

LEE IS HAMPERED BY OLNEY

Council General to Cuba Suffers Through Interference from Washington.

SECRETARY OF STATE UPSETS HIS PLANS

Efforts to End the Rebellion, to Protect American and to Ascertain the Status of Cuban Successively Thwarted.

Copyright, 1896, by News Publishing Company. HAVANA, Oct. 12.—(New York.)—When General Lee came to Cuba as consul general he was instructed, first, to offer the friendly intervention of the United States to bring the revolt to a close; second, to visit personally the Cuban headquarters, and, third, to protect the lives and property of American citizens better than had been done before.

Upon his arrival here he succeeded in planning a settlement of the rebellion which met with popular favor. A petition was drawn up and had been signed by more than 500 planters, merchants and politicians, both Cuban and Spanish, when General Lee was called away from Washington.

General Lee prepared to visit the rebel headquarters. Vice Consul Springer had already obtained permission to act as consul general during his absence, and everything was ready for General Lee's start, when Secretary Olney sent word that Dupuy Denoyre, the Spanish consul, had declined to receive the Spanish legation at Santiago.

SELFISHLY SAVES HIMSELF

If Secretary Olney had pressed Spain for a prompt and satisfactory settlement of the Cuban claim, the Cuban government would have compelled Spain to order its officers to respect Americans and see that they were well cared for, but to carry out American claims and to carry out the more dangerous than to carry out the Cuban claims.

General Bernal arrived yesterday from Pinar del Rio province, whither he had been forced to flee by the rebels, attempting to aid Lieutenant Colonel Grenado, who was engaged in a hot fight with the rebels.

STORY OF THE LAST FIGHT

Two hundred men of the Cautabria battalion left Pinar del Rio Saturday, October 2, at 4 a. m., for the mountains of the fort between Rio Guao and San Jose, eight miles north of Pinar del Rio. A force of 200 men of the Cautabria battalion camped that night at Loma Blanca, a small hill overlooking the large Miraflores heights, and situated between the bay and Pinar del Rio with 3,000 infantry, 800 cavalry and two field pieces, meeting the Cautabria forces and firing the battle of Pinar del Rio. The lieutenant colonel, Colonel J. M. de la Cruz, was killed.

KILLING OF A COLONEL

Maceo's killing of the movement and charged for the field piece, Colonel Romero received a bullet in the breast, a second pierced his stomach and a third, Captain Eduardo Quintana followed, but was shot. Lieutenant Roman Rodriguez was shot. Several other officers were killed. Casualty toll of the rebels, but failed, five of them being killed.
