Judge Scott Livens Up the Hoover Trial by Jumping On a Witness.

TAKING OF TESTIMONY QUICKLY OVER

tention to the testimony. The evidence was interesting, inasmuch as it consisted of a review of the circumstances which led up to Dr. Allison testified that he had assisted the shooting and of the statements of eye witnesses to the tragedy.

Hoover, while he showed that he possessed a nature which did not appear to be very susceptible to forebodings over his fate, was evidently disturbed by some of the evidence. He appeared to be especially effected when his half sister told of the quarrel which occurred between himself and DuBois on the day on which he shot the latter. He listened more calmiy to the narrations of the shooting. Throughout the morning his small figure was huddled in a corner of his chair and he sat with his head supported by his hand.

In the course of the morning's proceedings Jufge Seet had an opportunity to impress the dignity of the court upon the spectators, and he did not fall to do so. The opportunity he did not fail to do so. The opportunity presented itself when Dra Allison, Summers and Coulter were called and failed to respond. He was told that they had been subpoensed, but had not reported. The court instructed the cierk to issue a capias for each of the doctors, and the trial was delayed until one arrived.

Dr. Allison soon entered the room and Judge Scott rumounted the beach. The physician walked toward the witness stand, but Judge Scott pointed to the front of the beach and called out: "Come here."
"Dr. Allison obeyed and then Judge Scott

"Why wasn't you here?"

Dr. Allison explained that when he was summoned by a deputy sheriff he was told that it would not be necessary to hang about the court room; that he could wait until he was called by telephone. This explanation did not appear to satisfy the court. FINE IMPOSED AND REMITTED.

This witness ain't going to be sworn until this is explained," remarked Judge Scott. "I want to find out how it is that when a case is called the court has to wait until it pleases a doctor to be here."

The court paused a moment and then administered the oath to the physician to tell the truth regarding his non-appearance and once more he questioned the man of medi-cine. Dr. Allison gave the same explana-tion. Judge Scott sent for the deputy sheriff, but he could not be found.

"I want to find out whether the power of this court is to be superseded by a sheriff, or any one else. "I fine you $50 and costs and you stand committed until it is paid. I propose to settle this," the court continued angrily, "if I settle nothing else." After Dr. Allison gave his testimony he was taken in charge by a deputy sheriff.

After adjournment at noon an attorney appeared in his behalf. He stated that Dr. Allison was doing nothing more than obeying peared in his behalf. He stated that Dr. Al-lison was doing nothing more than obeying the orders of the deputy sheriff. He had come within five minutes after he was said:

that because they are doctors they can do as they please, but they will find cut differ ently. I don't care if there is only one doc tor in this city and he is called in a case of life and death. When he is summoned he has to be here and that is all there is about it. The proceedings of this court can't be stopped by them. I will, however, remit this fine if Dr. Allison will promise to be promptly on hand the next time he is subpoenzed."

Dr. Allison promised and he was freed. he other physicians did not appear. Judge Scott ordered that the guilty deputy sheriff When court convened yesterday a very few minutes were spent by the counsel on both sides in briefly making a statement to the jury. The state then at once called its

TOLD BY A RELATIVE.

An account of the quarrel out of which the tragedy seems to have directly arisen, was given by the first witness called. Katie Brophy, a 17-year-old half-sister of Hoover and Mrs. DuBois. The witness spoke in a plain-Nive tone, but readily, and referred to the principals in the tragedy as Sam and Claude. According to the statement of the witness It appears that Hoover had objected for some time to an intimacy which existed between Miss Brophy, who was employed in DuBois' office near Thirteenth and Howard streets, and another girl in the office. On the after-noon of December 13, the day of the crime, Hoover entered the office and remonstrated with the girl again on account of this in-timacy. The girl began to cry and while she was weeping DuBois entered. The sight

"I don't want you to be fussing over that girl," he said to Hoover, testified Miss Bro-'That's none of your business." was the response.

A few minor words followed and then DuBois angrily remarked:
"Get out of here, you d-d miserable whelp

He led Hoover to the door, but there Hoover asked that he be given his time. The two figured for a while and then they agreed that the amount due Hoover was $10.40. DuBols said that he did not have the money and went out to borrow it. He returned few minutes later and handed $10.50 Hoover, telling him to keep the change. Hoover, however, persisted in giving back the 10 cents. The parting between the two men was not indicative of the tragedy which "I am ever so much obliged to you," said 'You are welcome," answered DuBois.

Hoover went out. Miss Hoover added that while DuBois was out of the office to borrow money she en-treated Hoover not to have any trouble with DuBois. He responded that he would not and with upraised right hand promised.

The witness said that shortly before 3 o'clock she received a telephone message from Hoover asking her to meet him. She promised to see him on Howard street, opposite the office, and a few moments later Hoover appeared and motioned for her to come over. She did so and found Hoover in what appeared to her a somewhat intoxicated condition. He inquired of the whereabouts of a friend and then and friend and then said that he intended to go to Kansas City. He referred to the quarrel with DuBols with the following words:

"Sam had no business to stick his nose into that, and he would be sorry that he did. I would have done right if I had shot him." The witness said that she remonstrated with her half brother again, and that he again said he would do nothing to DuBois.

DOCTORS AS WITNESSES. The defense attempted to show that Hoover drank considerably, but the question was not allowed by the court. The witness was permitted to say, though, that she thought that Hoover was drunk when she spoke with eyes.

