NEEDED AMENDMENTS.

Mr. Sherman followed Senator Morgan, saying that he heartily applauded what had been said by Mr. Morgan. The Monroe doctrine he considered of the highest importance to the civilized world, but the importance of the question only emphasized the necessity for deliberation in its consideration. He thought the resolution should be amended so that it should go to the committee for this purpose. "There is no hurry," he said, "the controversy will not be settled in a day, or a month, and I do not believe that war between Great Britain and the United States will form a feature of the settlement. I do not contemplate or wish to contemplate a hostile result. I have seen enough of war to dread its consequences, and I believe that Great Britain will soon realize that she has too much to stake to invite a hostile encounter with this country." But while he held this view, he believed the president to be right in taking the position that the United States, as the strongest nation on this hemisphere, should not permit her flag to be trampled upon by European powers. This it was right and proper to say. Nor did he believe that the English would support their officials in refusing to submit the question to arbitration. The Monroe doctrine, he said, was of English as well as of American origin; as a matter of fact, it had been first proposed by Mr. Chauncy M. Depew. Mr. Sherman concluded with an appeal for proceeding in an orderly manner. "Let us," said he, "said he was not in haste, but he thought the time for the commission to report should be limited, and gave notice of an amendment providing that the commission should report by April 1. He did not think that the Monroe doctrine could be upheld as a proposition of international law, but he believed that it should be supported as we supported the Declaration of Independence, because it was our doctrine.

SAW NO REASON FOR DELAY.

When Mr. Lodge concluded Mr. Voorhees of Indiana took the floor. He said he saw no reason why action should not be taken on the bill now. There was, he declared, no reason for further investigation. He was not contemplating war, but what was right. We all, he said, have faith in the Monroe doctrine, but if any man's faith had been shaken he invited him to read Secretary Olney's dispatch and be reassured by that document, which, he declared, was the equal of any state paper which ever emanated from the department over which Mr. Olney presided. Mr. Voorhees said that he was not hasty in this matter, and called attention to the deliberate proceedings of the British authorities on the question. As a preliminary he was willing that the disputed territory should be investigated, but the senator from Ohio (Sherman) was more magnanimous toward Great Britain than he (Voorhees). Mr. Sherman thought that a great nation like Great Britain would not set up a claim unless it was just. Every parallel of latitude and degree of longitude on the map of the world, said Mr. Voorhees, a great man had displayed, demonstrated the truth of what he maintained. It showed that Great Britain had gradually pushed forward her boundary until her territory had grown from 70,000 to 100,000 square miles. By silent encroachment Great Britain had laid claim to territory larger than the state represented by the senator (Mr. Sherman). Mr. Voorhees scouted the idea that there might be war. There is no fear of war, said he. He had a Christian horror of war, as others had, but he pointed to Canada as a guarantee of peace. With Canada at our mercy, Great Britain would not dare to fight. With Great Britain's commerce on the high seas at stake there would be no war. He adverted to the war of 1812 as conclusive evidence that England would not again jeopardize her commerce. No, said Mr. Voorhees, there would be an adjustment, but it should be known and understood on both

SENATOR ALLEN OBJECTS.

Mr. Allen, populist of Nebraska, objected to a second reading of the bill, which would carry it over until tomorrow. In a short speech he said he did not expect there would be any war. He thought from the amendment proposed by Mr. Lodge that there would be more of a political war than anything else. "Great Britain is a big bully. It is time something was done to check him in his wild career. England has been going around the world for years bullying and imposing upon little countries. Now, if she is not to be allowed to become more and more tyrannical and unjust in the carrying out of this policy among the republics of the western world, it is absolutely necessary that some powerful nation here shall assume the task of doing police duty, so to speak, of settling between the oppressed and the would-be oppressor from abroad, and saying 'hands off.'" It strikes me that the Monroe doctrine, carried out, places the United States in just the position that I have suggested it is necessary for some powerful government to fill. I rejoice to see the country getting ready to do this, and I am glad to see the president, the president, and the people are also well in accord on the subject. "But there will be no war. If the government remains firm, Salisbury will give away."

IRISHMEN TENDER THEIR SERVICES.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 19.—About forty of the leading Irish-Americans of this city, representing all the various Irish societies, held a meeting last night to discuss the Venezuelan affair. After a discussion of the object of the meeting and a talk on the probability of war with England, a ringing resolution was adopted, authorizing Mayor McKinley the services of a regiment of 1,000 volunteers, composed of residents of Cleveland and made up of Irishmen and sons of Irishmen, in order as the resolution expressed it, "to uphold the glory of the United States and humiliate England and ultimately bring about the freedom of Ireland." It was also decided that in sending the offer to the governor Major Gleason should make it clear that the thousand is only a beginning, and when more are wanted more will be forthcoming from this city.

