Poll Books of the Late Election Full of Minor Inaccuracies.

NOTHING WHICH WILL CHANGE RESULTS

Most Common Error Was the Failure of Officials to Properly Fill Out the Certificate Showing They Were Duly Qualified.

A schedule of the more glaring errors discovered in the poll lists and tally cheets of this county by the cancausing board which has been in session for the past three days brings out (we facts, viz: First, that the slightest error on the part of an election board may form grounds for a contest, and second, that the scarcity of errors is most remarkable when the clerical ability of the majority of the election boards is consildered. During the canvant of the votes County Clerk Redfield kept a record of the errors as they were discovered, and this record will be made a part of the official report of the canvassing board.

While it is not anticipated that the errors in question will affect the result in any care, one protest has already been filed with the county clerk against receiving or counting one of the districts in which errors were discovered, and these same errors are understood to form the basis of the contest to be stood to form the basis of the codiest to be started by Isaac Hascail against the election of Ernest Suht to the city council. The protest referred to was filed by Lew Herrmann, who was candidate for assessor in the First ward. Herrmann enters his protest against the entire returns from the Sixth district of the First ward, charging that the judges and clerks of election did not qualify and that, therefore, no legal election was held in that district. The poll book and tally sheet, which are bound under one cover, were opened by the county clerk when the protest was received, and an examina-tion shows that L. B. Reynolds and R. E. Patrick each qualified as judges of election by signing the official oath printed in the front of the pull list. Both of them subsequently signed the taily sheet as clerks. The record also shows that Reynolds signed the remaining five blank oaths for judges and clerks and his signature in each case is and clerks and his signature in each case is certified to by a different member of the board, it appearing that Reynelds qualified the other members, but each signed in the wrong place. The members of the election board have notified the county clerk that they will furnish an affidavit to the effect that they each and all qualified in a proper manner before opening the polis. Assistant County Attorney Day is of the opinion that the detect will not form a good ground for a contest.

In the Fourth district of the Second ward. as heretofore explained, the tally sheet shows seventy-five more votes for state menators than there are votes on the poli-list, but under the rolling of the county at-torney the canvassing board can do nothing but record the votes as shown by the tally sheets. In the Seventh district of the Second ward the same kind of an error oc-curred, there being one more vote tailled on supremy judge than the poll list showed there were votes.

In the First district of the Third ward none of the judges or clerks certified to the correctness of the poll list, and one judge did not sign the oath of office.

An excess of four votes on congressman was shown by the returns from the First district of the Sixth ward. district of the Sixth ward.

More errors were found in the Third district of the Sixth ward than in any other voting district in the county. In this district the board reported, informally, that when it proceeded to verify the poll list by the number of ballots found in the boxen when the polls were closed it found five more ballots than there were names on the poll list. A search of five hours through the registration books and poll list located these five names, and they were entered on the poll list. Notwithstanding this the returns show that there were twenty-five more votes tailled for the candidates for state treasurer than there were names on the poll list. The returns show also that there was an excess of two votes on attorney general, four on regent of the State university, two on judge of the supreme ourt for four years the supreme court for two years and three

In the Sixth district of the Sixth ward the poll list was not signed by the judges and clerks; in the Eighth district there was an excess of one vote on state auditor, and in the Tenth district there was an excess of ten votes on members of the legislature. In the Sixth district of the Eighth ward there was an excess of nineteen votes in the returns on state treasurer.

In South Omaha the ruling defect was a failure on the part of the members of the slection boards to sign the eaths of office and the returns. In the First district of the First ward the members of the board aid not fill out the oaths or sign them; they also failed to extend, in words, the totals o the votes cast for the several candidates.

In none of the three districts of the Second ward of South Omaha did the Judges and elerks certify to the poil list. In the First listrict none of the board qualified as elec tion officers, and the certificate of the count of the ballots was signed by only two judges In the Second district on and two elecks. of the judges did not qualify.

It was stated that the receiver of the bankrupt institution had been repeatedly requested to allow the depositors to examine the books, but upon every occasion they had met with a refusal. The depositors had absolutely nothing, as yet, to show for the $71,000 which had been deposited in the bank, except their pass books. All those present affixed their names to a resolution, the sense of which was that criminal proceedings be brought at once against the bank officers. A collection was taken up and a committee composed of A. A. Gibson, T. C. Douglas and J. W. Cotton appointed to look after the collection of funds and to push the prosecution.
