PLANS TO BENEFIT OMAHA TALKED OVER

Report on the Work of the Club-Importance of the Transmississippi Exposition-State Fair and Fall Carnival.

A general meeting was held in the rooms of the Commercial club last night to increase interest in the organization and to talk over matters of interest to the city and state. A great many of the enterprises and plans promoted and fostered by the club were discussed. The members of the Board of State Pair Managers were present.

Chairman Weller of the club stated that the membership was 350 and the annual dues amounted $6,500, both of which, Mr. Weller held, should be doubled. He spoke of the objects of the organization and mentioned some of the good that it had done and was doing, especially in the way of fighting discrimination in rallway rates. He mentioned the condition of trade in the city, but stated that he did not believe that the jobbers were doing a much smaller business than they have done in the past. He said that they were beginning to reach out into the northwest and the southwest for trade instead of the quartet sang "Good Night; Beloved." confining themselves to the state. He advocated more of this kind of enterprise in order "to let people know where Omaha is." Commissioner Utt also urged that an effort should be made to increase the membership and spoke of the advantages offered in the way of periodical reading room, club rooms and a dining hall, in addition to those which affected business. Of the work done so far this year, Commissioner Utt mentioned the printing in book form of the proceedings of the Transmississippi congress at a cost $1,900, over $1,000 less than anticipated. These pamphlets contain three or four pages of the resolution locating the exposin in this city and will be sent out through the country broadcast. Mr. Utt also stated that the delegates to the Grand Army en-campment and to the Women's Relief corps meeting were cared for and entertained by the club for four or five days. Of future work Mr. Utt mentioned the en-tertainment of some 1,000 delegates to the Commercial Law league meeting, which will be held in the city in June and which will bring to the city some of the most prominent lawyers in the country, including mem-bers of congress and other notables. In August the Christian Endeavorers will hold a session in the city and this is expected to be attended by 8,000 delegates. During fair week the Northwestern Scandinavian Sing-ing society will meet here. Some 700 singfive bands and a multitude of people attend. Finally the state fair and the Ak-Sar-Ben festivities will be looked after.

LOWER INSURANCE RATES. He said that the club had also taken up the insurance question in answer to the complaint that the rates in the city were too high. He said that the insurance companies advanced a multitude of reasons in support of the claims that the rates were just, and it was necessary to meet their claim with some logical argument in order to have them lowered. He said that a com mittee had been appointed to compile and figures in an attempt to combat the club had also taken up the question of a market house, but no solution had been ched. He mentioned the case of Kansa City, which has a market house $20,000 originally and from which the city is now deriving a neat income, besides cheapening the cost of vegetables to the Chairman Weller expressed himself as es ecially worked up over the 5-cent bridge toll on freight shipped into Iowa. He said that Iowa merchants could ship their goods into Nebraska without paying the toll, but that the rule did not work the other way. Regarding the high insurance rates, Mr. Weller said that it would be necessary to confront the insurance companies with reane for a reduction, as they had a multitude They claimed that the against reduction. water supply was insufficient, then that the hose supply was small, again that buildings were too high or too small. He mentioned the fact that he had visited stores and establishments in New York and other eastern cities similar to that of the Richardson Drug company, of which he is the head.

Regarding the union depot scheme, the matter was that in statu que, and would probably remain in that condition for the next thirty to sixty days. Three out of the six systems have agreed to enter the depot. Two of the other three, the Milwaukee and the Rock Island, are staying out until some litigation between them and the Union Pacific over the use of the latter's bridge is decided, in order that after making a contract to enter the depot they may not be barred out by being unable to cross the river. The will be heard finally this week before the United States supreme court. had promised to come into the scheme as soon as a decision was rendered.

"I found them packing and unpacking goods in the same room," said Mr. Weller.
"The men working over combustible articles had lighted cigars in their mouths. Here, we have all appliances for fighting fire and keep combustibles separated. Yet the eastern firms pay a much less insurance rate than we. There may be a good reason for th's, but if there is it ought to be discov-

Kansas City was enthusiastically supporting the plan of a road through the south west to the coast, which would make it on of the chief grain centers in the country. He urged the citizens of Omaha to be as thusiastic regarding the proposed line from this city to Duluth, furnishing an outlet to the lakes. By this road Mr. Weller prophesied that Omaha would be even a greater grain center than Kansas City.

