

ANXIOUS OVER THE OUTCOME

Speculation as to the Effect of the Withdrawal of the Dryad.

SULTAN CONFIRMED IN HIS OPINION

Has Been Doubtful All Along Concerning the Statement the Powers Were in Complete Harmony.

(Copyright, 1895, by the Associated Press.) CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 30.—(Via Sofia, Bulgaria, Dec. 1.)—It has not yet been conclusively developed here what is to be the effect on the disordered state of the empire of the relinquishment, temporarily at least, of the purpose of the powers to introduce additional guardships into the Dardanelles for the protection of foreigners in the domain of the sultan.

The ordering back to Salonica by the sultan of the British Dryad, which had been ordered up to the Dardanelles at the request of the British ambassador, Sir Philip Currie, in anticipation of the promised granting of the firmans by the sultan for warships to pass through, is officially explained on the ground that the proposed action would do more harm than good by inflaming the fanaticism of the Turks against foreigners on account of the proposed affront to the sultan of what would, in effect, have amounted to a naval demonstration against Constantinople.

The effect of the abandonment of this purpose by Great Britain is awaited with anxiety and great interest. The question of the guardships seems at a standstill at the present, though the threat of Sir Philip Currie's renewed demand that he be exempted from outrage is still open. Undoubtedly one effect of the ordering of the Dryad back to Salonica is that the oft-alarmed concert of powers in their attitude toward Turkey is waning.

CORRECTLY INTERPRETED THE SIGNS.

The sultan is known to have been skeptical as to this concert for some time past, and has based his policy on the supposition that Great Britain's demands upon a belief that no such concert existed, or that it could not endure for any length of time. This belief can be said to have been in the sultan's mind when Britain's withdrawal of her demand after it had been strenuously pressed to the very verge of a crisis.

Britain is influenced by the alleged danger to foreigners from fanatic Turks which would ensue upon the proposed demonstration, or whether she has learned to doubt the approval of her action which would be accorded by the other powers is therefore a question which is discussed on both sides.

United States Minister A. W. Terrell has received from Antab, on the southern slope of Mount Lebanon, a letter in which he states that the American missionaries there are safe and were unharmed in the recent massacre and have not required the aid of special guards.

Reports of a fanatical outbreak in Caesarea have created anxiety as to the safety of the American mission there, and Mr. Terrell has been making inquiries and is awaiting the nonarrival of private letters from Kharpout and Sivas also has a disquieting effect. Official dispatches describe a small conflict in Zeytinli, in which a number of Armenians were killed, and another at Enderin, where Armenian rebels attacked the town, burned the American mission, and killed the missionaries.

It is said the American admiral at Smyrna recently asked permission to bring an iron clad here to visit the sultan, but permission was refused.

SERIOUS FOR THE SULTAN.

A letter from Aden, Arabia, dated November 6, gives details of the revolt against the sultan in Yemen, the coffee growing district of southwest Arabia. The importance of the revolt is that it is a direct challenge to the loss of the sultan of the Mussulman holy city would probably mean his deposition, hence the strenuous official denials which have been made to the effect that no such rebellion is in progress.

So far the revolt has been confined to the district around Kharam, two days' journey from Saana, the capital of Yemen. The rebels number about 1,000 men, and have captured the arsenal at Saana, and have captured the arsenal at Saana, and have captured the arsenal at Saana.

The garrison fled to Masur and begged the twenty-five shekhs there to help them. The shekhs refused, and the garrison was taken to Saana and imprisoned. The telegraph is constantly cut and Sayid, the pretender, burns the letters and presents which come to him.

SOVIETUS TEMPORARILY DISHONORED.

BEHLIN, Dec. 1.—A committee of the social-democratic party announces that owing to police persecution it has been decided to temporarily suspend operations by the party, the leadership of which, until further notice, will be vested in the socialist members of the Reichstag.

SENATOR HILL'S TOUR A FAILURE.

