Candidate Bryan Recites His Experience Practicing Law, Helping to Make it and His Hopes of Executing It.

The cool breeze that came with the early morning penetrated the Creighton theater and was an agreeable adjunct to the proceedings of the Commercial Law league convention. Several belated delegates came ceding day. The members were again tardy and the session was begun nearly an hour late. But the interval was occupied by a number of selections, capably rendered by

Before taking up the program of the session, President Sprague appointed J. R. Cottner, jr., of Detroit and General Hamilton of ana." Quincy, Ill., as sergeants at-arms to see that the delegates should be more prompt in their attendance. Prayer was then offered by Rev. John Gordon of the Westminster Presbyterian church of this city.

The report of the committee on grievances was presented by Charles R. Miller of Canton, O., who said that during the year not a single complaint had been brought before the committee. This, he said, was sufficient to indicate that the membership of the league was composed of men of a very high

E. C. Ferguson of Chicago presented the report of the committee on judiciary, ac-companied by some suggestions on the "Ne-cessity of Uniform Legislation," The cooperation of the lawyer and the layman was necessary to bring about a uniformity of the laws relating to commercial matters The principal causes of complaint had been gathered and the result was seven distinct gathered and the result was seven distinct questions which seemed to demand atten-tion. A very large correspondence had been conducted by the committee, and much information had been obtained. The present chattel mortgage method should be abolchattel mortgage method should be abol-ished. Three-fourths of the states still ad-hered to the old law with regard to days of grace on commercial paper. There was a general demand for an interstate bankrupt law, modeled after the national bankrupt law, and with a very little attention a uniform law could be secured on the right to sue both the grantor and the indorser of

BRYAN TO THE LAWYERS.

This was followed by a concise statement of the imperfections in the commercial laws of the various states as indicated by correspondence. These differed widely, according to the circumstances and the differing situations in the various states, but all agreed that a more prompt trial of causes was advisable, and many of the correspondents declared that the exemption laws operated to demoralize business and sales. operated to demoralize business and to breed operated to demoralize business and to breed deadbeats. There was a general demand for the abolition of preferences in cases of insolveney, and the Massachusetts law was cited as a model. The paper concluded with a recapitulation of the laws recommended as desirable by the committee. The report as desirable by the committee. The report was ordered published in full, and the com-mittee was tendered a vote of thanks for its valuable service.

At this point in the proceedings E. M. Bartlett came on the stage, accompanied by Hon. W. J. Bryan, whose appearance was the signal for prolonged applause. Three cheers were given for the visitor, who was introduced by Mr. Bartlett, Mr. Bryan cheers were given for the visitor, who was introduced by Mr. Bartlett. Mr. Bryan stated that he had practiced law for seven years and still retained a warm regard for the profession. One of the things that had most impressed him in regard to the law was the tact that lawyers could contend bitterly in court without losing in any degree their personal esteem for each other. If this principle was carried into politics our government would be conducted on a loftier plane.

Mr. Bryan added that during the seven Mr. Bryan added that during the seven years of his active practice he had endeavored to find out what the law was. After that he had tried to determine what the law ought to be and more recently he the law ought to be and more recently he had considered the idea of executing the law as it was.

At the close of his remarks the band played "Marching Through Georgia," while Mr. Bryan held an impromptu reception on delivered a very interesting address on "Obedience to the Law."

OBEDIENCE TO THE LAW. Judge G. W. Ambrose of this city then

The speaker stated that he would endeavor to illustrate the fact that through obedience the law became the poetry of character rather than the prose of selfishness. It was a frequent impression that it did not require a high degree of legal talent to force the payment of a just debt free. was a frequent impression that it did not require a high degree of legal talent to force the payment of a just debt from a reluctant debtor. But this view was erroneous. Commercial lawyers stood among the first in their profession. There was really nothing new in the law. It was the same today as yesterday. The principles of right and wrong had never changed, although their application had been enlarged. The common law was simple reason, the art of dealing with affairs by the light of experience. A writer had said that law was framed in the bosom of God, but he could not have had in mind some of the laws of Nebraska nor some of the modern decisions of the supreme courts. There were several distinct kinds of law, but each was allied to the other for a common purpose. The lawyer who saw no principle at stake in his suits, but only the chance to win or lose, did not comprehend his whole duty. Obedience to the law was the virtue that created the public conscience.