WILL BE SETTLED BY PEACEFUL METHODS.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Dec. 19.—Ex-Secretary of the Navy R. W. Thompson, in commenting on the president's message, said: "Both countries are making a mistake in their attitude and purpose, but the controversy will be settled by peaceful methods." Continuing, he said: "So far, the doctrine is merely the doctrine of President Monroe. While it is accepted everywhere as expressing our position in regard to the encroachment of foreign powers on the American continent, it has not been given the force of congressional affirmation. England may say it had never been notified of the intention of the people of the United States to maintain the position of protesting against the acquisition of territory by European nations on the American continent." Received with Favor in Buenos Ayres. NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—A dispatch to the Herald from Buenos Ayres says: Outside of the English colony here, who regard President Cleveland's message as a mere threat, the reception of the interpretation of the Monroe doctrine is enthusiastic.

ENGLISH EYES ARE OPENING.

Just Beginning to Realize that the United States is in Earnest. SOME ASSUME A BLUSTERING ATTITUDE. British newspapers confess their surprise over the United States which Congress supports the position of the President. LONDON, Dec. 19.—In commenting today upon the Venezuelan question the newspapers generally agree that the situation is much more serious than they thought it to be yesterday. In the public mind, also, there is a general feeling of disappointment at the action of congress in supporting the stand taken by President Cleveland in his message to that body. The stock exchange here and the exchanges throughout the country continue depressed under the influence of the difficulty which has arisen between Great Britain and the United States. At the same time there is no excitement. Consols declined one-fourth of 1 per cent, foreign funds were weak and American and Canadian stocks were lower on continued selling. The Pall Mall Gazette money article says: "Of course, whatever happens, America will lose credit over the affair. It is particularly inopportune when many of her railways need money."

BRITISHERS DISAPPOINTED.

The St. James Gazette says that the British were much disappointed in reading the American programs today, and expresses the fear that the Americans will not read the diplomatic correspondence or see that Lord Salisbury is right, adding: "We think that the American press, with its customary enterprise, has been giving us everything but the facts, and its tendency is to encourage us to believe that President Cleveland has made a splendid effort to uphold his country's honor. The Americans, if sensible, are so sentimental, and so full of resentment, let them read the dispatches." The Pall Mall Gazette among other things says: "The present is a crucial time for the diplomatic correspondence or see that Lord Salisbury is right, while but on single continental journal of repute sustains President Cleveland." The St. James Gazette heads its article on the Venezuelan developments: "War or Wipe Out?" and says: "President Cleveland's message in the month of a year, a diplomatic effort which has not only failed to bring about a settlement, but has also included only one of the two sides."

GUILTY OF FIVE MURDERS.

Harry Hayward Gives in Detail a History of His Numerous Crimes. NEVER TROUBLED BY HIS CONSCIENCE. Completely Exonerates His Brother from Any Connection with the 'Ging Murder—Says 'Blitz' Was Hypnotized. MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 19.—The ante-mortem statement of Harry T. Hayward, the full text of which makes 20,000 words, the Times will print tomorrow morning in full. It is in many respects a most remarkable document. It was made under the most favorable conditions and with solemn assurance on the murderer's part that he was telling the truth. The full text, to be published tomorrow, gives for the first time the name of one of the victims and other important details, which have heretofore been omitted in the abstracts that have been printed. Not only does he claim to have murdered during his brief career not less than five different people, but in describing the various tragedies in which he figured he shows an utter absence of human feeling and a pleasure in his crimes that marks him as an unusual type of criminal. The language used in describing his criminal adventures is in the careless, flippant style that characterized his testimony on the stand. His first murder was that of Carrie Hess, near Pasadena, Cal., and he describes the affair thus: "I met the girl at a dance, and I cut short. I killed her. She had money and I shot her and buried her. That is all that I look at in this way. It was not much of an amount. It was $100 and some odd that she had. I got the money. She would naturally be holler and I looked at it that she would be better off if dead. There would not be anybody to 'holler' around, as she did not have any relations. She was young, pretty, and a little bit on the sporting order. The money was left her by her father. It has always been in my head to kill a person and not look at their face after they are dead, because there's that mind business that leaves an impression on your mind. That is what makes murderers confess. The conscience bothers them." BURIAL PLACE DID NOT SUIT. He then goes on to describe how he got her money, on some pretext inveigled her out to drive in the mountains and how he shot her. It was a fizzle, he said, because he did not figure it out as carefully as he would have done later. She did not die at once, but flopped around. He buried her the best he could, but worried about it afterward and hired a man two weeks later to go and put her in a box and throw it into the port at Los Angeles. He knew this man's name, but on the principle of honor among thieves would not tell it. Nothing was said of the matter. She did not die, he said, was his object in life, girls the second, and travel the third. There was a girl in Minneapolis with whom he was going on to describe how he would have done later. She did not die at once, but flopped around. He buried her the best he could, but worried about it afterward and hired a man two weeks later to go and put her in a box and throw it into the port at Los Angeles. PREDICT BAD FINANCIAL EFFECTS.

LONDON, Dec. 19.—The financial article in the Times tomorrow will predict that the real effects of President Cleveland's action in the Venezuelan matter on the financial position of America will be serious and protracted, while the depletion of the treasury will continue for a long time.
