Before leaving England for Buluwayo Cecil Rhodes, in anticipation of a revelation of the cipher dispatches, which he knew had fallen into the hands of the B-ers, left his resignation of the managing directorship of the Chartered company with Mr. Hawkesley, the company's lawyer, to be used at his discretion. Rhodes also left instructions that if his continuance as a member of the queen's privy council, a purely nominal distinction, were deemed Inadvisable his name should be struck off the list. Mr. Hawkesley has now communicated these acts to Mr. Chamberlain and the cabinet will decide tomorrow whether to accept Rhodes' resignation or not, for, strange to say deepite the recent revelations accept Rhodes' resignation or not, tor, strange to say despite the recent revelations there is a strong party both in the gov-ernment and among its supporters who are totally adverse to adopting any hostile

Many of those still unpublished are under-stood to be innocuous, but of the others several will provide very striking revelations. The critical character of the situation as be-tween Great Britain and the Transvaal, before President Kruger's masterly use of the captured cypher dispatches, may be gauged from advice recently given by Sir Hercules Robinson to the imperial government, which had invited an opinion from him on the pollcy to be adopted. Holes had been made in the walls of the adjoining buildings, through which to extricate victims. A great mass of debris supported these walls, and its removal caused the adjacent walls to bulge so that a still greater calamity has been momentarily expected from both sides of the wreckage, When the street cleaning force and the firemen was ordered away, it was believed there were several persons still in the debris and some of them alive, but the engineers agreed with the building inspector that the loss of life to the workmen was inevitable if they proceeded. Braces were put up against the walls and scaffolds were quickly constructed. The work of training down the adjacent walls is progressing with all pos-sible speed tonight.
