Originally the ways and means committee was oppesed to this bill, but it was won over and they were found supporting this measure. I do not recall greater vicissitudes met by any popular measure than experienced by this bill. First, the opposition of Kem and then of Bailey worked to the disad-vantage of the measure. The original idea of holding an exposition of this character for the purpose of bring-the deserve the ing to the notice of the world at large the productive capacities of the transmississippi states was indeed a happy one. In no other way can a greater degree of publicity be given the many resources of those states, and it is only necessary to say that with the greater knowledge of the resources and possibilities an influx of population will come and in no distant day, in my judgcome and in no distant day, in my ludg-ment, will shift the population of the country from its present center farther toward the west. WHY FORT OMAHA SUFFERED.

As Assistant Secretary Pruden left the white house with the veto message of the president on the Fort Omaha military reservation bill, Mercer, with the exposition bill, entered the president's apartments, It was a decided coincident, remarked after It was a decided coincident, remarked after the veto message was read in the house late in the evening. The veto messafge recalls the legislation of July, 1838, pro-viding for a new military reservation in Nebraska, refers to the proposition in the pending bill to lease the old reservation and buildings at a normal rent and to the mension allowing the government to reprovision allowing the government to re-possess the reservation, only "when the interests of the United States shall require such action." The president then says: "Of course it would be claimed that this language in view of statute of 1888 should not be considered as permitting the govern-ment to retake the property for the purment to retake the property for the pur-pose of selling it, because that is not stip-ulated in the bill. For that reason it would be plausibly urged that the lease was paramount to the power of sale, con-tained in the law in 1888, that the omission of any provision that possession might be resumed for the purpose of sale plainly indicated that the interests of the United States, which allows such resumption, con templates some other different emergency We all know that transactions of this character relating to government property amount to a jermanent alienation, or cer tainely pave the way for an absolute grant. I do not think there should be anything done with this valuable property, which will in the least embarrass the government in its sale, and to that extent reimbursing itself for the cost of the new military post, which was plainly contem-plated in the law of 1888." Immediately after the reading Merce moved that the message be referred to the committee on military affairs, which was done. Had Cleveland waited four hours bonger the bill would have become a law without his signature, the ten days being up at 6 o'clock this evening

ANDREWS IS ENTHUSIASTIC.

Representative Andrews said, "Good for Omaha, Nebraska and the Transmississippi country and praise for Mr. Mercer in his splendid fight against the embarrassments of the past few weeks. With one exception the members of the Nebraska delegation have supplemented his efforts in every possible way. Success to the exposition. With genial showers, followed by rich harvests and restoration of business and prosperity our people will come to the exposition such a display of products of their soil and labor as will demonstrate to the whole coun-try the almost boundless resources of the Transmississippi region and atrengthen our financial credit at home and abroad. Let the good work go on." Senator Allen said: "Never in my whole legislative career have I felt so much in-terest in the outcome of any measure as ornment. Its provisions, briefly outlined, were that the Transmississippi and Inter-national exposition shall be held in Omaha from June to November in the year 1898, that the government shall erect a building and make a suitable exhibit, and that medals for awards shall be made at the United States mint.

When the bill came to the house Speaker Reed referred it to the committee on ways and means, of which Dingley of Maine was chairman. After much effort to overcome the objections of Chairman Dingley, the bill was referred to a subcommittee of five with Grosveenor of Ohio chairman. For some reason Grosvenor withheld action and a delay of many days occurred, during which a delegation of Omaha citizena, headed by President Wattles of the exposition company, visited this city in the interest of the measure. SOME CHANGES AGREED TO.

Finally the bill was favorably reported by the subcommittee to the full committee After several conferences with Chairman Dingley the Omaha delegation agreed to bill. One of these reduced the appropriabill. bill. One of these reduced the appropria-tion for the government exhibit to $300,000 and that none of the government's appro-priation should be expended until proof had been furnished the secretary of the treas-ury that there had been obtained from all rees for the purposes of the exposition a sum aggregating not less than $250,000.