J. H. Dumont took a cheerful view of business conditions and also urged the merchants to reach out for trade into other territory. He spoke against the rate discrimination. President Wattles of the Transmississipp exposition especially emphasized the adthe advertisement that the exposition would afford of the west's resources. He said that the south was drawing immigration by adthe south was drawing immigration by advertiging and he believed that the west could do the same. Omaha depended on the recurres of the country behind it and these could be developed only by getting people here to develop them. He thought that 2,000,000 immigrants might be attracted by the exposition.

TIME TO WAKE UP. "The people of the city do not realize the

"The people of the city do not realize the magnitude of the undertaking," he said. "They should wake up to it and use their influence in advertising it."

Secretary Charles E. Williamson of the Nebraska club read an invitation to the mass meeting which is to be held tonight at the club rooms. He said that all the countes in the state were waiting to see what Dauglas county and Omaha intend to what Douglas county and Omaha intend to do and that some decided action was needed to set them an example. George F. Munro of the club spoke en-thusiastically of the objects of the club. Governor Furnas of the State Board of Agriculture was invited to talk and responded, referring especially to the success of the last state fair. He said that the board was by no means unanimous in locat-ing the fair in Omaha, but that it was as a unit now in believing that it was the wiesst thing it had ever done. He denominated the last fair as the most marvelous success in the history of the board and compli-mented the merchants for more than ful-filling their promises and for their support. filling their promises and for their support.

W. R. Bennett stated that the retailers had made an effort to have the festivities of carnival week held later than the fair on account of the early date, but that after conference with the board of directors of the Knights of Ak-Sar-Ben they found that this could not be done this year and were content to have the two occasions combined. H. H. Hardy spoke in the same strain.

Chairman Dinsmore of the board mentioned some of the advantages that an early fair had, among them being that the display of stock would be better and larger than if the fair was held later.

BOWS TO BROATCH'S WILL

Omaha celebrated the 118th anniversary of Blythin's First Vote in Health Board Meeting Quickly Changed.

WAS NOT FOR THE MAYOR'S MAN

Takes it Back After Being Openly Scolded and Being Reminded of the Conditions of His Appointment.

Just for a couple of minutes yesterday afternoon there was a prospect of an interesting disruption of the present administration majority in the Board of Health. Dr. Blythin took his place as commissioner and on the very first roll call he voted contrary to the private instructions of Mayor Breatch. The mayor expressed his dissatisfaction openly and vigorously. Blythin replied and the mayor again applied the torch. The result was that the commissioner gracefully capitulated and changed his vote in accordance with the demand of the mayor.

It was expected that action would be taken relative to the appointment of inspectors and a lobby of unusual dimensions filled the office. An hour was occupied in considering the reports, that of the garbage inspector coming in for the usual amount of attention. The bill for the removal of dead animals was held up for inspection. First one member and then another declared that something ought to be done to cut down this item of expense. Then they talked for a long time and ended by approving the bill as they have done twelve times a year since the present garbage contract went into existence.

Benawa suggested that since the meat nspector was now doing the veterinary work for the fire department some portion of his salary ought to be paid out of that fund. He was appointed a committee of one to try to reach an understanding with the Board of Fire and Police Commissioners.

After an awkward pause of a couple of inutes Benawa moved that the question of the election of Charles Johnson as sanitary inspector, which was laid over at the previous meeting, be taken up. Christie moved the election of Edgar Smith. The roll was first called on Johnson. It was a tie. Benawa, Lichtenberger and the mayor voted aye and Sigwart, Christie and Blythin no. Then a vote was taken on Smith. perger voted aye again and Smith was apparently elected by 4 to 2. But Mayor Broatch did not announce the vote. He red-dened to the roots of his hair and nervously removed and replaced his glasses. It was plainly evident that he wanted to say something and finally he concluded to say it. He began by saying that he was sorry to see the year begun so inharmoniously. "And I might as well say," he continued, "and will say it now and here, that I had received the positive assurance that Johnson would be elected. I cannot understand how a man can reconcile his positive promise with his action here today and I have no respect for a man who will break his obligation in this manner." It was Blythin's turn to show color. He said he did not wish to antagonize the mayor, but Smith was a friend of his and he had promised him long ago that he would vote for him if he was appointed commis-sioner of health. He had pleaded to get action deferred, but was unable to do so, and now he could not break his word to his friend. He hoped that the mayor would not regard his action as any breach of his

The mayor was now in a very wrathful frame of mind. "I want to say to you, sir," he snorted, "that you would never have had the position you have if you had not promised me that you would vote for John-You owe your appointment to me and on that account you are under obligations to support me by your vote."

