family. INDIAN TROUBLES. The severity of the winter of 1856-57, the hardships, privations and Indian depredations will always be remembered by the survivors of that little band of pioneers, and are recorded as the darkest hours of their are recorded as the darkest hours of their lifetime. The great Spirit Lake massacro of which so much has been written occurred in the winter af 1856-7. The history of this horrible tragedy is so well known and has been so thoroughly recorded in various historical works that it cannot be enlarged upon, except so far as the causes which led up to it and to its effect upon the settle-ment of Cherokee county. The true cause of the Indians going on the war path at that time was never known by history writers, for it was kept a secret by the whites who, indirectly, were the cause of the whole trouble. It can be truthfully said that the imprudence and bad faith of some of the white race brought on that series of depredations and bloody outrages which culminated in the Spirit Lake massacre, making subject matter for one of the most terrible chapters in the history of Indian ferocity. If the whites at no other time broke faith with the treaty made by William Clark and Ninan Edwards, Indian commissioners, in July, 1815, they did in this one instance; not as a government, but by a few individuals. It was in the month of February, 1857, that a party of Sioux Indians started a hunting expedition down the Little Sious river. They made a quiet and friendly stop at the Cherokce settlement, then went or to Smithland in Woodburry county. Here is where the trouble began. The whites insisted that the Indians reveal to them where they were going and what the business of their trip might be, and refused to let them pass unless they gave a satisfactory explanation. The Indians replied that they were going down to shake hands with the Omahas. The answer was not satisfactory to the whites so they compelied the Indian to give up their guns. This action on the part of the whites greatly enraged the bicus and they turned back, wreaking vengeance upon the whites in every way imaginable. White men stole their guns and white men must make restitution, which could only be satisfied by the shedding by human blood Consequently, they entered every cabin home, insulting helpless women and taking guns and food.

ENTERED CHEROKEE. When they arrived at Charokee their pas sion knew no bounds, and they acted in a flendish manner. The guns they had picked up on their return were pointed at the up on their return were pointed at the helpless settlers in order to frighten them into giving them more and also to suffer any indignity that they make feel disposed to force upon them. Cattle were stolen and scanty provisions selzed and devoured by them. They remained three days, all the while debating whether to murder the entire settlement or not. These are spoken of as the longest days and nights ever experienced by the little colony.

On the third day Parkhurst and Lebourvean returned from Sac City. The Indians.

On the third day Parkhurst and Lebour-vean returned from Sac City. The Indians, suspicious that the Smithland people might be on their trail were anxious to know where these men came from. The cunning of the white man played on the Indian's fears, for they would not tell them. Ap-prehensive of danger they set off at once. When far enough away to feel affe. the Indians became bloodthirsty and murderous. In O'Brien county they entered homes, which In O'Brien county they entered homes, which were far apart, and destroyed property, took guns, and in several cases, rayished women in the most revolting and flendish manner. They grew more flendish and bloodthirsty until the climar was reached at Spirit Lake, where forty persons were killed and four innocent women—including Miss Able Gardner, who was a frail girl of about 14 years. ner, who was a frail girl of about 14 years of age were taken captives. Some of the four captives were inhumanly treated and

For this terrible outrage the people of the Smithland settlement were indirectly responsible and much blame was attributed o them by the Cherokee colony, When the heartrending tale of the Spirit Lake massacre reached the cars of the Cherokee set tiers every heart was saddened, and all gave up hope, for they next expected to be pounced upon. They were advised by the Smithland people to leave and in a few days not a settler was left, some going to Onawa, some to Ashland, and some to Smithland. As soon as the Cherokee settlement deserted their homes the Smithland people—be it said to their shame and everlasting disgrace—visited their homes at Cherokee, plundering what was left, including provisions, as well as opening boxes of household goods, which the