In conclusion Judge Ambrose showed how the sentiment of obedience to the law that had been inculcated in the hearts of the American people had three times saved the nation from disaster. His address was re-ceived with exceptional appreciation, and at its close, Attorney General A. S. Churchill was introduced and briefly paid his respects to the convention. The closing paper of the morning session was by A. A. Hirschl of Chicago, who read a very strong paper on "Reform in Judicial

GROWTH OF THE LEAGUE. An address by Hon, Benjamin Butterworth of Cincinnati on "Control of Trusts and Monopolies" was an anticipated feature of the afternoon session, but at the last mo-ment Mr. Butterworth was detained at Washington. In his letter which was read at the opening of the session he stated that he had prepared his session he stated that had prepared his paper and if the league desired it he would have it printed at his own expense. The proposition was accepted by the convention and the paper was ordered to be included in the published proceedings of the convention.

S. Leisenring of Altoona, Pa., presented report of the membership committee, which indicated a gratifying growth. From a charter membership of 195 last August the league had increased to 729, distributed over nearly every state in the union. Nebraska is the banner state with seventy-two members and lowa is next with sixty-eight. It was incidentally stated that of 534 new members admitted 210 were obtained through the personal efforts of President Sprague. The report chronicled two deaths which occurred in the league during the year, those of Daniel E. Thomas of Toledo, O., and H. W.

Latham of Los Angeles, Cal. Before proceeding with the program the annual election of officers and the selection of the place of the next session were made a special order for 11 o'clock today.

The theme of the afternoon's discussion was "Needed Law Reforms State and National," and the first paper was by John N. Baxter of Denver, who considered "Unfavorable Symptoms and Remedies Proseribed." Mr. Baxter condemned the growing tendency to drag the bench into polities, the result of which was that the man the result of which was that the man with a pull stele thousands and escaped with impunity, while the widow who stole a loaf of bread to feed her staiving children was railroaded to the penitentiary. He advocated the selection of judges by the members of the bar. The present jury system was also denounced, and the speaker recommended that the nine men of a jury should have power to make a verdict.

Florence of New Orleans, who discussed "Some Peculiarities of the Civil Law of Louisiana." The session closed with two papers on legal questions which were heard with marked interest by the lawyers, but were not of a nature to interest the average newspaper reader. They were read by Charles L. Simmon St. Joseph, Mo., who discussed "Pe ential Assignments via Trust Deeds" C. D. Merrick of Parkersburg, W. ELECTION OF OFFICERS. The most interesting event of the con-cention is scheduled for 11 o'clock today. vention is scheduled for 11 o'clock today. This is the election of officers and the selection of the location of the 1897 convention. There are numerous candidates for the position of president of the league, among whome E. C. Ferguson of Chicago and E. M. Bartlett of Omaha are most frequently mentioned. The candidacy of F. Bartlett of the formula of the candidacy. of E. M. Bartlett proceeds chiefly from the efforts of his friends and is strengthened y his appreciated work in preparing for the entertainment of the present convention. He is regarded as the probable winner. There is a lively controversy over the lo-cation of the next convention in which the rival claims of Detroit, Buffalo, Toledo Sandusky and Put-In Bay, near Cleveland are involved. The latter location is champloned by an aggressive delegation that is confident of success. Their claims are founded on the attractiveness of the bay as a resort in addition to the fact that it boasts one of the largest hotels in the United States. The hotel includes a convention hall that will seat 1,800 people and adequate accommodations in the way of committee rooms and other conveniences. Since the convention convened a number of the delegates in attendance have visited The Bee building, and have inspected the plant and called upon the editor. In all instances they have received a cordial wel-come. The building is open every hour during the twenty-four and the delegates to the convention are always made to feel gaily decorated and thrown open to the guests of Omaha, but it was the opinion of all those conversant with the matter that never before had the house and grounds been so beautifully ornamented and all the ap-pointments of a reception so perfect as was the case last evening. Not only were ex-pressions of delight heard from Omahans, but there was not one of the visitors who did not express his admiration for the art gallery, his pleasure in the festively attired gardens and his enjoyment of every detail of the reception. From none were stronger words of praise heard than from the eastern visitors, who manifested no little surprise at finding such magnificence in even the queen city of the west.

