COULTER WILL REMAIN IN JAIL, Judge Baker Would Not Lower the Batt Bond.

The habeas ourgus case of Jerome fined in the county, jail on the charge of mbezzlement, was taken up at the opening of the criminal court yesterday. In the petition praying for the writ it was set forth that the amount of ball fixed by the court, $15,000, was excessive, but that good bondsmen had been secured who had quali-fied to the amount of $14,000, and the court Munyon's Rheumatism Cure is guaranteed was asked to order Coulter's release on this

As stated Monday the bond offered had It cares acute or muscular rheumatism in been turned over to the county attorney for from one to five days. Sharp, shooting pains in any part of the body stopped by a few doses. A prompt, complete and permanent cure for lameners, streness, stiff back and all pains in hips and loins. Caronic and all pains in hips and loins. Caronic and strength of the county attorney Day, who has had charge of the Coulter case, reported to the county attorney by which the best were each good for the amount for which the best warms and strength of the county attorney for examination, and at the opening of court that he had examined the bond and believed the sureties were each good for the amount for which the sureties were each good for the amount for the county attorney for examination, and at the opening of court county attorney for examination, and at the opening of court county attorney for examination, and at the opening of court county attorney for examination, and at the opening of court county attorney for examination, and at the opening of court county attorney bars. court that he had examined the bond and believed the sureties were each good for the amount for which they had separately qualified. He stated that there were a number of bondsmen who had qualified for amounts ranging from $1,000 to $3,000, each being responsible for the amount for which he had signed. The court questioned the county attorney closely as to the method he had pursued in making his investigation into the sufficiency of the bond and developed the fact that the only examination had been by means of inquiry from friends or acquaintmeans of inquiry from friends or acquaint-ances of the bondsmen. ances of the bondsmen.

Judge Baker said that a bond on which a number of individuals had qualified for small amounts, each agreeing to become responsible only to the extent of the amount for which he had qualified, was not as good as a bond on which one or more sureties had qualified for the full amount. The purpose of the band, he said, was to insure the presence of the accused in court for trial and his bonds-men would not be as particular to look after him if they were interested for small amounts as they would be if they were each responsible for the full amount. As to the amount of the bond, Judge Baker said it had been fixed by the police judge after hearing the evidence in the case, and he did not feel justified in reducing the amount. "If the bond was by individuals who qualified in the full amount," said the court, "I would think better of it, but if the defendant took the $24,000 which he is charged with taking, the bond is none too places who would do it.

Mercer remarked that this was the first Coulter's attorney argued that it was a very difficult matter to get bondsmen at this time and asked the court if the bond would be approved, provided another surety was found who would qualify for $1,000, thus making the full amount of the $15,000 required. The court evaded the question and refused to answer directly. Judgo Baker then announced that on as count of the very serious condition of his wife, who has been ill for several days, he would not hold court, and directed the bailiff to adjourn court until this morning. After court adjourned Coulter, accom-panied by a deputy sheriff and his attorney, went out to look for another bondsman to qualify for the $1,000 needed to make the full amount of the bond. Coulter expressed corfidence in his ability to find a man and said that he expected to be released when court convened tomorrow morning. CITY COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS

K. Coulter, the exaleputy city treasurer, con- Controversy Over Street Cleaning Discussed at Length.

MATTER REFERRED TO A COMMITTEE

Standing Committees Reconstructed -Hascall's Union Depot Resolution -Action Respecting City Jail-Reception to Grand Army.

The bulk of the council meeting last night was devoted to a rehash of the controversy between the Board of Public Works and the labor organizers. After two hours of very informal discussion the whole matter referred to the committee on judiciary. The committee will meet the laboring men at Labor Temple at 3 o'clock this after-

Organizer Waller was on hand early with nearly 500 followers, who packed the lobby to the last inch. They threatened to inundate the space inside the rail, until the sergeant-at-arm was directed to enforce the rules, and all outsiders were compelled to take the outside. The communication from Street Commissioner Kasper relative to the labor controversy and the communication of H. C. Waller to the board were read and referred to the committee on judiciary.

Waller was allowed to speak, and he put in half an hour in reasting the Board of Public Works, the newspapers and the Aso ciated Charities. He was particularly bit-ter against Street Commissioner Kasper, whom he accused of keeping a saloon and whom he accused of keeping a saloon and refusing to employ men who did not spend their wages over the bar: He declared that the Associated Charities was a take and ought to be wiped off the face of the earth. He concluded by informing the council that if any member refused to "do our bidding" they would see that men were put in their places who would do it.

time he had heard that Kaspar owned a saloon and Kment suggested that the members of the Board of Public Works be al lowed to tell their side of the story. THEY QUESTION WALLER.

Prince asked Waller whether it was a fact that in order to get their names on his list applicants were compelled to join a abor organization. Waller emphatically denied this and called on all of his men who were not members of any union to hold up their hands. Every hand in the lobby went up. Street Commissioner Kaspar explained that he had a saloon two years ago and since that time it had come to be called "Kas-par's saloon," although he had no interest in it. He detailed the difference between the oard and Waller as previously published. Chairman Munro of the Board of Public Works added that when the board agreed to use the lists furnished by Waller as far as possible it did not propose to allow Wal-ler to be the absolute dictator as to whom it should employ. Dozens of men had come to its office and declared that they were unable to get Waller to recommend them be cause they did not belong to his union. was generally understood that men with families were to have the preference, but fully one-third of the names submitted by Waller were those of single men.

CHANGES IN COMMITTEES. Some of the people who have been wonder ing how Hascall and Wheeler were going to get places on the important committees had their curiosity satisfied. A resolution by Wheeler provided that the judiciary com mittee be increased from three to four mem bers. Kennard wanted to know what great emergency had arisen that required an addition to the committee. Wheeler expirited and in doing so revealed the purport of the resolution. He said that since the mittee was appointed the council had elected member who was a member of the bar and whose legal attainments would be in-valuable on that committee. He declared that Hascall should have a place on the com-

Prince took his cue and suggested that and Wheeler modestly accepted the amendment. The resolution was then passed and later in the session President Saunders made the following changes in the standing committees: Hascall and Wheeler added to judic ary; Wheeler substituted for Thomas on finance; Mercer and Thomas added to grades and grading; Hascall chairman of plats and additions and third place on rules and Wheeler, chairman of rules, The bonds of the city depositories were

The contract work on the Q street viaduct was finished about a week ago and the final estimates for repairs on both viaducts were allowed by the city council last Monday vening. Some work yet remains to be done, but just how it is to be done is what is puzzling the city fathers.

When the planking at the west end of the Q street viaduct was torn up it was found that the stringers were rotten and would tave to be replaced. The contractors ordered the lumber and it is now on the ground, but center of the hall, casting a brilliant sheen it is doubtful if it will ever be used for the purpose for which it was originally intended.

Monday the contractors of deciding the center of the hall, casting a brilliant sheen over the spectacle of the moving throng, a purpose for which it was originally intended. Monday the contractors, the Martin Lumber company, made a proposition to the council, agreeing to do the work, providing the city would assume all risks of injury to the viaduct and to the workmen. City Engineer armory was at times uncomfortably crowded Beal stated that it was a delicate piece of work to put in the new stringers without
