Many Young Women Have Little Regard for Financial Conditions of Their Escorts-Past Week in Local Society.

One not infrequently hears some young maiden semark, "Oh, I know what you horrid men talk about when you get together. You just criticise us poor girls awfally, now, don't you?" And she is disappointed if a vigorous denial is not forthcoming.

If there is one thing over which girls are more curlous than they are over any other subject it is to know what the men say about them when they get together. While society's fairer members at Kenningtons and other Lenten functions from which men are debarred have been discussing the shortcomings of their brothers, the latter have been considering a few social problems themselves. Whether Miss A is prettier than Miss B, or whether the Jones house gives grander parties than those given by the Smiths are not the problems which receive the deliberations of the men. The relation between the financial and social worlds is far more apt to be a favorite subject for discussion. Times are hard and the girl who is willing to accommodate herself to the times that shrink the purse is more likely to receive the favorable verifict of these society men's courts than her sister who is pos-sessed of bewitching beauty and brilliant mplishments, but who knows nothing of gratitude. Apropos of this subject a letter was received in this city last weak containing some interesting remarks on the popular topic. It was written by a young man who enjoys an extensive acquaintance among the swagger set of Omaha, and is popular wherever he goes. Had the letter been written by a youth who had yet to be ushered within society's realm but little attention would be bestowed upon his reveries. But coming as the letter does from a young man who is "more than seven" and who has taken part in a number seven" and who has taken part in a swell of the swellest functions in eastern as well western cities there is a significance attached to what he says which is not to be slighted.

He writes: "I read with quite a little in terest what you had to say about the social part of your life, and was especially inter-ested in the way you expressed yourself. yourself. The question, 'whether it is worth the time and trouble, and expense, permit me to add, is a question that has confronted me several since last fall in connection with local society, which, of course, is but a poor comparison to Omaha society. I have concluded that it does not pay to spend one's time and energy, and what, to me, is much more important, just at the present stage of the game-money-in dancing attendance on the ordinary, insipid girl. A man can't be real nice to a young woman whom he may admire, and admire only without being misunderstood, either by the world or by the girl. Then, too, the ordinary girl does not understand what it really means to a man, epeaking purely from financial standpoint, to take her to a ball. In fact, I often think that they imagine that they are doing a man a favor by ac-cepting his company. With married women it is different. The smallest attention paid married woman is rarely lost. It b smile of satisfaction and real pleasure that comes over a married woman's face when you pass up some supercilious, chattering, senseless young girl, and ask the married woman for a dance. "Since coming to this city, yours truly has made it a point to be as nice as possible to both the married and the unmarried women, and I must say that the attention shown the narried women has given me more pleasure the square inch than the attention shown by the girls has to the acre. "The married people here have a card club, and when it was formed elected me a member. I'm the only unmarried person in the club, yet I really enjoy the meetings greatly. The only reason that I was elected a member was that I had made it a point to meeting on Friday evening: W. B. The entertainments given during the past week have been of an informal nature and were most of them in honor of out-of-town visitors. Although the week was by a lively one, it could not be called there were the dull, as there were two good attractions at the theaters, besides these impromptu entertainments.

Many society people have gone to Chleago to attend the opera. Easter will soon be here and on that day the churches will be filled with an array of well dressed people, many who never attend church but once a year, many then merely to ar the glorious music or to see the new spring bonnets and gowns. Many will be glad to have Lent over and gayety begin again.

siastic advocate of the extension of sugar beet culture. He says that during a re-cent visit to Norfolk Me had occasion to call upon the retail merchants of that city in the interest of home made goods, and he was convinced that they had suffered less from the dull times of the past two or three years than the merchants of any other city in the state. This, he ascribes to the amount of money put in circulation by the sugar factory among the farmers and work-ing people of the city and surrounding coun-try. He figures it out that the advance on the value of the land consequent upon the introduction of sugar beet culture is suff-cient to more than pay the cost of building the sugar factory.
