COUSINS DRAWS A CROWD

Clever Iowa Congressman Talks on Sound Money.

ABLE DISCUSSION OF CAMPAIGN ISSUES

Prominent Men of All Parties Present to Hear the Speech—Tribute to Senator Allen—Remarks in Silver's Behalf.

Congressman Robert G. Cousins, one of Iowa's most brilliant representatives at Washington, demonstrated to an immense audience at the McKinley headquarters last night, that he is able to discuss the finance question in a convincing as well as a humorous manner. He delivered one of the most effective speeches of the campaign. His smooth lip and chin, innocent, apparently, of even the down of early manhood, and his frank boyish face give him an appearance of extreme youth that entitles him to be called the "Boy Orator of Iowa."

Congressman Cousins was introduced by C. M. Hart after the manner that has made Hart more than locally famous, and before the stranger arose to speak he had been made well acquainted with his audience, and every man and woman felt a personal interest in him. He is a slow, deliberate, but very earnest and logical speaker, dropping well rounded sentences that have fallen from his lips. On the stand were seated John N. Baldwin, Judge Reed, Hon. D. C. Bloomer and other prominent Republicans. Cousins lost no time in getting down to the hard facts of his argument, and for an hour and a half he gave the crowd a course of the most convincing and republican convictions and shake the faith of the silverites in their fallacies.

TRIBUTE TO SENATOR ALLEN.

He referred to the extraordinary efforts that have been made by the silverites for the last year to spread their propaganda, and to Senator Allen, whose chief claim to legislative glory will always be in the fact that he stood up to the silverites, and in the fact that he refused to be intimidated by their threats. He criticized the silverite doctrine and showed its incongruity, its fallacies and its dangers, and in the most eloquent and convincing manner he showed the mistake of it would reduce it to absurdity, wherever it based its claims upon the much vaunted "crime of '73." He said if he were a silverite he would not be a man to him with a horse ring-boned and spavined, and he told the man the horse was suffering from something he has never heard of, and that it would be a fair comparison to the ridiculous assumptions and assertions of the silver monometallists who attribute all the ills of the country to the silver question.

He reviewed the entire history of the movement, and showed that the silverite assertion, while proving its fallacy, that there was any secrecy or any crime committed, was entirely unfounded. He said that the silver movement, including Senator Stewart, voted for the law they now denounce so bitterly.

SILVERITES FALSE ASSERTIONS.

For half an hour he devoted his time to describing and comparing the conditions of 1822 and the present time, and 1822 with twenty years ago. There was $15 per capita in 1822, and $24 in 1842. He declared that every claim made by the silver champions today was utterly false. He said that the east had robbed the west of the increase of wealth in the west with the decrease in eastern states, using figures from the census of 1850, as an answer to the charge that the east had robbed the west. Western states had increased in wealth since 1873 from 100 to 700 per cent without an exception, but only the eastern states showed a 20 per cent, while all of the others showed a heavy decrease.

He referred to the eloquence of his eloquence when he declared that the present demagogues who were engaged now in trying to deceive the people by their promises of a return to the silver standard, were appealing to the passions and prejudices for their support, would be found using for their support the same old and tried methods of the Mississippi valley as the land holders and monopolists who were robbing the people by withholding from them the land they were living by farming their broad acres. They would be found arraying some other class against the farmers whom they were robbing, and they would be found arraying the farmers against the capitalists and people of the east.

Among the Justices.

The principal case in Justice Vign's court yesterday was the State against E. T. Thompson. Thompson has been having trouble of late with his neighbors' children. They have been in the habit of going into the yard and helping themselves to whatever they could lay their hands on. He caught one of them and administered a sound thrashing to him. In summing up the case the justice said that the neighbors should have done the duty of an American citizen by bringing the boy to the police station instead of taking it upon himself to set upon and beat the boy, and that he had violated the law to such an extent that a fine of $5 and costs would be needed to settle the difficulty. The bond of appeal was fixed at $50. The justice was released on the case. The State against Hannah Anderson, she was found guilty of assault and battery and a fine of $1 and costs were ordered. The State against Cook's tribunal a number of attorneys spent a good part of the day discussing the laws governing garnishments and their application to the case of the Northwestern railway company. Otto is a married man, and one of his creditors sought to enforce the collection of a debt through garnishment proceedings. The proceedings created a good deal of trouble at both the Council Bluffs and Chicago ends of the line. The reply of the company showed the corporation owed Otto $90. An attachment was immediately issued for this money, and Local Agent Montgomery was in the center of the vortex of anxious thought and angry law.
