DOPED THE WIDOW'S DIAMONDS.

About four weeks ago an elderly widow with an independent fortune, who resides on one of the most fashionable boulevards in was coming. the West End, relates the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, went to a down town jewelry store, unaccompanied, having in her possession a diamond cluster brooch and a pair of diamond earrings, the latter valued at $900 and the former an equal amount, if not more, and delivered them to one of the clerke, with the request that they be cleaned. The gems were of a peculiar character and would be noticeable under any circumstances. The lady is a regular patron of the jewelry establishment in question, and nearly every clerk in the house is familiar with these peculiar diamonds. No unusual interest was evidenced, therefore, when the widow, garbed in the plain but rich costume which characterizes her appearance on the streets, en-tered the store and delivered the diamonds. to speak to his employer. Then he changed his mind and in as indifferent a manner as he could affect he looked at the lady and

"Have these diamonds been out of your ossession lately?"
The lady looked at the young man behind the counter in a questioning manner, as though wendering what spirit of curiosity or impudence had suddenly possessed him. She

"I beg your pardon," he said, perceiving her hesitation, "but it would really be best for me to know. The old lady thought for a moment, and then said, still wondering:

"Yes: not long ago I loaned them to a lady relative of mine to wear to a ball." "Well, madam," returned the salesman, "I am sorry to say that these are not your dia-monds. The stones with which these ear-rings and brooch were originally set are gone. These diamonds were manufactured." The widow could hardly believe her ears. Filled with wonder and alarm, she sorrowfully gathered up her "jewels" and departed. Retiring to her home in the West End, she thought long and seriously over the matter. At last she called into consultation some of her most intimate friends, with the result that detective talent was brought into requi For three long weeks, commencing at the very beginning of the whole trouble, the sleuth followed the matter, which proved perplexing and sometimes embarrassing, and was at last enabled to make a report to the old lady to about the following effect:

The diamonds, or some of them at least, had been located, and enough uncovered to show that a young lady had, through the assistance of an expert at the jeweler's trade, had genuine stones removed from certain settings and bogus ones substituted. This was so well done that to an unexperienced eye the change was not apparent. Then the unset gems were for a consideration placed in the keeping of a money lender, to be redeemed in a few days or in a very short time. The stones could easily be recovered, but it would cost money. Not only the full amount advanced, with the interest the full amount advanced, with the interest cuctomary in such cases, but a bonus must be paid, as the time limit specified for redemption had passed. And then, too, it might be desirable to avoid notoriety. There was another way, a legal method, for recovering the gems. The person with whom they had been "placed" might be proceeded against, but that would be very troublesome and would necessitate exposure.

Such, in brief, was the result of the detectives' work, and it placed the wealthy widow in an unpleasant position. The knowledge that the gems could be recovered was pleasing, but it was not pleasing to contemplate the possibility of an ugiy exposure.

Then, and only then, as the story runs, was the lady who had borrowed the jewels informed of what had been discovered. Gossip has it that she was at first indignant, but when it was made plain to her that she could ald very materially in recovering the stones, she acknowledged that she had made the substitution.

BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATIONS. eler who made the change for her was taken into her confidence or not does not appear. One story is to the effect that she pretended to want the gems reset in another style as a surprise gift, and to make her surprise the more complete she had wanted the old set-ting to appear unchanged for a while, and for that reason she wanted bogus gems put in This much accomplished, the rest was easy Of course she had not the least intention of actually stealing the diamonds, but her pian was to redeem them in a very short time, as soon as her own finances would permit, and have them put back in the original setting. Nobody would be any the wiser and no harm would be done. But her plans miscarried Her aged relative called for the return of the levelry discovered that the strong ways not jewilry, discovered that the stones were not as brilliant as they ought to be, and thought they ought to be cleaned.

The upshot of the whole thing was that the easiest way out of the trouble was resolved upon; and the wealthy widow paried with account the easiest way out of the trouble was resolved upon; and the wealthy widow paried with account the case of the case. solved upon; and the wealthy widow parted with enough of her cash to secure the return of her diamonds and to insure the secrecy of all parties who had figured in the transaction. When visits were paid to homes of those concerned, reporters were informed that they were into in," and would probably not be at mome for a day or two. True to their sense of duty, detectives who handled the case were sholidly ignorant of anything of the kind, so that it could not be authoritatively learned whether or not all of the diamonds had been recovered. monds had been recovered.