These amendments were incorporated in he bill. After the bill had been favorably the bill. reported to the house it went to the calendar where it remained for many weeks. Speaker Reed was yet to be won over to the measure. But even the speaker's opposition was over-came by the efforts of Mr. Rosewater of Omaha, who made a special visit to this city on behalf of the bill.

gressman Mercer obtained recognition for the passage of the bill. His first attempt was defeated by Kem of Nebraska. Bailey of Texas prevented the bill's passage last night, but he was more reasonable than Kem, for today he quietly left the hall while Mr. Mercer called up the bill. The bill as it was signed by the president makes no direct appropriation. The friends of the measure have no doubt that the amount authorized to be expended by the bill will be included in the appropriation sheets of the next session of congress.

RECEIPT OF THE NEWS IN OMAHA. Expressions of Approval Heard on

Every Side. The news that the exposition bill had passed the house spread over the city like wildfire. It was known on the streets within ten minutes after the vote was announced in the house of representatives. Men shook one another by the hand and mutually congratulated themselves and everybody else. Business men assumed a satisfied air and on every hand were heard expressions of joy and predictions of improvement in the near future. Flags were quickly displayed on public and private buildings and within a short time the city had put on a gala appearance, indicative of the joy feit by every citizen at the receipt of the long expected news. At the Commercial club the board of gevernors of the Knights of Ak-Sar-Ben were at lunch and a mighty shout went up as the news was told to them. The light on the chandeliers shook with the noise and those lunching in the adjoining room came running in to see what had occurred. The telephone was kept hot by the joyous members in calling up their respective places of business and all their friends and telling the news. Hearty ex-pressions of approval were heard on every side from the members and the expesitio formed the sole topic of conversation. Th The board of governors sent the following telegram to Representative Mercer at once:

Hon. D. H. Mercer: The Knights of Ak-Sar-Ben congratulate you on your success-ful fight for the exposition bill. We are with you to a finish. Hip! Hip! Hurrah! SAMSON, Lord High Chancellor, The fire bell on the engine house at Eighteenth and Harney streets, which has been discontinued as a fire alarm, was rung for several minutes to announce the glad news. The telephones in the newspaper offices were kept going all afternoon, answering questions regarding the bill and confirming the reports circulated on the streets.

President Wattles of the Transmississippi association returned home yesterday in time to hear the news and at once commenced their making arrangements for having the event am sure the greater part of the citizens properly celebrated. The Commercial club held its regular quarterly meeting under most auspicious circumstances last evening. It took the form of an informal dinner and was followed by one of the most brilliant series of practical talks by prominent Omahans that has ever been heard in this city. The fact that the Transmississippi exposition bill had just become a law gave additional interest to the meeting and enthused the speakers and auditors to a high degree. President C. F. exercises by calling for three cheers for Congressman Mercer and the exposition bill, and they were given with hearty good-will. In his address President Weller detailed the many discouragements the club had labored under, the prevailing hard times being the chief, but in spite of that had been able to accomplish a great deal and had never been discouraged at the failure to get anything and everything striven for. They had learned that busi-ness men could best help themselves by helping each other and that the selfish policy of not caring for other people's welfare was neither right or profitable. The dawn of a brighter day was in sight and the club was encouraged to go on and strive for still greater things.

HURRAH PERIOD IS HERE. President Wattles of the Transmississippi exposition directory was called upon for a tew remarks. He said: "The hurrah period is now upon us. We have met with our first great success. The directory from the start has taken the position that unless we secured the endorsement and the co-operation of the government the suc-cess of the exposition would be doubtful. Now that we have secured what we so ardently desired our work is fairly started. The government has pledged itself to expend $200,000 on its exhibit, but I feel sure judging from what I've been told in Wash ington, that it will appropriate $500,000 be fore the exposition is finished. "It has required no little diplomacy to get this bill through congress. The work has been accomplished only by the hardest kind of work upon the part of Omaha's leading citizens. Their friends all over the country have been importuned to use influence in behalf of the bill, and renew their faith in Omaha and its com-mercial interests. He said that it was an ill wind that 'Stew no good and that the re-cent period of 'depression had succeeded in driving away a large share of eastern com-netition from this testion.

W. B. Taylot spoke of Omaha from the point of view of a real estate dealer and announced the loyalty of that class to the city's best interests. He moved that tele-grams of configuration be sent to Senator

Allen and Complessman Mercer upon the passage of the exposition bill, the thanks of the assemblage to the sena-tors and representatives of Nebraska and to Speaker Rhed, i The motion was unani mously carrieddin 1 E. M. Bartlett spoke of the coming of the Commercial Law League of America to this city and appealed for aid in entertaining the 1.500 visitors. He urged all true Omahans to lay aside their bickering and to join hands in a mighty effort to build up the city.

