From the vaults the party ascended to the uppe floors and visited the issue and redemption rooms, where the secretary explained the methods by which the money for the nation passed from the bureau of engraving and printing and the mints into circulation.

The vicerov seemed delighted with everything he saw, and on leaving the building thanked the officials for their courtesy. The presence of the party in the building ex-cited the greatest interest, and everywhere they were followed by a throng of clerks and others who were bent on obtaining a sight of the distinguished Chinaman.

Secretary Carlisle accompanied the party to the bureau of engraving and printing, which was next visited. The sight-seeing was, however, cut short by a downpour of rain. The viceroy was escorted by Secre-tary Carlisle back to the Treasury department, and then the entire retinue returned to the Arlington, which was reached at 11:40 o'clock.
