In the course of the present year we have to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of one of the most famous astronomical discoveries of modern times...

When it is recalled that the discovery of the planet Uranus was made in the year 1781, it is not surprising that the fiftieth anniversary should be celebrated in 1896...

Let it be observed that the facts with which astronomers had to deal in their quest for the unknown planet were simply these: The other planets, Jupiter, Saturn, Mercury, Venus and Mars, had been known to observers of the heavens prior to the discovery of Uranus...

When Herschel had directed attention to this new object Uranus, it was naturally submitted to the test of the laws of gravitation...

As soon as the track of Uranus through the heavens had become determined it was possible to find which of the planets occupied at any particular date, even though that date were antecedent to its discovery...

Le Verrier's calculations having been completed, he not only ascertained the track in which the unknown planet moved and the time when it would be visible to the naked eye...
