot of disgruntled people at University park Thanksgiving afternoon if Charlie Thomas has no tricks in store for the visitors. The Carlisle Indians play great ball on the gridiron and give Yale one of the hardest fights of the year.

MAHA is to have another season of Western association football, and while many of the cranks would have preferred a franchise in the Western league, there is much general rejoicing that we are to have a team here at all.

These club athletes without first experiencing invasion behind its goal posts. Those good old days when Harvard, Yale and Princeton were the only teams in the bowing the players over as if they were tin snips, to the great amusement of the spectators, are now gone.

These club athletes without first experiencing invasion behind its goal posts. Those good old days when Harvard, Yale and Princeton were the only teams in the bowing the players over as if they were tin snips, to the great amusement of the spectators, are now gone.

This season the athletic club teams have come to the front and Orange and B. A. A. are the most prominent. Lafayette has beaten Cornell by the same score Princeton made and Princeton has barely won from Lehigh.

The future of football is a hard problem. Triple and four-cornered teams will no longer determine championships. Another very sensible change is in the time.

The result of the recent big foot ball games furnishes a most interesting problem for contemplation for those concerned in the development of the game. There is mourning in the camp of the Tigers.

There will be a lot of disgruntled people at University park Thanksgiving afternoon if Charlie Thomas has no tricks in store for the visitors. The Carlisle Indians play great ball on the gridiron and give Yale one of the hardest fights of the year.

MAHA is to have another season of Western association football, and while many of the cranks would have preferred a franchise in the Western league, there is much general rejoicing that we are to have a team here at all.

These club athletes without first experiencing invasion behind its goal posts. Those good old days when Harvard, Yale and Princeton were the only teams in the bowing the players over as if they were tin snips, to the great amusement of the spectators, are now gone.

This season the athletic club teams have come to the front and Orange and B. A. A. are the most prominent. Lafayette has beaten Cornell by the same score Princeton made and Princeton has barely won from Lehigh.

The future of football is a hard problem. Triple and four-cornered teams will no longer determine championships. Another very sensible change is in the time.

The result of the recent big foot ball games furnishes a most interesting problem for contemplation for those concerned in the development of the game. There is mourning in the camp of the Tigers.

There will be a lot of disgruntled people at University park Thanksgiving afternoon if Charlie Thomas has no tricks in store for the visitors. The Carlisle Indians play great ball on the gridiron and give Yale one of the hardest fights of the year.

COMPLETE CATALOGUE OF SPORTS AND GUNNING GOODS. SEND 2-CENT STAMP FOR COPY. E. C. MEACHAM ARMS CO., ST. LOUIS, MO.

Wrestled a draw at Madison Square Garden, New York, in 1888. He won in Melbourne, Australia, November 1888. He was defeated by Bob Greene of this city.

SHEELY, Ia., Nov. 12.—To the Sporting Editor of The Bee: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your issue of the 11th inst.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Ia., Nov. 8.—To the Sporting Editor of The Bee: To decide a bet please answer the following question: A bet B that the Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight would take place at Hot Springs, Ark. B takes the bet. Now Charlie Corbett holds the bet off. How is it? An answer in your issue would be appreciated by a reader of your paper for the past ten years.—Stymest Stevenson, Bookkeeper, W. L. C. Co.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 8.—To the Sporting Editor of The Bee: Please answer in your next Sunday's paper the following question: A bet B that the country of A and B in C and D getting 48; C bids 7 and makes 12, A and B getting high and low. —M. A. Pillsbury.

FREMONT, Nov. 12.—To the Sporting Editor of The Bee: Will you please state in Sunday's issue of The Bee whether the bicycle records in this city whether the bicycle records we read of daily being broken are really broken or are they just being broken and then repaired and then broken again? Also state what the different specified distances for records. This daily smashing of the best time ever made is going to be both monstrous and perplexing, and we appeal to you to help us out.—Clyde Club Members.

NEWCASTLE, Wyo., Nov. 12.—To the Sporting Editor of The Bee: Referring to my question and your answer to same in issue of Nov. 10, I have to inform you that I have not yet received your answer. I probably did not make the question clear to you, as from the answer it seems to me you did not fully understand the situation. Every time a runner reaches a base he has to be touched by the base runner. I have contended that as soon as the base runner touches his base he is then released for having run on. A fly ball and return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right to overrun the base and then return without being declared out, provided the baseman fails to touch him with the ball while he is yet in the air. This is a parallel case to the following: Suppose a base runner on first base is forced to vacate his base by a hit being made by the batter. He starts for second base, but before he reaches second base, before the ball is held on that base by the baseman. Now the baseman has a right