The colony was now very much discouraged and did not know which way to turn Word reached their eastern friends that they had all been killed by the Indians, and the Dr. Russell's society at Milford became disorganized. The people here were very much disheartened, and the picture of a bright future that fancy had framed in their minds, was wrecked by cruel realities. However, in May of that year many of them returned and put in quite a crop. In the summer of 1861 the colony was sideration of $100 "paid in hand" by Wil-liam R. Henry, George A. Jackson and H. hostilities from a band on the frontier. The olony determined to stand its ground this time, and a company of home guards was organized and armed by the state. Two scouts were also employed, named Purcell and in August, 1861, an incident of quite an exciting nature occurred. The scoutsthe Purcells-were staying over night at George Lebourvean's; at midnight they were awakened, and discovered two Indians in the act of leaving the settlement with a span of horses. The scouts at once gave hase, and each fired a shot at the Indians. Andrew Purcell's shot proved fatal, and the first horse thief in the history of the colony died. The other Indian succeeded in getting away with one of the horses, which was

After this matters went on smoothly until the New Ulm massacre in Minnesota, which resulted in a general Indian war in that state. When news of the New Ulm mas-sacre reached the Cherokee settlement, Capthe walking was good. The old lowa Falls & Sioux City stage line crossed by the way of Correctionville, some thirty miles south of Cherokee, sence the mail route here was and once more the county was abandoned.

It was during this campaign that the stockade and fort were built, both of which stood until a few years ago. The location of the old fort is marked by a raise in the ground just north of the present city, and it is frequently visited by curiosity seekers. The commander of the guard soon notified the settlers that they would be protected at the garrison and that their families could find shelter at the fort. The census of 1863 shows that there were but ten males and the county was Ida M. Brown, daughter of five females within the county. Thus ended the Indian troubles of the early settlers of one of the most determined colonies that ever crossed the rolling waters of the Mis-

ANTI-OPTION LAW IN GERMANY Reichstag Ennets Legislation Probibiting Speculation.

WASHINGTON, July 15 .- At the instance of the agrarian leaders the German Reichstag has enacted a law prohibiting speculation in options and also intended to restrict speculation in stocks. The new law be youd doubt will affect seriously the sale of American securities in Germany aside from its effect upon grain markets. The announced purpose of the agrarians in passing the law was to increase the price of grain, and in debates there were plentiful citations of the arguments so freely advanced in congress when the anti-option bill was being pressed a few years ago. Details of the new law are supplied to the State department by United States Com-mercial Agent Moore at Weimar with ex-planatory notes and comments. As to stock peculation the restrictions adopted threaten to exclude from the German exchanges a large class of American industrial and mining and ratiroad properties, and are es-pecially severe upon new products. In each exchange government inspectors will be stationed. No stock can be placed on the list except by direction of a committee at least a majority of whose members are not mem-bers of the exchange. No stock can be listed unless the corporation has been in existence at least one year and has submitted a profit and loss statement for the year; nor can any stock be listed until the committee has thoroughly examined into the sound-ness of the new corporation and satisfied liself as to the truthfulness of the state-ments made in the prospectus. Any person guilty of deceit in placing or promoting stock may be fined 15,000 marks, and there are other severe penalties for offenses against the law.

SENATOR JONES ON THE CAMPAIGN. Bryan's Candidacy Will Be Pushed in an Energetic Canyass.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Senator Jones, hairman of the democratic national committee, was at the capital today in conference with Senator Harris of Tennessee, on various matters connected with the prost cution of Mr. Bryan's candidacy. He said that the executive committee probably would not be appointed for ten days yet. The senator, when asked about the life tenure of office plank, concerning which there has been some question, said that it was actually adopted as a part of the platform, but that the following clause 'except as otherwise provided by the constitution of the United provided by the constitution of the United States" needed to be added to the plank, these words having formed part of it as adopted, but having been left out of the stenographic verbatim copy of the proceedings, owing to a mistake.

Senator Jones said today that he favors locating the national headquarters in Washington, but that it will be for the commit-tee to decide that point. In case Washington is determined upon, a large building centrally located will be taken for cam-paign work. He said he could give no intimation as to the personnel of the executive committee until he had conferred with several gentlemen. Among names generally centioned are those of the members of the silver committee, viz: Senator Harris of Tennessee, Turple of Indiana, Governor Stone of Missouri and Mr. Hinrichsen of Illinois, who organized the silver movement up to the time of the convention.

The name of Governor Stone has been mentioned as chairman of the executive committee, but it is feared his duties as governor might prevent his assuming the responsible and laborious position. Chair-man Jones will see that all sections of the ountry are represented on the executive
