At the mention of Bryan's name the delegates rose and shouted and cheered and fourished umbrellas and cheered and fiourished umbrellas and fags. ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 24 .- Thomas C. Wation of Georgia, who was a member of the Fifty-first congress and who, in the Fiftysecond and Fifty-third congresses, unsuccessfully contested Colonel Black's seat, was nominated for vice president of the United States by the populist convention on the first ballot, shortly after midnight. There were five other candidates, Sewall, Mann, Page of Virginia, A. L. Mimms of Tennessee, Congressman Skinner of North Carolina and Colonel Burkitt of Mississippi. The nomination was made unanimous before the result of the roll call was announced. Mr. Bryan sent word to his supporters that he would not accept a nomination at the hands of the convention under these circumstances. He will stand loyally to his running mate. The opposition to Sewall practically swamped the Bryan forces at the day seasion of the convention by making it impossible to prevent a division of the Chi-cago ticket. The leaders were powerless to check the strong feeling against the Bath shipbuilder and banker. They had car-ried the day in the committee on resolutions in framing a comparatively moderate platform, which they afterward get through the convention with ease. Their strategy was skillfully displayed at other points. But the immense undercurrent of feeling against Sewall was fatal to them. Today, for the first time, the middle-of-the-road element displayed generalship worthy of the name. Recognizing the fact that all hope of defeating Bryan's nomination was lost, they concentrated all their efforts against Sewall. They did more; they devention was forced to nominate the vice president before the president. It was an unprecedented thing, but it served to mass the votes in favor of a populist candidate for vice president and unover them in advance, in the fear that, if Bryan were first noninated, the enthusiasm might break down the opposition to Sewall and stampede a majority of the votes for the Nebraskan's running mate.
