AVERAGE NUMBER OF SMALL AFFAIRS

Bracing Weather of Early Autumn Failed to Produce the Social Life that Had Been Anticipated by Many.

During the past week applety has not experienced a revival which in importance amounts to a resurrection. Contrary to expectation, the clear, bracing weather which succeeded the humid horrors of the early part of the month and seemed about to usher in a typical Nebraska fall has not borne immediate fruit in the way of an increased number of social functions. While the overage of small affairs-very pleasant to those participating, but not concerning any great part of the city's population-has been fully maintained, there have not occurred any events which by their conspicuous importance and far reaching influence have even faintly stirred the placid surface of Omaha

The departure of young men and maidens, day evening. September 17, in honor singly, in pairs, or in parties, for seats of learning to the eastward is always a significant feature of the early fall. For a period longer or shorter they are like week. Seventy couples took part in the flowers that bloom in the spring, or the summer, making glad and gay their home postures during the vacation term. And nome pastures during the vacation term. And their disappearance with the passing of the other appurenances of the summer leaves an appreciable vacancy behind. Each spring another installment of these birds of passage comes home to roest. Each September sees a fresh brood issue forth to take the unaccustomed duties and pleasures of a college town. And so they come and go and stay and are made better and stronger by going and fitter to be useful citizens and hearty and honest men and

A somewhat unsual number of weddings and celebrations of golden and silver anniversaries is noticeable in the chronicle of the week's events. The gold and the silver are not precisely in the proportion de-manded by agitators for free coimage, but the numerical balance is on the proper and Inevitable side at any rate. After all, there is no time like the middle fall for marriage. Those who have been wedded at other seasons will hardly endorse so radical a statement, but they will be hard put to justify their opposition. The heat of summer, the chill of January, are draw-backs to the completest felicity in marriage ceremontals. Much, to be sure, might be said in favor of the later spring for this joyous purpose—the young man's fancy, as is well known, beginning with the vernal is well known, beginning with the vernal equinox to turn to thoughts of love. But there is a special fitness about a brown October day when a tang of the first frost is in the air and the painted leaves are strewing the withered grass, for the formal uniting of two hearts whose pulses are inevitably quickened by the invigorating atmosphere. October brings no enervating dews, to airs too hot or cold. It stimulates heart and brain and physical vigor with heart and brain and physical vigor with her spicy breath. It is an ideal month for marrying and giving in marriage.

A local sheet of hebdomadal issue, which devotes its energies largely to the celebration of events in social circles and may there-fore be presumed to speak with unquestioned. fore be presumed to speak with unquestioned authority on points peculiarly within its range has uncompromisingly declared against the further designation of any branch of society as "the smart set." Now, to be sure, the phrase is a distasteful one, although it is difficult to find a reasonable ground for objecting to it. "Set" is a good word in this connection; and "smart," as defined by lexicographers of good standing is found to signify, among other things, "efficient," "rigorous," "brilliant," adjectives which sound very well as applied to society. Nevertheless, the flat having gone forth, there is nothing for it but obedience, and the designation "fashionable circles" is children's party Friday evening in honor. still within reach.

1. Is it not a fact that there is a gold dollar "behind" every silver dollar? In other words, are sliver dollars not redeemother words, are silver dollars not redeemable in gold according to law?

2. Is not the reason that the price of wheat was less in 1894 than in 1891 that we did not export so much in 1891 as we did in 1891, having been driven from the market by Indian, Russian, Australian and South American wheat?

1. Silver dollars are not by law redeemable in gold.

2. Wheat was lew in 1894 owing to competition of full crops here and abroad.

Pile Was Too Small for One Gang, but Another Took Him In.

Another supposed victim of the four confi ience men now at the city jail has cor fessed to his experience. His name is H A special "old people's service" will be Embof and he is a resident of Hebron. He held at the First Methodist Episcopal church this morning. The evening services will be It was on last Tuesday, when Embo met a couple of confidence men while he was walking along the south river bottoms. After gaging him in conversation they offered t et him a most lucrative job if he woul give $50 for it. Emhof was perfectly willing to give that or any other sum if he had but as he was able to find only $7 in h

A few minutes afterward Embof poet ar other pair of strangers and they fleeced bins of his money on the time-worn "padlock trick. Under the threat of arrest Uniber securing money for improvements in the readily enough gave up his money and displant, but just what would be done in this not report the loss until he read accounts of the other similar "con" games that we worked. Embof positively identifies the fe nen under arrest as the parties who worker present condition and needs of the prop- him and will swear to a complaint against
