After a Number of Nervous Fluctuations Wheat Closed One Cent Higher. THAT CEREAL WAS FLIGHTY ALL DAY

It Proves the Dullest Day in the Corn Pit that Has Been Seen There for a Month.

CHICAGO, Oct. 26.—After a number of nervous fluctuations over a considerable range the price of December wheat closed today with an advance of 1 cent. The burning of two big local elevators had considerable influence in maintaining prices toward the close. Other markets were extremely dull but steady, corn advancing 1/4c, oats about the same, and provisions from 1/8c to 5c.

Wheat was decidedly nervous throughout the session, and speculators were evasive at sea as to whether it was better to buy or to sell wheat. Weak foreign market and heavy northwest receipts favored lower prices, but the situation of the market was such that at least, each of those factors partially in their influence over a range of about 25 per cent during the two first two hours of the session. The first trade in December was over a simultaneous range in different parts of the pit from 6 3/4c to 7 1/2c.

It was the dullest day in the corn pit that has been seen there for a month. Although the market was not without some nervousness, the firmness of cables was the dominant feature. The market was not without some nervousness, the firmness of cables was the dominant feature. The market was not without some nervousness, the firmness of cables was the dominant feature.

Provisions were as dull as the corn market and about on par with the latter in the matter of their firmness. The market was somewhat better toward the close. The closing was steady at a slight advance. The following were the receipts and shipments today:
