FRANK HURRIES HIS CASE

Former Reluctance to Being Tried Gives Way to Eager Desire.

CONSTANTLY AT COUNTY ATTORNEY'S

Result of Spoerl Trial Causes Change in His Disposition-Telegraphing for McGuire to Come.

Since the jury in the Spoerl case disagreed Israel Frank has displayed a most confident and unusual desire to have the case come on for trial again, and that as soon as possible. This desire was born after the disagreement, for before that Frank had been content to remain in modest waiting for the county attorney. It may have extended back a few days further to the time when Assistant County Attorney Slabaugh allowed the original case against Spoerl to be dismissed. County Attorney Baldrige at the time being out of the city, attending to a private case in Blair. Immediately after the dismissal Frank whooped things up because he was confident that he was out of the woods. He remained in this frame of mind until it was announced that it had been decided to reinstate the case. Frank was mad. He went around telling people that it was not justice, and a whole lot more things, including a threat that he would get back at those who were "persecuting" him for political reasons. But on the morning when the case against Spoorl was up for trial, Frank had loss all his anger. He said that he was glad the case was to be tried and that he and Spoorl were to be given an opportunity to prove the spotless whiteness of their characters. If he was found guilty, he wanted to be sent to the penitentiary. But he said that he knew that he would not be found entity.

MAY HAVE HAD A HUNCH. Frank evidently knew what he was talking about. He was a little dampened at first when Detective Maguire arrived. He rewhen Detective Maguire arrived. He remained confident when damaging evidence was introduced. He smiled when Judge Scott intimated from the bench that the two officers stationed on the east side of the river could not tell when the drowning of dogs occurred and how many dogs were drowned. He fairly chuckled when Rollo Williams, bailiff of Judge Scott's court, and an assistant in the county atterney's office, was called to the stand to prove that a man could not to the stand to prove that a man could not see a dog across the river. And when the trial was over and court adjourned, Assist-ant County Attorney Siabaugh put his arms out Frank's neck and Frank reciprocated the two danced until they fell back into

During the trial Frank was very familiar about the county attorney's office. He passed in and out continually when he was not in the court room. He was familiar with the county attorney and his assistants. He joked with Assistant Slabuagh. He visited the office of Assistant Winter, who had apparently nothing to do with the case, and spent some time with him. All this appeared at the time strange, because there is usually an worker from the good old state of Massachuster.

NOT FOR THE PUBLIC.

'Yes," was the answer.

The reporter asked concerning the contents of the message. He was told that it could not be shown him until County Attorney Baldrige arrived. It was intimated that it none of the reporter's business.

"I am interested in this case," he remarked, "therefore it ought to be shown me. You ought not see it. Do you think that a reporter should see everything? If you got this telegram you would use it in the paper." Two reporters were present when County was told the circumstances under which the telegram was received, opened and given to Frank. He was asked for the contents. He obtained the telegram from the stenographer.

would be taken up as soon as possible, preferably Wednesday or Thursday of this week. Balliff Williams was told to see if the witnesses for the state were in the city. On Monday he had not yet found if ex-Officer Collins, a very material witness in the case, was still in the city. Frank was so anxious that he should find out that on Monday evening Williams drove in Frank's buggy with Frank as a companion to Collins' house at Thirty-third and Spaulding streets. Frank says that he and Sport will go to trial together. He also says that the case will be called up possibly today, but at will be called up possibly today, but at any rate on some day of this week.

Outside Churches Join Hands with Members of Beth-Eden. The pastors of the various churches in the southwest part of the city, together with members of their congregations and the Baptist ministers, met in Bethchurch Tuesday evening to extend a welcome to Rev. W. W. Everta. A row of palms partly hid the feet, but not the smiling faces, of the visiting clergy, after they had taken seats on the platform. After singing, Dr. Hellings of the First Baptist church said that he was glad to greet Rev. Everts as a co-worker in this city, and especially as one who would preach the gospel to the upbuilding of the

The answer was received yesterday. There were in the office at the time a reporter, the stenographer, Baliff Williams and Israel Frank. Frank had been there for some time and he was expecting the tele-gram. No one else outside the employes of the office knew that it was coming.