BRILLIANT ELECTRIC DECORATIONS. The entire mansion was thrown open to the visitors, rooms on the upper floors being used for smoking and waiting rooms. parlors and hallways were brilliantly lighted and throughout them were to be seen beautiful cut flowers, bunches of roses predominating. The various curios and relics of the host were on exhibition and attracted no little attention. The art galattracted no little attention. The art gallery was well lighted and to each of the guests was furnished a gallery catalogue of recent issue. Probably the strangers spent more time in this section of the mansion than in any other. Within the paim houses was stationed the regimental band of the Twenty-second infantry from Fort Crook. The reception was the first social function at which the band had made its appearance and its music was heard by critical ears. That the decision of the auditors was favorable was evidenced by the tors was favorable was evidenced by the applause that followed the various relections and the reluctance of the dancers to allow the musicians to cease playing at all. If the house within appeared beautiful it would be difficult to fairly describe the fairy like appearance of the more beautiful gardens. The entire grounds were bordered by dainty electric lamps, the light of which was softened by colored globes. There were lights of red, of blue, of green and of yellows and according appearance around the lawys. low, and gracefully rarged around the lawns, as they were, they formed a fantastic spectacle. After greetings had been exchanged in-

After the display of relics had been inspected and the exhibition of paintings admired the com-mercial lawyers and their friends wandered at will about the grounds, making new ac quaintances and spreading the information that they were glad they had come to Omaha. Shortly before 11 o'clock the regi-mental band struck up the martial air of a spirited deux-temps. From then on until after midnight the guests and their hosts found much pleasure in the dance.

to follow the reduction of grain rates. At the Chicago conference last week a reduction of 7 cents on corn and oats from Missouri river points to Chicago was made. with a minimum of 15 cents; the advantage of these rates was also extended to Nebraska territory as far westward as Lincoln and Fremont. There doubtless would have been a sudden movement of grain that would have taxed the equipment of the various roads hereabouts had it not been for the slump in the market that followed the reduction in rates, as is usually the case The market held firm for awhile and railroad men were wondering whether more cars would have to be built, but the expected drop in the market came along and rudely awakened them from such dreams.

While there has been no movement as yet that would warrant the belief that a car yet that would warrant the belief that a car famine is near at hand, the freight men do expect that large quantities of corn and oats will soon be moved out of Ne-braska. Division Freight Agent Lane of the Union Pacific, than whom there is probably no one better posted concerning Nebraska grain matters. no one better posted concerning Nebraska grain matters, says that there is about 35 per cent of the last crop still in Nebraska. Not all that has disappeared has been shipped out of the state, for large quantities have been fed. The remaining third of last season's crop will undoubtedly be moved within a short period, now that a reduction season's crop will undoubtedly be moved within a short period, now that a reduction of rates has been made. It is the general opinion that holders of securities to whom the proceeds of the crops belong will not allow the farmers to hold back their grain waiting for a promised increase in market CAR FAMINE IN KANSAS.

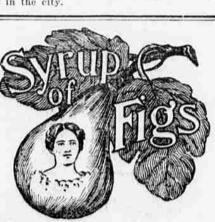

Down in Kansas there is a more marked movement of such freight than there is here. In fact, a railroad man from that state said that owing to a sudden acowing to a sudden said that owing to a sudden ac-tivity in the corn trade a car famine was not an improbable happening. He said: "All the railroads are rushing empties into the Kansas grain belt from the divisions of their roads where the demand is not so urgent. The movement of the immense apple and peach crops and enormo titles of vegetables to northern and western points is also a tax on the carrying ability who is interested in having a Union depot of the roads entering Kansas. To meet the general reduction the Bur-lington railway has announced a flat rate on corn into Kansas City from points in Missouri and Iowa north of St. Joseph on the main branch line to St. Joseph and Council Bluffs. Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts— rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, prompt-ly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its bene ficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the Cali-fornia Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed even where, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction
