France has not been very successful with the lottery to provide funds for her coming exhibition, most of the tickets remaining unsold, and compelling a resort to other measures to raise the money. Brussels has had better luck with a like scheme, but her exhibition is planned on a smaller scale, and its financial needs are moderate. She has sold a million tickets in her lottery at a franc each, providing a fund of $200,000 to begin with, $90,000 of which is to be distributed in prizes among the ticket-holders, drawing to take place next year. England and the United States the law forbids lotteries, but they thrive on the continent, and are looked upon, not only as legitimate instruments to raise money for useful public purposes, but as permissible private speculations with which the state has no call to interfere. France is plastered all over with lotteries of one sort and an other, all under government auspices and guarantees, and they abound on the contiment, the competition between them being quite as sharp as it is in other lines of businegs. Some of the foreign concerns used to do a thriving trade here, but it has been much reduced—in fact, practically extin-guished—by the stringency of our laws against it.

The substance of the negotiations between Russia and Japan is now made public. A treaty has been agreed upon giving to each of the parties such commercial advantages as may have been obtained in their respective territories by other nations. The provisions are similar to those of the treaty egotiated between the United States and Japan. The treaty will go into full effect in four years after the date of final ratifleation, which was August 29, 1895. This treaty is a new confirmation of the ad-vanced position which Japan has achieved for herself among the powers of the earth. Russia is of all the great powers her nearest neighbor, and destined to be, next to the Chinese empire, the largest purchaser and consumer of Japanese goods. This amicable understanding as to future reciprocal trade, however it may arouse the jealousy of other commercial nations, cannot but be regarded a long-headed arrangement on the part of the Japanese. THE THUNDERS OF VERMONT.

GOES AGAINST A BRACE GAME.

Farmer Williams Makes a Bluff and Loses His Money. Samuel Williams, a farmer who came in to see the sights, reported to the police yesterday that he had been robbed of $30 in a saloon on Lower N street.

According to Williams' story, he strolled into the place to get a glass of beer and some of the men in the place induced him to play a game of cards. Shortly after the game started, one of the players offered to bet $30 that he held the best poker hand. Williams says that he took a roll of bills from his pocket and laid them on the table to show the boys that he had money, but distinctly stated that he would not bet or up Williams' money and left the place. Words followed, and Williams says that the bartender offered to give him $10 if he would keep still about the matter. According to the description furnished the police Chief Brennan thinks that the man who got away with Williams' money was Frank Payton, and he is now looking for him. Further, the chief said that it was only a short time ago when a man was robbed in this place, and he now proposed to make this case stick if possible, and break up the gang of card sharps that infests Lower N street

Committee May Have to Settle. Yesterday a local livery stable keeper put in a bill against the city for $8 for two carriages, which were used by the city officials in the street parade July 4. What the council will do in regard to settling the chaim is a question. The committee in charge of the Fourth of July celebration invited the city officials to participate, but at the last moment it was found that the committee had not provided carriages, and the mayor telephoned for the conveyances. The committee was expected to settle the bill, but it seems it has not done so. When the affairs of the celebration were settled, quite a sum of money was left after all bills had been paid; $25 was donated to the hospital, while the balance, about the same was placed in the bank to the amount, credit of the committee, to be used at some future celebration. The committee cannot say that it has no funds, and the chances are that it will be requested to settle for the carriages.

Philadelphia Times: Vermont has spoken, and the most sanguine Bryanite, with a born bias to runbow chasing, will be able to extract small comfort from the returns. The returns as published are compared with the election of 1892, and they tell a uniform story of republican gains and democratic losses. The republican gains and democratic losses. The republican majority runs away up toward the 40,000 figure, and it is so overwhelming as to show that the cheap money heresy has had no effect in Vermont except to make sound money votes. If the cheap money virus hasn't poisoned the citizenship of any other republican state in any greater ratio than in Vermont, Bryan be the worst beaten man that ever ran for the presidency.

Kansas City Star: The Vermont election returns are not as impressive when the mere statement of the republican majority is given as they are when the full vote of each party is stated. In 1892 Harrison re-ceived 27,992 votes and Cleveland 16,325. The republican vote was 68 per cent of the total. This year the complete returns make the republican majority 39,000. The republican ticket received 53,000 votes and the democratic 14,000, so that the republican vote is 80 per cent of the total. Only one vote in five was cast for the democratic ticket. For a state which has no large cities to offset the farmer vote, the results in Vermont suggest that free silver is not as popular with the farmers as the country has been led to believe.
