The mulet law, coupled with the hard times has compelled another lot of saloon kespers in Council Bluffs to go out of business. The city and county tax amounts to $925 per annum, and this, the saloonists claim, is more than they can pay under the present circumstances. Men who used to have gready employment at wages that gave them something for the daily "growler," are now atranded without the price of a tenth part of a jar. This has caused the consumption of liquors to fall off more than any number of temperance lecturers could have done, for saloon keepers are not usually in the business for their health. No cash, no beer, has been their motto. Last month there were several saloon keepers who threw up the last month of their tax, which they had already paid, rather than lose money by running to the end of their time. This month, another installment of mulct tax coming due, there is another batch who have quit. They are: Paul Meyer, near the transfer; B. There is an anecdote told of an Indiana man who was presenting a letter of introduction to a merchant in the Ecuadorian capital, Quito. Ecuador is famous for its earthquakes. All the houses there are but one story in height, and the windows and doors of the thick walls are the universal niches for safety.

The Indiana man has just finished an elaborate pantomime in an attempt to convey without words his joy at meeting the Spanish merchant. In the middle of it came an earthquake shock. Like a flash the merchant shot into one of the window niches, yelling to the stranger, "Pronto! Pronto!" 'Quick! Quick!'')

The traveler was narrating it subsequently when earthquake stories came up.
"I didn't know no Spanish, and I didn't know what 'pronto' meant, but you bet I prontoed," said the Indiana man.
