Probate Court of Lancaster County Gives a Decision of Interest.

LAST HAAS WILL HELD TO BE VALID

Property to Go to the Sister of the Decensed to Do with as the Likes During Her Life.

LINCOLN, Oct. 5 .- (Special.) - Judge Cochran of the county court this merning notified the attorneys and parties interested in the Haas contested will case that the will farm. offered for probate by Mrs. Margaret Little, mister of the testator, was the last will and testament of the deceased, John E. Haas. This means that Mrs. Little had won one of the most hotly contested will cases ever heard in this county. Hass died on June 28 last, leaving two wills, executed a few weeks previous and within a few days of one another. The first one left his sister a life Interest in the estate, and after her death it was to be divided between the children of his three friends, Judge Parker, Frank Garlock and John T. Wells. The last will gave Mrs. Little the estate to do with as she pleased. At her death, if any remained, the children referred to were to have it. The will was contested by the parents of these children, who alleged that the last will was made when the mind of the deceased had been influenced; that he had been sequestered from his friends, and that he was mentally weak when he agned it. These charges were denied by his sister and her friends, and according to the holding of the court the charges were not sus-

In choosing a play of Shakespeare's, and particularly "The Merchant of Venice," for the opening bill of his engagement here. Mr. Richard Mansfield was no doubt influenced by a belief that love for the work of the greatest of all dramatists yet lingered among us, and that many would be drawn by an announcement of the performance of that play, the richest of all in characteriza ion. The event developed no all-pervading esire for either Shakespeare or his works t the not very large attendance may be taken as a measure of Omaba's craving for he classical drama. A magnificent per formance was given, however, scenically and framatically; and the audience, though not a great one, nor very enthusiastic at the suiset attained to a considerable degree of warmth before the entertainment closed. "The Merchant of Venice," as compared with other plays from the hand of the maser, offers an unusual variety of characters Bendolen, the girl who committed suicide at which stand out in strong accentuation. the Ruwe hotel Saturday night, was held at the district courtroom this morning. His lot is cast among those whom he hates. He score to conciliate them, he cannot successfull withstand them. He lends them money, and exacts tribute from them; this is his reopportunity comes when he sees within his grasp an awful vengeance upon one of the most detestable of the hated brood. He comes wildly forth from the house and the maskers make way awfully before him He stands a moment, swaying, with hi knees, and so upon his face, grovelling upon the earth; and the revellers swarm about him with shouts and ribaldry. Neither wil his bearing in the court-room be speedily forgotten-his Oriental squatting upon the floor, and his horrible whetting of the scime the superb gesture of mingled pride and weakness with which he twice wraps hi mantle about him before he staggers from the scene. LIVES TO THANK THE DOCTORS.

Mrs. H. A. West Makes an Ineffectual Attempt to Commit Suicide. Mrs. H. A. West, a boarder at a hotel near Thirteenth and Dodge streets, decided yesterday that she was tired of the ceaseless rebuffs of this cold world and adopted the morphine cure as the best means to an end. The clerk, however, spoiled the program by coming to the woman's rescue, after hear-ing strange noises that floated over the transom, and a doctor was summoned. An hour's persistent work brought her out all right and she is now convinced that life even in Omaha is not half bad. Mrs. West and her husband arrived, according to the especially as the circumstances were known register of the hotel, on September 10. lowa Man Collects Some Experience in a Wine Room. Walter Barron, a farmer from Corty, Shelby county, Ia., arrived in the city last night, and wandered down into the Third ward. While buying a glass of beer in a saloon near Tenth and Capitol avenue, Hattie Jones, a negress, inveigled him into a wine room, and while sitting on his lap, succeeded in getting hold of his pocketbook, containing $10. Upon leaving, Barron discovered his loss, and straightway told his troubles to a detective, who chanced to be standing on the corner. The officer returned with Barron and arrested the woman before she had disposed of the money. The woman attempted to use a wicked-looking stilleto on the officer, but was foiled. She was charged with larceny from the person.

Settling Up State Fair Business. Secretary Robert W. Furnas and C. S. Bassett of the Board of Managers of the State fair are in the city and the other mem State fair are in the city and the other members of the board are expected today. The meeting is for the purpose of settling up the business in connection with the State fair. There is still about $7.000 due from the railroads for admission tickets sold by them and which could not be checked up until now. When this is received it will be devoted to paying up outstanding obligations of the association. That there will not be enough to go round was certain when the fair closed, but after this settlement the board will know just where it stands and board will know just where it stands and make an effort to secure the money to liqui-date all indebtedness.

Degree of Honor Grand Lodge A large portion of the delegates to the Degree of Honor grand lodge, which meets in this city today, have already arrived. There are upwards of 149 of them quartered at one hotel, and other hotels also have some representatives of the order. This will be the first blennial session, and a large amount of important business is to come up before the body which will probably require a great portion of the week to dispose of.
