Life was extinct and had been for some time. Dr. Sward identified the clothes forn by Sellers He also located the course of the builet which entered the broast near the left nip ple, passed downward through the lung severing several blood vessels, and lodging against a lower rib, a wound which, the doctor said, must have caused almost instant death. He described Sellers as about six feet in height, weighing 150 pounds and with an

She saw her hus-band for the last time alive about 9 o'clock m. the night before the tracedy. He said he was going to Bancroft and did not know when he would be back. She saw him next dead at the Hiscox house, on the morning of June 2. That morning the Hiscox woman came to her house and told her to come out, as she had omething she wanted to show her. She said she had known the girl, Olive, intimately for over four years. The relations of her husband and the woman first came to her knowledge in April, 1893. At that time Olive was working as a domestic edge of their misdeeds, she told Olive she must leave, but upon their pleading forgiveness and promising not to sin again, she allowed Olive to stay. Their actions after-ward were such that in about three weeks Mrs. Sellers says she insisted that the girl should leave, but again she relented, and asked the girl not to go yet, for if also did Fred would be so ugly that she (the wife) could not live with him. Olive left, how-ever, Mrs. Sellers saw her next at Early, la., where they were brought by the sheriff under arrest for passing themselves off as husband and wife. Mrs. Sellers had caused their arrest upon intercepting a note that Olive had sent to the husband.

MRS. SELLERS IS FORGIVING. Afterward Mrs. Sellers dismissed the case upon renewed promises of both parties that they would quit their relations. At this time it was agreed that Olive should be sent to school at Carroll. At that time Mrs. Sellers was given to understand that Olive would leave and go to where she had a child, of which she claimed Fred was the father. Mrs. Sellers said a few days after-ward she again visited the barn, suspecting the woman had not left. She found her there and the two women came to an understanding that Olive was to be taken away to some place where she was not known and where she could live a different life. Olive also told her that she did not have a child and said if it had not been for Dan Fuller the trouble would never have occurred. Mrs. Sellers said it was agreed that she was to take Olive away and if at any time Olive was in want or sick she would

She did take Olive away and furnished her money to assist her and gave her some new clothing. She next got a letter from Olive dated Weeping Water, Neb., but mailed on the train. Next she was informed by Calvir Hiscox that Olive had been at Lamars, but did not think she was there then and that he thought she was with Sellers. Mrs. Sellers said when her husband re-turned from Shenandoah she remarked to him that he was growing gray and bald, and he replied that if she had some one hanging around her all the time she would get gray and baid, too. She told her husband at that time to go with the other woman if he wanted to; that she would not molest him, but would stay there and care for the children. He told her he did not want to go; that he did not want the Hiscox woman; that he and she could not get along together two weeks

Telegraphing Through Space. The possibility of telegraphing through space has been turned to account in a most effective way for maintaining communication between the mainland and Fastnet light house, on the southwest coast of ireland. Formerly the difficulties of carrying a telegraph cable up an exposed rock, where it was subject to constant chafing, were almost insuperable. The non-continuous system is now used, and is said to work admirably. The cable terminates in the water sixty yards off, and the electric currents sent from the shore find their way through this distance to two bare wires that dip into the sea from the rock.

overshadowed all the snam issues which have long been used by politicians and the money power to blind the people's eyes, and distract their attention from these vital questions affecting the real welfare of the wealth producers.

At last the time has come when the lines of battle are fairly drawn between the laborers of America on the one hand and their implacable enomies—the money kings and their minion—on the other hand. Although a complete victory for the people was not won, in this campaign, yet immense gains have been made. Six millions of American visters have arrayed themselves permanently under the hanner of the principles so long upheld by the Knights of Lahor. At least 2,00,000 more would have done likewise, but for the frightening forces of money and coercion used in this campaign by the party of the plutocracy.

This general assembly should give the most thorough considerations to the question of how best to preserve political advantages already gained for the masses and how we may perfect the organization for victory in the immediate future. The millions of wealth producers are now aroused as they never were aroused before in the history of the nation. Let us seek with all the wisdom we can muster at this general assembly to decide on such a policy as will show the people how to so use their political power that they will become irresistible in their demand for the reform which labor requires.