Very Few People Turned Out to Hear His Lectures.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 1.—Senator David B. Hill's lecture tour in the northeast has proved a failure, and he came to an abrupt end when the senator closed his business arrangements with his manager, cancelled all future engagements and returned to New York. The reason assigned for this action is that he contracted a severe cold while at Duluth, making him so hoarse that further public speaking at present is out of the question. The fact is, however, that the audiences which gathered to listen to him at Milwaukee, Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth were so meager that the financial returns were insufficient to pay expenses, and Senator Hill refused to talk for nothing. He lectured last night at Duluth and came to Minneapolis this morning. He was booked for ten lectures altogether. The arrangements for the lecture at Duluth were made by Minneapolis parties. Before leaving the city tonight Mr. Hill declined to be interviewed and was evidently much disgusted with the reception he met with on this tour.

TOOK ON SEVEN MYSTERIOUS PASSENGERS.

CAPE MAY, N. J., Dec. 1.—The steamer company of the United States line, which sailed from Philadelphia last night for Port Antonio and the officers of which are under bail for alleged violation of the neutrality laws, were taken on board this morning and took on seven mysterious passengers. The steamer reached here before daylight and was away with her passengers before 10 o'clock. It is some time before the nationality of the men taken aboard can be ascertained.

FOUND HIS PRISONER DEAD IN BED.

POMEROY, O., Dec. 1.—It is reported that the Pittsburg Lumberman advanced struck the Sand Creek dike near Raynolds today and sank, together with eleven barges of coal, which were lost.

GERMANY WORKING IT TO A PROFIT

Playing the Part of Honest Broker

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The Turkish legation received from the sublime port the following telegram under date of today: "The Armenian rioters of Zeitoun (Sivas), having closed their shops and fired on the Mussulmans, killing one of them, an affray occurred, during which four Mussulmans, two soldiers and a number of Armenians were necessary measures were taken for the restoration of order."

"The Armenian revolutionists attacked the district of Enderin, burned the village of the governor and plundered the neighboring Mussulman villages. Troops were sent out for the repression of disorder."

Herald dispatch from Vienna says: The crisis is again getting serious. The old Turkey party threatens to bring about a revolution if the sultan gives the Yildiz kiosk as increasing. The sultan has given the title of pasha to Hasan Unsr, a well known Anglophobe writer, and has also appointed a number of Russian officials to various positions. The antagonism between the grand vizier and Sir Philip Currie is increasing, while Germany is profiting by her position as a broker between the powers to play the part of the "honest broker."

OPENED UP A NEW MINING CAMP.

Claimed to Be Richer Than Those of Cripple Creek.

DENVER, Dec. 1.—The splendid career of Cripple Creek may be repeated, and possibly eclipsed, by West Creek, which is within fifty miles of Denver and almost in sight of the dome of the capitol. The greatest activity prevails among the miners and prospectors and townsite boomers. There are now several hundred assessments worked, and the surveying of claims has just begun.

Mr. Ballard Smith, London correspondent of the World, first made a short speech, presenting the group of statutory, and was frequently applauded. He said: "I am here to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

"Homage to a France in reconnaissance of her generous aid in the struggle for liberty and independence."

Mr. Smith then alluded to the fact that it was Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

TRIBUTE TO TWO NATIONS

Status of Washington and LaFayette Formally Dedicated at Paris.

LOCATED IN A CONSPICUOUS PLACE

Joseph Pulitzer of the New York World is the Donor—Accepted in Honor of the Municipality.

PARIS, Dec. 1.—Bright weather shone upon the ceremony today of unveiling the group of statues of Washington and Lafayette, modeled by the well known sculptor, Frederick Auguste Bartholdi, and presented to the city of Paris by Joseph Pulitzer, editor of the New York World. A notable assemblage witnessed the unveiling, among the company present being: Mr. Henry Vignaud, first secretary of the United States embassy; Major Sanford C. Kellogg, military attaché, and Lieutenant R. P. Rodgers, naval attaché of the embassy; Hon. William T. Kimbly, United States minister to the Netherlands; Samuel F. Morse, United States consul general in Paris; General Annon G. McCook of New York, M. Bartholdi, the sculptor; the prefect of the Seine, M. Fremig, designer of the pedestal; a number of French officials and many ladies.

The site of the bronze group is at the west end of the Place des Etats Unis, in the most fashionable quarter of Paris.

Mr. Ballard Smith, London correspondent of the World, first made a short speech, presenting the group of statutory, and was frequently applauded. He said: "I am here to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

"Homage to a France in reconnaissance of her generous aid in the struggle for liberty and independence."

Mr. Smith then alluded to the fact that it was Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

Mr. Pulitzer's good fortune, as editor of the New York World, to inaugurate the popular subscription which gave a worthy pedestal to M. Bartholdi's statue of Liberty Enlightening the World."

FIRST WEEK LIKELY TO BE DULL

No Attempt at General Business Will be Made

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The first week of the Fifty-fourth congress, which convenes at noon tomorrow, promises nothing at either end of the capitol in the way of actual legislation. The time before the Christmas holidays is usually devoted to preliminary matters and the work of the session does not begin until after the recess. The new congress will probably not be opened to this rule. The senate proceedings may be enlivened by an attempt at reorganization, but in the house nothing can be done until the committees are appointed. Speaker-elect Reed says the committees will not be announced this week, with perhaps a slight exception to the committee on the judiciary. The speaker formulates the rules which are to govern the house during its sessions, and it is customary for the speaker to name the date with which he will begin his work. While it is believed that the rules of the Fifty-first congress, over which Mr. Reed presided, will be continued, some changes will be made as a result of experience, designed to still further improve the work of the machinery and the facilitation of public business.

Tomorrow Mr. Kerr, clerk of the last house, will call the house to order. After the roll call and the reading of the messages, the republican caucus Saturday night will occur and as soon as Mr. Reed is formally installed as speaker, the drawing of seats, which will be held on Monday, will take place. This is a somewhat tedious, but amusing, affair and will occupy the remainder of the afternoon. The reading of the messages will occur on Tuesday. The conclusion the house will probably adjourn until Thursday, and at its convening on Thursday morning immediately after the adjournment will continue probably until the committees are appointed. This is the program, but the unexpected might occur, and the republican caucus may be held on Monday night, and the drawing of seats may be postponed until Tuesday. It is not probable the first week of congress will be a very busy one, and the legislative work in the senate, if anything should be accomplished beyond the receipt of the president's message and the recess nominating of the new candidates, this session will be an exception in history.

In view of the fact that the message will not be read until Monday, and the recess of Monday will consist in the swearing in of the newly elected members who may be present and the appointment of a committee to wait upon the president, it is probable that the legislative work in the senate, if anything should be accomplished beyond the receipt of the president's message and the recess nominating of the new candidates, this session will be an exception in history.

Mr. Reed is expected to be a strong candidate. With Morton out of the picture, McKinley is the only one left to Reed, and I would not be surprised if Pennsylvania should do the same thing. This would give Reed 214 votes, and I should not be surprised if he were elected on a convention with about the same number."

When asked what he thought of Allison's chances, Colonel Ingersoll said that he was not particularly anxious to see any man mentioned, but that he was sure that "who has more negative strength. By that I mean that there is no one who appears to have a strong chance of being elected."

Colonel Ingersoll with Miss Ingersoll arrived in the city from Lincoln on the noon train and registered, as usual, at the Paxton. Neither in appearance nor in his habitual geniality has he changed since his previous visit to Omaha. He attended the matinee in the afternoon. He would the interval before his lecture he received a number of his Omaha acquaintances, who called on him at the hotel.

According to Colonel Ingersoll's observations the bulk of the votes will be divided between Reed and McKinley when the next republican national convention meets. "The sentiment in the east," said Colonel Ingersoll, "seems to be generally for one or the other of these two candidates. The New York vote will undoubtedly go for Reed. New York will be for Morton on the first ballot, but I do not think that any one has any serious expectation that Morton will be nominated. He is a very nice old gentleman, but it seems to be a general impression that he is somewhat too advanced in years to be a strong candidate. With Morton out of the picture, McKinley is the only one left to Reed, and I would not be surprised if Pennsylvania should do the same thing. This would give Reed 214 votes, and I should not be surprised if he were elected on a convention with about the same number."

When asked what he thought of Allison's chances, Colonel Ingersoll said that he was not particularly anxious to see any man mentioned, but that he was sure that "who has more negative strength. By that I mean that there is no one who appears to have a strong chance of being elected."

Colonel Ingersoll with Miss Ingersoll arrived in the city from Lincoln on the noon train and registered, as usual, at the Paxton. Neither in appearance nor in his habitual geniality has he changed since his previous visit to Omaha. He attended the matinee in the afternoon. He would the interval before his lecture he received a number of his Omaha acquaintances, who called on him at the hotel.

According to Colonel Ingersoll's observations the bulk of the votes will be divided between Reed and McKinley when the next republican national convention meets. "The sentiment in the east," said Colonel Ingersoll, "seems to be generally for one or the other of these two candidates. The New York vote will undoubtedly go for Reed. New York will be for Morton on the first ballot, but I do not think that any one has any serious expectation that Morton will be nominated. He is a very nice old gentleman, but it seems to be a general impression that he is somewhat too advanced in years to be a strong candidate. With Morton out of the picture, McKinley is the only one left to Reed, and I would not be surprised if Pennsylvania should do the same thing. This would give Reed 214 votes, and I should not be surprised if he were elected on a convention with about the same number."

When asked what he thought of Allison's chances, Colonel Ingersoll said that he was not particularly anxious to see any man mentioned, but that he was sure that "who has more negative strength. By that I mean that there is no one who appears to have a strong chance of being elected."

Colonel Ingersoll with Miss Ingersoll arrived in the city from Lincoln on the noon train and registered, as usual, at the Paxton. Neither in appearance nor in his habitual geniality has he changed since his previous visit to Omaha. He attended the matinee in the afternoon. He would the interval before his lecture he received a number of his Omaha acquaintances, who called on him at the hotel.

According to Colonel Ingersoll's observations the bulk of the votes will be divided between Reed and McKinley when the next republican national convention meets. "The sentiment in the east," said Colonel Ingersoll, "seems to be generally for one or the other of these two candidates. The New York vote will undoubtedly go for Reed. New York will be for Morton on the first ballot, but I do not think that any one has any serious expectation that Morton will be nominated. He is a very nice old gentleman, but it seems to be a general impression that he is somewhat too advanced in years to be a strong candidate. With Morton out of the picture, McKinley is the only one left to Reed, and I would not be surprised if Pennsylvania should do the same thing. This would give Reed 214 votes, and I should not be surprised if he were elected on a convention with about the same number."

When asked what he thought of Allison's chances, Colonel Ingersoll said that he was not particularly anxious to see any man mentioned, but that he was sure that "who has more negative strength. By that I mean that there is no one who appears to have a strong chance of being elected."

Colonel Ingersoll with Miss Ingersoll arrived in the city from Lincoln on the noon train and registered, as usual, at the Paxton. Neither in appearance nor in his habitual geniality has he changed since his previous visit to Omaha. He attended the matinee in the afternoon. He would the interval before his lecture he received a number of his Omaha acquaintances, who called on him at the hotel.

According to Colonel Ingersoll's observations the bulk of the votes will be divided between Reed and McKinley when the next republican national convention meets. "The sentiment in the east," said Colonel Ingersoll, "seems to be generally for one or the other of these two candidates. The New York vote will undoubtedly go for Reed. New York will be for Morton on the first ballot, but I do not think that any one has any serious expectation that Morton will be nominated. He is a very nice old gentleman, but it seems to be a general impression that he is somewhat too advanced in years to be a strong candidate. With Morton out of the picture, McKinley is the only one left to Reed, and I would not be surprised if Pennsylvania should do the same thing. This would give Reed 214 votes, and I should not be surprised if he were elected on a convention with about the same number."