Edward Rosewater spoke briefly upon the Transmississippi exposition. He said that on December 3, 1863, he had stood on the river bank near the foot of Farnam street and witnessed the digging of the first spadeful of earth preparatory to the beginning of the Union Pacific railway. At that time Andrew J. Poppleton exclaimed:

This is the day we long have sought. And mourned because we found it not. That was the way he felt over the pass-age of the exposition bill. He said that with the exposition would come a new union depot, greater hotel accomodations, a great market house, an auditorium, better street railway service, and the removal of the wooden pavements. He moved that a telegram be sent to Senator Allison thanking him for the assistance the Iowa delegation had rendered in securing the passage of the G. M. Hitchcock closed the program with an address on "The New Omaha." He ad-vocated a friendly alliance with the west and made a strong plea for the support of western products, not barring the white metal.

HOW IT REALLY HAPPENED.

Representative Hainer said: "It is a great victory for Nebraska and the north west. The contest was long and stubborn. While hard times make an exposition very desirable to the city, state and section securing it, a bankrupt treasury presented an ugly obstacle. Added to this the efforts made for the Nashville exposition, Kem's objections and Bailey's opposition, each in turn caused serious complications, which seemed certain to defeat the measure. Vic-tory came at last because the business men of Omaha put up a plucky, brainy fight, because the measure had merit which made it friends; because our neighbors were all loyal and helpful, and last, but not least, because the Omaha district is represented by a man whose name is a synonym for tact, good nature an dthose other splendid tact, good nature an dthose other splendid qualities which have made Dave Mercer the ideal hustler. This will be good news for settlers on the Otoe and Missouri reserva-tions in Gage county, who have been fearful tions in Gage county, who have been fearful of eviction, pending the settlement of their interests. HAD FRIENDS EVERYWHERE. Not in years has the passage of a measure affecting local interests been attended with so much interest as has the Transmississippi exposition bill. No bill had had more deter nined opposition from the leading members of the ways and means committee until its merits were understood, and no bill has had more friends on the floor of the house. Its popularity in the house has been largely due to the energetic labors of Congressman Mercar, who has worked night and day for its success.

GOOD EFFECTS ALREADY FELT.

Passage of the Exposition Bill Starts Work on a Big Building.

The effect of the passage of the trans missippi exposition bill has already been felt so far as stimulating business confidence is concerned.

Last summer John A. Creighton conceived the idea of constructing a threestory brick and stone building on the vacant atory brick and stone building on the vacant lots at Fourteenth and Davenport streets, to be used as a future home for the Creigh-ton Medical college. Mr. Creighton ex-cavated and built the foundation, after which he discontinued work. At that time he state that he would not lay another brick in Omaha until the tide turned. hustling In-He was indiscreetly held off for the first quarter and fell hope lessly to the rear and when Miss Williams came under the wire the flag fell in his face. Time: 2:09. The quarter was made in 0:31¼, the half in 1:04% and the three quarters in 1:37%. Under the rule a horse not having won a heat in five, where the starters were under ten, is debarred from starting, and this left Miss Williams and Badge to contend for first honors. The sixth heat was a dandy, Badge going to the front and re-maining there for the whole route, winning gallantly in 2:11½. The seventh and de-ciding heat was also taken by Badge, the big ciding heat was also taken by Badge, the big, fine looking gelding stepping off the mile without a skip in 2:14%. Miss Williams left her feet at the outset and was never able to redeem herself. At the finish two open lengths of daylight separated her won by an eyewinker. Time 2:16¼. from the winner. And so the great race went as follows: Badge first, Miss Wil-liams second, Affrite third and Ella T Downing and Alice Brown distanced.

As a side issue to this heat, McKinney the driver of Pliancy, as soon as he got off his bike, stepped up to some unknown individual who had been badgering him during the race and knocked him down. After his friends had dragged him off, the starting udge announced from the stand that Mr. McKinney had only done what would have been expected of any gentleman under the circumstances, that the man who got the roken jaw was alone to blame. The fifth heat was a race between Pliancy and McGinty. Pliancy held the way to the three-quarters, when McGinty came up and on oven terms they came into the stretch. It was a bruising finish down home, but McGinty proved the better horse, getting Time