The telegram was receipted by the stenographer and opened by her. What is it?" asked Frank. "Is it from

There is another significant incident showing Frank's standing. It was during the lat-ter part of last week that he was told that if Maguire would come to Omaha the case would be taken up as soon as possible, prefer-ably Wednesday or Thursday of this week.

Revs. F. W. Foster and Thomas Anderson were glad to be present and say amen to all of it. Several pastors were unable to be present. They sent their greetings. In clos-ing, Rev. Mr. Everts said that he was glad to meet so many different denominations on the same platform, as he felt that a narrow-ness of ideas was a great hindrance to re-ligious work. "We should know each other better and magnify the many points of which we all agres." he added. The meeting reminded him of vessels crossing the ocean they came near enough to hail each and then went on their way again. has been said about the Baptist and the water," he continued, "but with us all, blood is thicker than water, and the blood of Christ makes us all one. On the map each railroad makes us all one. On the map each railroad shows its line to be the shortest between prominent points, and so it is apt to be with churches, but we are all seeking the heavenly city. We have but one Master, and we are all brethren."

After singing a hymn and the benediction, a very pleasant and enjoyable meeting was a very pleasant and enjoyable meeting was

RELATIVES TAKE THE BODY. They Are Satisfied that Brock's Death

brother left home on November 21, last, saying that he intended to engage in business in Omaha. Before leaving he sold a team for $110. A little sister told Marion that the brother had collected $500 from a farmer and that he had said that he was intending to come to Omaha. This statement is doubted by the father and brother, as the dead man said nothing to them regarding the matter. They are both of the opinion that his death was accidental and agree with the verdict rendered by the coroner's jury, that Brock came to his death by carelessness due to leaving the gas turned on while being in an intoxicated condition. The deceased worked on a farm with his father, a short distance from Oakland, where he had lived since his birth.

Brock succeeded in saving about $2,000 about five years ago through his farming operations and some of the money is at the present time loaned to farmers. About four years ago he started to gamble at the Omaha bucket shops and the father thinks that he lost nearly everything in these transactions. U. S. Brock at the time of his death was 29 years of age and single. The remains were taken to Oikland yesterday.

EDWARDS MAY NOT GO

Refusal of Mayor to Approve Bond May Keep Him Out.

NEW LEGAL QUESTION HAS BEEN RAISED Right of City Council to Review Action of Mayor on a Bond is

Challenged-Mr. Dumont's

Position.

There is a new complication in the city reasurer muddle which is causing Mr. Edwards and his supporters considerable anxlety. It all hinges on the quertion of whether or not the city council has the right of review on the mayor's action on the bond of the treasurer-elect. As this is a ques-

Section 103 of the charter plainly declares Was Accidental,

Thomas and Marion Brock, father and approved by the mayor and council. The only Tuesday night. Marion Brock stated that his city council which involves the expenditure of money, and every ordinance passed by the city council, shall, within forty-eight hours after the action of the council, be presented to the mayor for his approval. It proceeds to provide that any contract, resolution, or ordinance that is returned without the ap-proval of the mayor, shall become a law by the affirmative votes of two-thirds of all the members elected.

will be noticed that in his communication to the council relative to Mr. Edwards bond, Mayor Bemis did not veto the action of the council in approving the bond. He simply stated his reasons for not approving the document and left the council to draw its own inferences. The council assumed that the communication was a veto and proceeded to approve the bond over the alleged veto. The point now at issue is whether the council acted legally in assuming that it had the right to review the mayor's action in this particular. There is no charter provision that gives it this right in the case of a bond,

The first step in the right about face movement on the retrenchment proposition was taken by the city council Tuesday night. An ordinance was introduced by which the salary of the mayor's private accretary was income or two of the leading lawyers of the city, who declared that according to the tions will be realized is not altogether cer-tain. Mr. Dumont was asked yesterday whether he would surrender the office to a successor whose bond had not been approved by the mayor. He would not give a positive answer, saying that he was not a lawyer and much preferred that the question should be settled in the courts before he was called upon to take action. On general principles he believed that the bond was worthless until it had been approved by the mayor. Mr. Edwards was certainly entitled to the possession of the office as soon as he had legally qualified, but if it should develop that he had not legally qualified, he would not he had not legally qualified, he would not shirk the duty of standing between the tax-approved bond. HE ACKNOWLEDGED THE CORN.