When asked what he thought of Allison's chances, Colonel Ingersoll said that he was not particularly anxious to see any man mentioned, but that he was sure that "who has more negative strength. By that I mean that there is no one who appears to have a strong chance of being elected."

Colonel Ingersoll with Miss Ingersoll arrived in the city from Lincoln on the noon train and registered, as usual, at the Paxton. Neither in appearance nor in his habitual geniality has he changed since his previous visit to Omaha. He attended the matinee in the afternoon. He would the interval before his lecture he received a number of his Omaha acquaintances, who called on him at the hotel.

According to Colonel Ingersoll's observations the bulk of the votes will be divided between Reed and McKinley when the next republican national convention meets. "The sentiment in the east," said Colonel Ingersoll, "seems to be generally for one or the other of these two candidates. The New York vote will undoubtedly go for Reed. New York will be for Morton on the first ballot, but I do not think that any one has any serious expectation that Morton will be nominated. He is a very nice old gentleman, but it seems to be a general impression that he is somewhat too advanced in years to be a strong candidate. With Morton out of the picture, McKinley is the only one left to Reed, and I would not be surprised if Pennsylvania should do the same thing. This would give Reed 214 votes, and I should not be surprised if he were elected on a convention with about the same number."

When asked what he thought of Allison's chances, Colonel Ingersoll said that he was not particularly anxious to see any man mentioned, but that he was sure that "who has more negative strength. By that I mean that there is no one who appears to have a strong chance of being elected."

Colonel Ingersoll with Miss Ingersoll arrived in the city from Lincoln on the noon train and registered, as usual, at the Paxton. Neither in appearance nor in his habitual geniality has he changed since his previous visit to Omaha. He attended the matinee in the afternoon. He would the interval before his lecture he received a number of his Omaha acquaintances, who called on him at the hotel.

According to Colonel Ingersoll's observations the bulk of the votes will be divided between Reed and McKinley when the next republican national convention meets. "The sentiment in the east," said Colonel Ingersoll, "seems to be generally for one or the other of these two candidates. The New York vote will undoubtedly go for Reed. New York will be for Morton on the first ballot, but I do not think that any one has any serious expectation that Morton will be nominated. He is a very nice old gentleman, but it seems to be a general impression that he is somewhat too advanced in years to be a strong candidate. With Morton out of the picture, McKinley is the only one left to Reed, and I would not be surprised if Pennsylvania should do the same thing. This would give Reed 214 votes, and I should not be surprised if he were elected on a convention with about the same number."

When asked what he thought of Allison's chances, Colonel Ingersoll said that he was not particularly anxious to see any man mentioned, but that he was sure that "who has more negative strength. By that I mean that there is no one who appears to have a strong chance of being elected."

Colonel Ingersoll with Miss Ingersoll arrived in the city from Lincoln on the noon train and registered, as usual, at the Paxton. Neither in appearance nor in his habitual geniality has he changed since his previous visit to Omaha. He attended the matinee in the afternoon. He would the interval before his lecture he received a number of his Omaha acquaintances, who called on him at the hotel.

According to Colonel Ingersoll's observations the bulk of the votes will be divided between Reed and McKinley when the next republican national convention meets. "The sentiment in the east," said Colonel Ingersoll, "seems to be generally for one or the other of these two candidates. The New York vote will undoubtedly go for Reed. New York will be for Morton on the first ballot, but I do not think that any one has any serious expectation that Morton will be nominated. He is a very nice old gentleman, but it seems to be a general impression that he is somewhat too advanced in years to be a strong candidate. With Morton out of the picture, McKinley is the only one left to Reed, and I would not be surprised if Pennsylvania should do the same thing. This would give Reed 214 votes, and I should not be surprised if he were elected on a convention with about the same number."

When asked what he thought of Allison's chances, Colonel Ingersoll said that he was not particularly anxious to see any man mentioned, but that he was sure that "who has more negative strength. By that I mean that there is no one who appears to have a strong chance of being elected."