Isaac E. Burdick, an architect, was called to identify a plan he had made of the shoe shop of Gustave Sanifeldi at 41815 South Thirteenth street, where the tragedy oc-

Dr. Sherman Vanness, who made an au-topsy on Dullois' body at the morgue, was called to testify to the results of his ex-amination. He found two bullet wounds

Dr. Allison testified that he had assisted in the operation on Dullois and had also been present at the autopsy. He said that after the operation it was found that the wound was necessarily fatal, the leaden bullet having perforated the liver. Dullois died between 3 and 4 o'clock on Sunday, fifteen or eighteen hours after having been shot.

The story of the tragedy which occurred in the shoe shop on Thirteenth street was told by the proprietor, Gustave Saalfeldt. During the recital Hoover was plainly affected. He sank down in his chair and pre-boy, Andrew Jackson, were there. Hoover ext down in a chair about three feet from Saalfeldt's bench. The parties engaged in a conversation and in the course of it Hoover remarked: "I would give a quarter if Sam Durbet would be a conversation of the course of the cours DuBois would show up."

About ten or fifteen minutes later DuBois entered. He called out: "Good evening, gentlemen," and walked to the front of Saalfeldt's bench, not more than two feet from Hoover. He said nothing more, but Hoover half arose and called out: "I've got you where I want you, you

FIRED THE FATAL SHOTS. With these words Hoover flashed a revolver and fired twice at DuBois.

Witness said that at this point he decided that he had seen enough and got out of a back window as fast as he could. As he ran he looked back and saw DuBois rush toward Hoover.

Charlie Saaifeldt, a brother of the preceding witness, who was present when the shooting took place, gave an account of the affair. He testified that Hoover was not drunk, but appeared to be downhearted. Saaifeldt also went out of the back window after the shooting started.

The witness said that later in the evening The witness said that later in the evening he went into the rear room of Bell's drug store. DuBois was lying down and Hoover he went into the rear room of Bell's drug store. DuBois was lying down and Hoover was beside him. A conversation was going on and Sailfeldt heard Hoover say:

"I always teld you I'd kill you."

"I never thought you would do anything like that," responded DuBois.

Andrew Jackson, the negro who was in the shop, teld the story of the occurrence. He ran out of the front door of the shop and as he ran he saw DuBois seize Hoover's arms. He did not see DuBois again until after he was dead.

B. C. Bell, the druggist, into whose place DuBois dragged Hoover after he had been DuBois dragged Hoov r after he had been shot, testified that he saw DuBois drag

"It is the principle of this court that rich you the first time I saw you."

DuBois by this time succeeded in taking "Yes, I shot you. I told you I would shoot revolver from Hoover and handed it to a bystandir with the remark:

"Take this gun. He shot me, but I don't want to shoot him." DuBois was led to the rear of the store. Hoover accompanied him and two or three times said that he was sorry he had shot DuBois and stated that he hoped he would get well. Bell said that he did not think that Hoover was drunk.

James P. Fenton testified that he received revolver from DuBois and he later turned it over to the police. He heard Hoover re-mark several times, "I told you that I would shoot you." An Hoover was taken out by the polico witness heard him say that he hoped DuBois would get well. The witness said that Hoover did not appear drunk.

A couple of police officers who arrested Hoover were called. One of them identified the revolver with which DuBols had been hot and which was turned over to the police by Fenten.

When court reconvened at 1 o'clock Joseph Askleford was called to the stand. He was present while DuBole was dragging Hoover into the drug store, and until Hoover was arrested. He testified to the admission made by Hoover that he shot DuBels, and his later remarks that he was serry that he

John W. Bell, a brother of the former witness, Bell, and one of the proprietors witness, Hell, and one of the proprietors of the drug store, was also a witness of the incident in the drug store. He heard the admission of Hoover. After taking the revolver from Hoover, DuBols walked back to a mirror and seeing the blood on his chirt exclaimed: "My God, my God! My poor wife and children."

Absham Singer a Douglas street reason.

Abraham Singer, a Douglas street pawnproker, identified the revolver used by Hoover to one be sold on the afternoon of the day the tragedy occurred. He could not identify Ho ver as the man who made the purchase, but he said that he looked like him. ATTEMPT TO SHOW INSANITY.

With this witness the state at 2 o'clock rented its case. The defense at once opened by calling to the stand Mrs. DuBois, the of the murdered man, and a sister of the accused man. She was dressed in deep

From questions which were put to Mrs. DuBois it was evident that the defense was to be insanity. Attorneys started out by asking if Hoover was insane, but an objection from County Attorney Baldrige was sustained The witness was then asked what effect liquor had on Hoover, but this was also ruled out. The same fate met a question whether Hoover's father and grandfather were insane

The attorneys for the defense put a whole eries of questions, the gist of which was a discover, whether by actions or words or in any other way. Hoover exhibited indica-tions of insanity. These questions were all ruled out on the ground that they called for a conclusion of the witness. Mrs. DuBois, however, did state over an objection that Hoover never showed any hostile feeling oward her husband in her presence. The half-sister, Miss Brophy, was called t the stand and an attempt was also mad to show by her that Hoover was insans The witness was permitted to say that on both occasions when she new Hoover that day he said that he was going to Kansas-City. In the second conversation he hade goodbys to her and e.i.d.

On cross-examination the state tried t show that in the first conversation Hoove scolded Miss Brooky and that he cried he second while he was trying to make up When the witness left the stand the court gave the jury a few minutes' recess. When it returned at 3:15 the attorneys for the defense consulted a few minutes with Hoover and then announced:

that Hoover was drunk when she spoke with him the second time. She was also asked if Hoover had not always been a good brother. But this question was also ruled out. She said that she had formerly lived at the house of DuBuis, but during the past two years had lived at Hoover's house.

During the recital of this story by the witness Hoover appeared to be considerably affected. He turned his head away while "We rest."