Blythin then inquired if it was too late to change his vote. The mayor said it was not and Blythin said that he would change his vote to Johnson. "Johnson is elected," declared the mayor, and the board ad-Johnson's name was not under consideration when Blythin voted and no vote was cast for Johnson except his, but o one minded a little thing like that No action was taken in regard to the other nspectors.

Buford and Kellogg were laced on the stand and stated that they eft the church immediately upon the con-clusion of the services and were home at he time the shooting took place. The friends of the applicants made a descent upon the commissioners singly and in drove and there was every prospect of a lively time for the few days interveing before the next meeting of the board, at which time it was expected that an appointment would be

The members of the board went into caucus on the matter and Chairman Jenkins pre-sented a scheme which he had been revolving in his mind for several days. He argued that this would provide jobs for two men and give better service without the expenditure of any more money. ommisisoner Kierstead was strogly inlined to facor the plan, but the other mem-oers of the board were strongly opposed to it, saying it would result in an increased expenditure on account of double sets of instru-ments, office supplies, prescriptions and many other things, and would inevitably be fol-lowed within a year by an increase in the pay of the two men. Receiver Gannett Angry at Intervention of State Auditor.

HIS ACTION DESCRIBED AS IMPERTINENT

llegation that the Interests of Policy Holders Were Being Disregarded Denied-Hearing Set for Next Saturday.

The case of the Omaha Fire Insurance com pany came up before Judge Keysor yesterday morning on the hearing of the application of State Auditor Moore to intervene, it being charged in the application and petition that the receiver, Earl W. Gannett, was pursuing a course that was in the interest of the stockholders and prejudicial to the interests of the policy holders. A voluminous answer was filed on the part of the receiver, and counsel for Auditor Moore asked for time to consider the points raised in the answer, several of which he urged were entirely irrelevant and improper. Judge Keysor thereupon set the case for hearing at 2 o'clock next Saturday.

The answer referred to covers several pages of typewritten matter and is very caustic in tone. It starts out by admitting that Eugene Moore was elected to the office of auditor of state, but denies that he is charged by law with the general supervision and oversight of the insurance affairs of the state for the protection of policy holders. It is then alleged that no such supreme authority or autocratic power is vested by law in any officer of the state and the inter-vention of Auditor Moore in this case is characterized as an impertinent interference with and supervision of the powers vested in the court and an assumption of power not

The duties of the auditor, as defined by law, are then set forth at length and it contended that the law does not invest the auditor with any power over insolvent com-

It is admitted, as charged in the petition auditor, that losses are occur and charges on the company be thereby increased, and it is also admitted that the policies should be cancelled and the uncarned premiums returned to the policy holders, or the risks should be reinsured, and this very condition is urged as a reason why the order of the court should be vacated. The receiver urges that he has no money with which to cancel policies and return the uncarned premiums, or reinsure the risks, and has no way of getting any. The assets of the company, he says, are such that they cannot b readily converted into money, and, even if this could be done, the money could not be thus applied without creating a preference in favor of such policies for the amount of the unearned premiums, to the detriment of other creditors of the company.

The receiver denies that he intends to abandon his duty to the company and to the policy holders, and denies that he intends to turn lists of the policy holders over to agents of other companies without consideration He contends, however, that nearly all of the policy holders will reinsure in other companies for the unearned premium at some agreed rate of discount, and that the agents of other companies have been getting these policies and are having the holders assign their claims to such agents, who are hold-ing them as claims against the assets of the company. The receiver says he had arranged with one agent and was about to arrange with others when stopped by the court to take up these policies and rewrite them, re-turning the policy to the receiver without making any claim against the company. He alleges that such an arrangement is advantageous to all concerned.

In conclusion the receiver informs the cour that he has told Auditor Moore of his plan to dispose of the outstanding policies in this way. He charges Moore with bad faith in going into court and revealing his plans.