Colonel Ingersoll with Miss Ingersoll arrived in the city from Lincoln on the noon train and registered, as usual, at the Paxton. Neither in appearance nor in his habitual geniality has he changed since his previous visit to Omaha. He attended the matinee in the afternoon. He would the interval before his lecture he received a number of his Omaha acquaintances, who called on him at the hotel.

According to Colonel Ingersoll's observations the bulk of the votes will be divided between Reed and McKinley when the next republican national convention meets. "The sentiment in the east," said Colonel Ingersoll, "seems to be generally for one or the other of these two candidates. The New York vote will undoubtedly go for Reed. New York will be for Morton on the first ballot, but I do not think that any one has any serious expectation that Morton will be nominated. He is a very nice old gentleman, but it seems to be a general impression that he is somewhat too advanced in years to be a strong candidate. With Morton out of the picture, McKinley is the only one left to Reed, and I would not be surprised if Pennsylvania should do the same thing. This would give Reed 214 votes, and I should not be surprised if he were elected on a convention with about the same number."

When asked what he thought of Allison's chances, Colonel Ingersoll said that he was not particularly anxious to see any man mentioned, but that he was sure that "who has more negative strength. By that I mean that there is no one who appears to have a strong chance of being elected."

INGERSOLL TALKS POLITICS

Estimates Chances of Reed and McKinley as Even.

ALLISON AN AVAILABLE CANDIDATE

Democrats Without Any One Who Would Make a Strong Race—The Attempt of Endeavorers to Convert Him

Colonel Ingersoll with Miss Ingersoll arrived in the city from Lincoln on the noon train and registered, as usual, at the Paxton. Neither in appearance nor in his habitual geniality has he changed since his previous visit to Omaha. He attended the matinee in the afternoon. He would the interval before his lecture he received a number of his Omaha acquaintances, who called on him at the hotel.

According to Colonel Ingersoll's observations the bulk of the votes will be divided between Reed and McKinley when the next republican national convention meets. "The sentiment in the east," said Colonel Ingersoll, "seems to be generally for one or the other of these two candidates. The New York vote will undoubtedly go for Reed. New York will be for Morton on the first ballot, but I do not think that any one has any serious expectation that Morton will be nominated. He is a very nice old gentleman, but it seems to be a general impression that he is somewhat too advanced in years to be a strong candidate. With Morton out of the picture, McKinley is the only one left to Reed, and I would not be surprised if Pennsylvania should do the same thing. This would give Reed 214 votes, and I should not be surprised if he were elected on a convention with about the same number."

When asked what he thought of Allison's chances, Colonel Ingersoll said that he was not particularly anxious to see any man mentioned, but that he was sure that "who has more negative strength. By that I mean that there is no one who appears to have a strong chance of being elected."

Colonel Ingersoll with Miss Ingersoll arrived in the city from Lincoln on the noon train and registered, as usual, at the Paxton. Neither in appearance nor in his habitual geniality has he changed since his previous visit to Omaha. He attended the matinee in the afternoon. He would the interval before his lecture he received a number of his Omaha acquaintances, who called on him at the hotel.

According to Colonel Ingersoll's observations the bulk of the votes will be divided between Reed and McKinley when the next republican national convention meets. "The sentiment in the east," said Colonel Ingersoll, "seems to be generally for one or the other of these two candidates. The New York vote will undoubtedly go for Reed. New York will be for Morton on the first ballot, but I do not think that any one has any serious expectation that Morton will be nominated. He is a very nice old gentleman, but it seems to be a general impression that he is somewhat too advanced in years to be a strong candidate. With Morton out of the picture, McKinley is the only one left to Reed, and I would not be surprised if Pennsylvania should do the same thing. This would give Reed 214 votes, and I should not be surprised if he were elected on a convention with about the same number."

When asked what he thought of Allison's chances, Colonel Ingersoll said that he was not particularly anxious to see any man mentioned,