(Copyright, 1806, by Press Publishing Company.) blegram-Special Telegram.)-As was generally expected, the senatorial debates have against the United States by speeches, bitterly accusing the conservative government of having submitted to many humiliating concessions exacted by the American government and diplomacy since the beginning of the Cuban insurrection. In vain did the minister of foreign affairs, the duke of Tetuan, deprecate such retrospective recriminations as were calculated to harm the Interests of Spain and her relations with America. In vain did the leading members and former ministers of the liberal party endeavor to restrict the ardor of their orators; the president of the senate himself invoked the rules of the house to check Senators Comas and Jimino. It was easy to see that the latter were in touch with many of the senators and of the people in the galleries, who murniured distinct approval, and the majority of the press. The press is today appleuding the orators who so cumingly elicited from Marshal Campos and Generals Calleja, Punda and Polavieja, the declaration that the treaties of 1875 and 1877 were among the most seriour obstacles to the pacification of Cuba and ought, therefore, to be repudiated. The ministerial paper, La Epoca, accused the opposition of lack of foresight and jingo-ism in references to demonstrations against America and in the exaggerated importance significantly attributed by the republicans and liberals to the very enthusiastic welcome to French fleet and officers has been given by all classes and by the local au-thorities in Ferrol and Corunna, and the same welcome given to the French military bands at Earcelona, with the public speeches and toasts in favor of an alliance that naturally might give offense to other for-nian covernments. The local of classes relaeign governments. The idea of closer rela-tions with the French and Russians is daily gaining ground, and is openly advocated in the press and financial circles, especially as the Spanish government can not floa outside the Paris market the contemplated loan of $100,000,000 for Cuban war expenses that it is believed the Cortes is about to authorize with a guarantee of the Spanish treasury and a special mortgage on the tobacco fionopoly, because the present sup-ply cannot last beyond September. PARADE WAS OF IMPOSING PROPORTIONS

Meeting at Jefferson Square the Climax of the Demonstration.

THOUSANDS ABOUT THE SPEAKERS' STAND

Omaha Gives on Exhibition of Just How Much it is in Enruest Over the Transmississippi Exposition Project.

Omaha again donned its festal attire last evening and rejoiced in honor of the exposition. Enthusiasm that had been pent up for days expressly for the occasion burst forth in unrestrained carnival. The big been virtually cut off. The fury of the parade and the official celebration at Jeffer-flood was along the eastern tributary of the son square were only features of the show. More inspiring than all was the tremendous crowd that packed the streets from wall to wall and surged and cheered and exuberated as though each man, woman and child among its swelling thousands realized that the exposition meant bread and butter for themselves and prosperity for Nebraska in the days to come. And the big delegation that came across the river to jubilate with Nebraskans was no less enthusiastic and helped to emphasize the object lesson that the river was no longer a dividing line. Properly speaking it was the formal celebration by the business organizations and position bill. But the occasion took on a broader scope. It developed into not only a celebration of what had been done, but the TALK OF THREAD CONSOLIDATIONS. expression of an enthusiastic determination to accomplish what still remains to do. The rejoicing over the successful consummation of the legislation that gave the enterprise its first substantial impetus merged itself into an inspiration of future achievements. The cry that was voiced from thousands of throats was not "Hurrah for the Bill." It was "Hurrah for the Exposition." The transparencies that illuminated the marching columns bore no mention of the past, but portrayed in vivid letters what Omaha would be in 1898.

DAME NATURE KIND. And even then the Divine blessing was not wanting to cheer Nebraska's hopes. Long before the hour of jolithcation approached huge banks of black, menacing clouds began to mount above the southern horizon. They multiplied and closed in one compact and threatening mass. The air was still with that indefinable quietude that heralds the coming storm. The big crowds in the streets were dumb with disappointment as nature seemed to be determined to mar or ruin the to Omaha's rejoicing. Slowly the clouds closed over the whole sky and a few scat-tered drops of rain seemed the forecast of a steady downpour. But almost at the very down the columns of the big parade a gorgeous rainbow burst across the black expanse and rested in benison on Nebraska soil. It was a glorious omen and it was ac-cepted with ringing cheers that echoed all along the line of march. The rain ceased, the clouds retreated in confusion, and Omaha proceeded to do honor to the exposition Last night's celebration was an indica-tion of what can be done with a few days' preparation when the right sort of spirit is in evidence. While the parade did not pretend to the gorgeousness of those of pretend to the gorgeousness of those of last fall it was more than creditable to the city and to the men who have worked fulthfully during the past few days to or-ganize its various elements. Moreover, it indicated the general loyalty of the people to the enterprise, for it was almost entirely composed of volunteers who had spontacously contributed their services without the spur of a personal application, was a commendable representation various secret and benevolent societies many of them in uniform. The labor organ-izations were out in force and although no ompensation was promised every band in the city turned out to add inspiration to The decorations along the line of march vere general and some very artistic effects were improvised at short notice. The city hall and The Bee building were brilliantly illuminated with incandescent lights in the same designs that were used during the Ak-Sar-Ben festivities last year. The Elks' club rooms were artistically draped with flags and Chinese lanterns and a large num-ber of the downtown business establishnents were decked out with flags and Ak-Sar-Ben streamers. The Sixteenth street front of one large establishment was illuminated by twenty-five are lights, arranged in rows on each story. A number of busi-ness houses had private displays of fire-works and these, together with the red fire and rockets that accompanied the parade, vere sufficient to keep the line of march

STREETS LINED WITH PEOPLE.

But the distinctive and emphatic feature of the occasion was the crowd. It lined Sixteenth street from Cuming to Harney with solid banks of people it jammed Farnam and Douglas streets for eight blocks and there were still enough left to over-flow the court house square and people the windows and balconles of all the buildthe windows and balconless of all the buildsings along the line of march with enthuslastic spectators. It seemed that almost the entire population of the city was congregated along the streets on which the parade was to move. They began to gather before 7 o'clock, and for an hour after all the motor trains moving down town were loaded to the foot boards. Long before the arrival of the parade it was almost impossible to move along the sidewalks and soon the people overflowed into the street.
The throng was more dense around the The throng was more dense around the court house and down Farnam and Sixteenth streets, but the line was unbroken all along the route which the parade was to follow. All classes were represented with equal liberality. Society women stood on tiptee on the curb and waved their hand-kerchiefs, and husky laborers from the shops ontributed their hardened lungs to swell he cheers of rejoicing. The passage of the earste was marked by what seemed like one parade was marked by what seemed like one continuous cheer, which rose in Front of the platoon of police that headed the procession and only subsided after the last blaze of red fire had burned out. The Second Infantry band received an extra share of favor. The multitude expressed its regret at the departure of the soldier musicians by cheering them at every turn But the demonstration reached its spex when the initiatory float of the Knights of Ak-Sar-Ren had passed. Iten had passed.

In spite of the densely packed streets here were no serious accidents during the celebration. A falling rocket struck in the crowd at Sixteenth and Dodge streets, but did no greater damage than to penetrate the hat of a spectator. A child that had succeeded in reaching a perch on the roof of one of the low buildings at Sixteenth and Farmam atrects created a temporary sensa-tion by doing its best to fall from the cornice, but it was happily corralled by a maternal raid before it succeeded. Occa-sional sparks from the Roman candles menaced some of the feminine apparel on the