GENERAL GIBBON'S INDIAN FIGHTS

Reminiscences of a Man Who Wa-with Him in the West. William Woodcock was with the late Gen eral Gibbon, the famous Indian fighter, fo more than five years while he was the com mander of the Department of the Dakotas relates the Helena Independent. He was civilian in the service, and was made a con fidant of the general and the other officer n some of the councils to which only the favored few were admitted. Such a was the one belt the evening before the bar tle of the Big Hole, when the command of General Gibbon engaged three times the num ber of warriors under command of Chie Joseph, the most crafty fighter who ever prossed the path of Uncle Sam. The battl

"If anybody tells you that General Gibber wasn't a fighter, just tell him he lies raid William to me." General Gibbon was all right. I remember the evening he called the officers together and adviced with them about the battle of the next day. He had sent out scouts, and they had come back and said there were 'heap Indians' ahead. They hadn't found as many tepees as usual, but they had learned somehow that there were as many as sixteen men to the tepee, and they estimated the Indians as several hundred; I don't remember just how many. General Howard was expected in a short time, and General Gibbon called the officers together and said to them "Boys, the Indians are out there ahead of us and the question is whether we will go after them or not. You know, if we wait for leneral Howard we may never have didn't hold up his hand to show that he was in favor of a fight. That was the kind of a man Gibbon was, and that was the kind of men he had with him. There were twenty-six or twenty-seven citizens who lived down in that country who were following the com-mand and camping just a short distance from us. General Gibbon called them in and asked them what they wanted to do. He told them that if they were going to go into the fight would be under his command. Out of th whole of them there were about a dozen who didn't turn back at that, and it is a remarkable fact that those who stayed were nearly all killed. There were ten dead civilians the next day, and their leader was shot through the hips, and never did recover entirely from the wound. It was a real battle, and we lost eighty-five killed and wounded, out of a part of five companies of the Seventh regiment.

There were 200 or 250 soldlers in the en-General Gibbon was wounded through the where I helped to take care of him. The battlefield was a couple of miles from the camp of the evening before. At the time I was with a party that had just lost a mountain howitzer to the Indians, but we never got it back, though we cried nard enough. The Indians had sense enough to destroy it, and a lot of ammunition, besides. Some that that wouldn't believe if I hadn't seen them. We were out on a skirmish line when just in front of me I saw an Indian girl with her hand over her eyes, looking out to see who "I called out to the officer near me that "I called out to the officer hear me that there was a liftle girl in front. 'All right, don't hurt her,' says he. And when we went up nearer we found that she was dead. She had been shot through and had died so suddenly that she hadn't moved a muscle. She looked for all the world as if she were alive and there was an officer shot so alive. And there was an officer shot so that the bullet went into his skin near one of the soft ribe and came out in exactly the same place it went in, after going around his body and keeping under the skin all the way. The doctors ran a cord through it, and they used to pull it back and forth evry day to keep it from healing too fast. He got well, and there was a black ring around him the rest of his life, one of the prettiest things

"We couldn't find any dead Indians to The clerk glanced at them and looked up in surprise, because of a certain something which his experienced eye had detected in an instant. For a moment he said nothing. He was dumbfounded. At first he started to speak to his employer. Then he charged chances to do it. There were over 100 bodies in one hole we found on the side of the bank of the river.

"Old Chief Joseph was a man to remember. There was never a general more brave than he was. He was a match for some of the best of them. When he was at the head there was no such thing as one soldier being good for eight or ten Indians, as you may hear people say.

"General Gibbon was a mighty fine man.
I don't expect to meet a better one. He was as brave as they can make them, and he was always as good to his men as a father would have been. There will be many a man who still lives in this country who will be sorry to hear that Gibbon is dead."

To Any One Afflicted With Piles.

The Pyramid Pile Cure, the new, painless remedy which has been so remarkably suc-cessful in curing every form of piles and rectal diseases, has recently been placed on sale at druggists, and it is safe to say when its extraordinary merits become fully known there will be no such thing as surgical op-erations for the cure of this obstinate and common trouble.

That you may resilze how bad I was, I will say that I was confined to my bed and went before the college physicians here, who said my case was a new one to them and wanted seven or eight hundred dollars to undertake a cure; the great pain had brought on a rupture, and I knew an opbrought on a rupture, and I knew an op-eration would be death to me on account of blood poisoning. Nearly every one here knows of my terrible suffering from piles, and I feel that I cannot praise the Pyramid Pile Cure enough, and the Pyramid Pills also. My kusband will join me in highly recommending the Pyramid; my daughter was cured by one box only. For several years I weighed but about 90 pounds, now I weigh 150 and feel in perfect health.
