

TRACING THE STOLEN SUMS

Taking of Testimony in the Bolla Case in Begun.

WAGON LOADS OF BOOKS TO BE GONE OVER

Methods of the City Treasurer's Office Inquired Into—Questions on the Fidelity of the Book-keeping.

The ballots of the criminal court earned their salaries yesterday by carrying their pile of records from the office of the city treasurer into the private office of the judge of the criminal court. The office was transformed into a storage vault for the records of the transactions of the city treasurer's office during the incumbency of Henry Bolla, on trial charged with the embezzlement of $110,000 of funds entrusted to his care.

The introduction of evidence was commenced yesterday as soon as court convened and dragged along very slowly, notwithstanding the efforts of the court to hurry things along.

George W. Holbrook, deputy city clerk, was the first witness called to the stand. He identified the records of the city council showing the report of the board which canvassed the election returns in the city of Omaha at the polls held on the 11th of May.

The second witness was John Groves, city clerk during all of Bolla's first term. He identified the signatures of ex-President Lowry of the city council and ex-Mayor Cushing endorsed on the report of the board.

There being no cross-examination, Deputy City Clerk Holbrook was recalled. He identified the city council journal showing the proceedings of the council in approving Bolla's bonds for both terms.

NOT ALLOWED TO TESTIFY. J. M. Gillan, secretary of the Board of Education, was called to testify as to the bonds given by Bolla to the school district of Omaha as ex-officio treasurer, but objection was raised by the defense on the ground that Gillan's name had not been endorsed on the information filed with the court.

U. B. Balcombe, ex-deputy city clerk, was called to identify his certificate, as a notary public, to the oath of office signed by Bolla for his first term as clerk of the school district of Omaha, covering his second term.

John W. Peabody, bookkeeper in the treasurer's office from the beginning of Bolla's first term, was called. He testified that all monies received in the office were deposited in the bank to the credit of the book of original entry. All money paid out was also supposed to be shown in the cash book, if paid in cash.

ALL CASH ON THE BOOKS. On cross-examination Peabody testified that as a matter of fact, Bolla was in the cashier's case in the treasurer's office a very small part of the time.

transferred to Bolla was made up of two items: at the time of the surrender of the sum of $710,047.66 and subsequently, March 10, 1892, he completed his accounting of the books and found that he still owed $11,241.70 which he returned to the city and turned that amount over to Bolla, taking his receipt.

On re-direct examination the witness explained in detail the method by which the city paid the interest on its bonds through the fiscal agency in New York City.

John W. Peabody was recalled to identify the books, page by page, and identified the several entries as being made by the various attaches of the office. This work was very tedious and required an adjustment but nine of the sixteen cash books had been disposed of in this way.

AGAINST COUNTY CONSTABLES.

Order Requiring Them to Quit Doing City Business.

Judge Scott yesterday heard the case of Constable Lyon of Omaha against Constable Clapp of Douglas precinct and granted an injunction, as prayed for by the plaintiff. This is the case in which the city constables combined to make warfare upon the constables from the rural districts to compel the latter to keep with the district from which they were elected.

In the case in question it was shown that Clapp was elected to Douglas precinct, but moved into Omaha soon after his election and has an office on Farnam street in which he does business and that he does not go to the Douglas precinct except when required to do so by the business which he secures in Omaha.

JACK GALLIGAN PASSES AWAY

Death of the Ex-Chief of the Omaha Fire Department.

END OF A STRUGGLE WITH CONSUMPTION

Had Been Suffering Much Since Health Was Broken in the City's Service—Sketch of Career.

J. J. Galligan, universally called in this city "Jack" Galligan, ex-chief of the Omaha fire department, died at his home last night after a protracted illness. Death came while he was surrounded by members of his family shortly before 10 o'clock.

The cause of his death was consumption, which he contracted while rendering services to the city in his official position. Although confined to his bed for the past six weeks and suffering terribly at times, Mr. Galligan bore his afflictions patiently, and when the end came passed away quietly.

Nearly a year and a half ago Mr. Galligan's health first gave signs of breaking down and realizing his strong constitution and his turned the duties of the department over to his assistant and entered St. Joseph's hospital for a course of treatment. He remained in the institution several months and left considering himself much benefited.

The benefit derived, however, was only temporary and in the fall of 1895 he was again confined to his bed. His illness was so severe that he was unable to attend to his duties and was obliged to resign his position as chief of the department.

Last Friday Mrs. Galligan telegraphed to their only child, an adopted daughter, Mr. Stabler, who was at his bedside at the time of his demise.

Mr. Galligan leaves besides a wife and daughter, an aged mother, and a sister, a daughter, an aged mother, and a sister, a daughter, an aged mother, and a sister.

GOING!

Before the ink is dry on this ad the last of the thousand Worst Suits which we put on sale Friday at $5.00 will have gone out the door to spread the news about the great big values at "The Nebraska" this spring.

People who bought these suits were disappointed five hundred or more. Many of these five hundred came in here expecting to see only an ordinary five dollar suit—we disappointed them. Many came in expecting to find every size except the size they wanted—we disappointed them.

And many who didn't know us offered to take half a dozen suits if we gave 'em "a little off," but we disappointed these too. With these trifling exceptions we pleased everybody and once more demonstrated that for right buying and right selling "The Nebraska" is a pretty safe place to trade.

TOMORROW— You will find on sale here another invoice of Worst Suits which will be even more sensational value than those we have just sold. The price will be Eight dollars a suit.

These suits are made from the finest worsted it is possible for a mill to weave. They will wear longer and look better in the end than any fifteen dollar suit you ever bought anywhere at any time.

They will wear as well as some twenty dollar suits. The color is a beautiful shade of brown and the cut, style and finish are O. K. We want to send out 500 of these Eight dollar suits to do some more advertising for "The Nebraska."

They are as well worth Eight dollars as the five dollar suits were worth five. What more can we say?
